"It is a dark, thick night," said he, and I noticed him glance at the sky. "There are a few stars and the promise of a great deal of mist. I see a quiet place at Chalmont; all those within are asleep; not a light is to be seen."

"Blaylow's house, perhaps," I ventured; but he gave no heed.

"Outside in the road there is a man," he went on. "Or perhaps there are two men. However, I am not sure as to the second; but of the first I am positive. He is looking up at the house and wondering just how he shall get in."

"There is perhaps a bell or something of the sort at the front door," I suggested.

But Cravath shook his head, and went on:

"The man knows something of the house. He has been there before. There is a side porch and he scales it; then he forces one of the library windows, climbs in and finds himself standing before a cabinet—a Flemish cabinet of beautiful design."

By this time I had grasped his meaning, and with traces of injury in my voice, I said:

"They scale the porch, I think you mean. And they climb through the library window; also, they stand before the cabinet."

"I beg your pardon," said Cravath. "You see, my clairvoyant powers are somewhat circumscribed. There will be two men, then?"

"There will," said I.

He clapped me upon the back.

"Excellent," spoke he.

Chalmont was no great distance from the city line, and about midnight we arose from a snug place by the roadside and stood staring at the huge bulk of Blaylow's place as it loomed out of the mist. There was not a single window showing out of the night; all was silent.

"To keep such hours is a praiseworthy thing," said Cravath. "People of less regularity would have kept us out in this wet fog for hours."

"Just where is that side porch located?" asked I, in a hurry to get the matter under way, for the mist made me shiver.

He led the way to a gate, through which he passed; then, after crossing a wide stretch of lawn, we halted.

"It's an easy climb to the roof," whispered Cravath, "but that is slated and our shoes will make a clatter. Better take them off, eh?"

We did so, and as I was slinging mine about my neck, I fancied I caught a sound.

"What's that?" said I, startled.

He put his hand over my mouth.

"Hush!" said he, lowly. Then we stood still, our heads bent, listening. "I thought I heard something, too," said Cravath. "But I suppose it was one of these night sounds which one always hears when one listens for them."

In a few moments we had reached the top of the porch; this was rather steep, but we stole along it like cats. I tried a window, and it slid upward noiselessly.

"Luck!" whispered I.

Cravath made no answer, but slipped through, and I followed. As I touched the floor I heard a distinct clicking sound from across the room; then I felt Cravath's hand close warningly upon my arm. Again we stood watching, but, as before, nothing followed.

"We are nervous, that's all," said Cravath at length.

"It's mighty queer," I grumbled, "that we should both be seized by the condition at exactly the same moment and in the same way."

"Hem-m-m!" said he, and I knew from the tone that I had touched upon a point upon which his own mind was not at rest. However, there was no time for delay; we drew the blinds and turned on the lights. Then the Flemish cabinet took our attention. It was a massive, oaken, smoky-looking affair, with dull-brass knobs and many drawers. One after another of these Cravath drew open, but none of them contained the $1000.

"The old man changed his place of deposit," said I, wrathfully. "I wouldn't have a suspicious nature like that for the world."

Cravath stood staring at the cabinet; then, in a musing tone, he said:

"You are wrong, I think; take a look at those locks."

I did so, and then I all but cried out.

"Forced!" said I. Then I inspected them closely. "And a very effective and nicely done job. The man who did it was a perfectly competent—"

There came a sound at the library door; like a flash Cravath threw off the lights; then a revolver shot rang out. With the same impulse we both made for the window, tumbled out upon the slates and leaped to the ground. And as we did so the revolver sounded again; I saw the spiteful spit of fire from its muzzle at the window I had just vacated; and as we raced over the lawn another weapon, off to our left, sounded with equal viciousness. Then another came from the right.

"They must have ordered out the militia," said Cravath as we hurdled the fence, just visible in the mist.

After going fifty yards or more, the hard stones of the road began to hurt our feet, and so we stopped to pull on our shoes.

"The old man," said Cravath, "has either beaten me or been beaten himself."

"The money is gone," said I, laboring with my shoes. "So it's all the same thing. You lose, no matter how it stands."

We had finished and stood up when we heard running feet coming down the road.

"They are still after us," said Cravath. "Look out for the guns."

On and on came the runner; we stood perfectly still, meaning to allow him to pass. But when he arrived almost directly opposite us he halted. For a full minute he stood perfectly still, as though listening. Then, softly, slowly, we heard him moving; and when I felt Cravath's warning touch upon my arm I knew that he was moving toward us.

He had probably arrived within five feet of us, when Cravath and myself, actuated by the same wholesome fear of the spiteful-sounding revolver, leaped upon him. And as he went down under our combined weight, and we were clawing madly about, meaning to disarm him, he cried out in a voice of surrender:

"It's all right, gents! I give up! Don't use the guns on me!"

There was something in the voice that made me strike a match; and though it flickered in the mist and burnt dimly, its light was sufficient to illuminate the countenance of "Gimp" Strause.

"Say, beat," said he, affably. "I took you for some one else."

Cravath sat astride of him, and surveyed him with growing understanding.

"We can say much the same thing," said he. Then, to me he added: "Just run a hand through his pockets."

I did so, and in a moment had produced a thick wad of notes which had a familiar look. A moment spent in running them over proved that I had not been mistaken.

"All right," said I, dazed, but maintaining the front I could.

Cravath arose and the "gun" did likewise. All the time I kept the matches burning.

"That will be about all," said Cravath, and his finger pointed down the road.

"Nothing doing?" asked Strause, as he grinned and shook himself like a dog.

"Well," said Cravath, "we might tender you a vote of thanks. But, on the whole, I think we'd better not."

"Well," said the "gun," "I'm not as tight as you. I'll hand you mine. When you jumps me a minute ago, I thinks it was one of the guys from back there on the job, and expect to be slipped a good fifteen years." He waved his hand and moved away. "Well, so long, gents. Maybe I'll see you again."

And as his footsteps died away, Cravath stretched himself luxuriously. My matches had given out, but I could hear his loud yawn through the darkness.

"We can build as carefully as we may," philosophized he. "But we can never outdo the results which are brought to us by chance."

"Right," agreed I. And then: "All the pictures of Chance that I have ever seen show the form of a female. And I'm willing to go on record here as saying that she is a lady, every inch of her."

AVERAGE MADE BY COWS IN THE PETERBORO DAIRY RECORD CENTRE WAS THE HIGHEST IN CANADA

It will no doubt be a [illegible] of pleasure to the members [illegible] borough Dairy Record C[illegible] that in the month of J[illegible] production of the cow[illegible] was the highest in Cana[illegible] pounds milk and 27.1 pou[illegible]

As in the months of June [illegible] wood Association took the lead with an average production of 928 lbs. milk and 31 pounds fat. The Central Smith Association was a close second with [illegible] lbs. milk and 30.1 lbs. fat being higher than the Norwood Association in milk but slightly lower in fat. To these two Associations belongs the distinction of having the highest average production in Canada for the month of July.

The outlook for profitable dairying in the Peterborough Section is certainly very bright, at the present time as a large number of farmers are availing themselves of the information secured by testing their cows, this Centre at the present time having the largest membership in Canada.

A point which members should not forget is the importance of securing a record for the full milking period, as a record for four or five months is of little value. This is due to the fact that many cows while milking well for a few months are not able to keep up the flow, while other cows which may not have given so much milk at any one time, are able to give more milk for the season as they keep up well to the last.

Prices Going Down.

The report of the Department of Labor on the value of commodities, issued recently, shows that the cost of living gives indications of going down. It is stated that during July the "index number," a barometer of prices, shows a slight drop. This is the first time in months that such a thing has happened. The wholesale index number has fallen from 137 to 135, but it is still nine points above the level of a year ago.

There is a slight falling off in the cost of grains, fruits, vegetables and hay, especially. Hides, metals, boots, shoes, lumber and furniture, on the other hand went up a bit.

In the retail branches, potatoes and sugar declined in prices, while eggs and coal slightly increased. Meats were firm. So far as the average consumer is concerned, therefore, the difference is not material as yet, but the falling off referred to is taken as a hopeful indication.

TIE IN THE TENNIS FINALS

Inter Club Championship for 1912 Remains Undecided

On Saturday afternoon the Golf Club and Bowling Club played off to decide the City Tennis championship. However, as each club won an equal number of setts, the supremacy is still an open question and it is doubtful if it can be settled at all this year, owing to the lateness of the season. The scores were as follows:

Kerr and Henderson, Golf Club, won from Pratt and Dobbie, Bowling Club, 7-5, 6-3; McPherson and McKnight, Bowling Club, won from Langley and Whitby, Golf Club, 8-6, 7-5.

As winner of the Singles championship for ladies, Miss Burnett was presented with the Silver Cup. Mr. Landry, the winner of the gentlemen's singles, having gone to Victoria, B.C., the Cup for this event was referred to, in the speech made by Mr. Cluxton, who also made the presentation to Miss Burnett.

FOOTBALL

All Saints' football team did not materialize for the game with Park street on Saturday, and there was nothing doing. It was decided to give the two remaining games to Park street and Knox, as these two teams play off for the championship next Saturday.

Game of Initials.

A leader is first chosen who begins the game by addressing to any player a remark whose words begin with the initials of that player's name in their proper order or some epithet beginning with those initials. The others, one by one, address the same player in like manner. Whenever the player who is addressed can answer one of the others with a sentence or epithet beginning with the latter's initials before the next player speaks, then all the players must address the one so answered, and so the game goes on.

For instance, if a player's initials are A. E. B. he may be addressed as "an exquisite beauty," "an early bird," "apple eating brother," etc.

As all may not be familiar with every one's initials, it would facilitate the game if each one had his or her initials plainly written and pinned on his shoulder in open sight.

A similar game is known in Germany, where it is called "Namenspiel" (name play).

There was heavy rain throughout the west yesterday.

MADE BUST OF BROCK

WOMAN SCULPTOR TELLS WHAT SHE SOUGHT TO DEPICT.

Statuette Made for the Approaching Centenary of Gallant Soldier's Death Was Taken From a Miniature Eked Out by Descriptions and Portraits Occurring in Some Old Periodicals.

The approaching centenary of the war of 1812 to 1814, in which Sir Isaac Brock, K.B., was the leading figure, has urged me to commemorate this period by modeling a bust of the celebrated general, and furthermore, that it should be wholly a Canadian piece of work in every sense and not an importation, says Miss F. May Simpson, the sculptor, in a recent article in The Toronto Star Weekly. This feeling I have endeavored to carry out, with the result shown in the photographic reproduction on this page.

Conceiving from the written description of what Brock must have been in the early days of his career to this country, I was greatly disappointed in finding that of all the portraits that are in existence of him not two are alike. One, however, that pleased me the most was from an old miniature, one that had been painted for the lady to whom he was engaged. It represents him as a tall soldierly man over six feet in height, of a fair complexion with auburn hair and blue eyes. He is dressed in the full regimentals of the 18th century—an English officer and an aristocrat. His whole appearance is soldier-like and prepossessing. From prints and written description I have endeavored to produce a bust that should in every way be typical of the man, and a portrait of him, and one that should embody his many noble qualities. After many futile efforts I at last succeeded in producing a semblance and something of the character of the man that was the defender of Upper Canada in her time of peril.

BUST OF SIR ISAAC BROCK.

Loyal, honest, untiring, energetic, and great in those qualities which make the commander of an army worthy of the soldier's honor and regard, Brock won for himself a high and solid fame which the verdict of this and future generations will confirm. Surely no greater opportunity will arise—no better time will come than the present—in which to infuse a spirit of Brock among the younger generation. It can scarcely be denied that to the ordinary citizen he is totally unknown, for a most disappointing characteristic of Canadian life is the comparative lack of portraiture of men of the past who helped to build up Canada. These should line the walls of our Canadian educational institutions, which at present are sadly deficient in this particular. Also it will be noted the almost total absence of sculptured work in our schools and libraries. Let Canada look up, and in this year of 1912 commemorate the life of this great defender of our country, for not only was he a man, but a friend and teacher. We Canadians are a commercial people, and with us sculpture is but little understood in the Canada of to-day, for it is yet early, but it is surely and shortly growing, for as the country grows more educated and richer, a better understanding may be given the fine arts. What will fire the imagination of the youth of to-day more than to see prominence given to the men of the past, and who can hold a stronger claim on the Canadian of to-day than the hero and defender of Upper Canada, Sir Isaac Brock.

In Command of the Fleet.

Irishmen are even more ubiquitous than Scotsmen, and when the King reviewed his fleet at Weymouth it was quite in the nature of things to find an Irishman in command, in the person of Vice-Admiral Sir George Callaghan.

This bluff seaman has to thank Mr. Winston Churchill and his new broom for finding himself in such an honorable position. A little over three years ago Sir George Callaghan was only second in command of the Mediterranean fleet numbering six battleships. But he succeeded in catching the eye of Mr. Churchill, and was promoted to the head of the Home fleet as successor of Sir Francis Bridgeman. Instead of six battleships he now controls fifty-three, as well as numerous subsidiary vessels.

Back to the Land.

In England a decided impetus has been given to the "back-to-the-country" movement by the increased cost of living in the large cities and the cheapening of the traveling facilities. Residences from thirty to fifty miles from London are in greater demand than ever.

TY COBB WANTS $15,000 A YEAR

This is a story of Tyrus Raymond Cobb, frequently billed as the greatest baseball player ever produced and always referred to as the most advertised player in the business.

Frank Navin, owner of the Detroit Tigers, the man who has become rich through this same advertising, appears in a minor role.

Cobb's 3-year contract with the Detroit club expires at the end of this season. Strange as it may seem, Cobb has a pretty good idea of his value to a ball club, of his work as a player and his ability to make the turnstiles click faster than ever before.

For the last three years Cobb has been playing for a salary reliably reported to be $9,000, probably the highest stipend paid to any mere player. Cobb knows that at that price he is dirt cheap. Navin of course, knows the same thing.

Cobb hasn't said what his salary will be next year, but you can go broke that the figures in the contract will be very nearly what Cobb wants.

He has asked a few of his intimate friends if they thought that $15,000 would be enough for one year's salary. That furnishes a pretty good line on what Cobb will ask for next year.

And he will get it, too. The Detroit team is now the best drawing card on the road that there is in baseball.

Beg pardon! Cobb is the best drawing card, for without the Georgian the Tigers would be only a mediocre attraction.

In every city in the American league thousands of fans go to see, not the Tigers play, but the Tiger play, that Tiger being none other than Cobb.

The statement that Cobb pulls off something startling in every game would be a trifle extravagant, but you can never tell when he will score from first on an infield hit, steal second, third and home in quick succession, or pull off a wonderful catch in the outfield.

All of these things of course make Cobb a drawing card. But they aren't the only things. On and off the ball field, Cobb's artistic temperament is always in evidence.

Fans in every town want to see the player who became peeved because a mere hotel clerk had the audacity to refuse to change his room when Cobb demanded a switch.

They want to see the man who had the temerity to climb into the stands in New York and pummel a rooter who was annoying him.

They all want to see the man who started the baseball strike, which gave baseball moguls a lot to think about and eventually led to the formation of the players' union.

None of these fans will overlook the opportunity of seeing the man who was stabbed by Detroit thugs, and then, so they say, made these same thugs get down on their knees when they discovered his identity.

There is only one Cobb. Probably there never will be another. He probably has more enemies than any other man in baseball.

His teammates detest him; players on other teams hate him, but all are forced to admit that as a ball player he is in a class by himself.

In view of all these things Mr. Cobb will of course, tell Mr. Navin what he expects in the way of salary. Mr. Navin will probably demur but in the end he will pay Cobb just what he asks.

CARRIED SICK MAN OVER FIFTY MILES

Teacher in Maine Proved Faithful to a Friend

New York, Sept. 24.—For fifty-three miles afoot through the Maine woods, W. S. Cowing, a teacher, carried on his back a companion, Charles Claxton, jr., who was helpless from an attack of pneumonia, according to Cowing's description of their experiences as the two men passed through this city yesterday on the way to their homes in Philadelphia.

For some time after Cowing and Claxton, near starvation, reached the little French-Canadian village of St. Pomphile, Quebec, and traveled thence by rail to Bangor, where Claxton, son of a physician in Philadelphia, lay near death in a Bangor hospital.

S. A. Appointment Criticized.

London, Sept. 24.—(C.A.P. Cable)—Col. Clement Jacobs, for seventeen years the director of Salvation Army emigration to Canada, has been appointed a director of the Boxted colony of the Salvation Army enterprise. The appointment is adversely criticized on the ground that Mr. Jacobs lacks the proper knowledge of agricultural matters.

Pensacola, Fla., Sept. 24.—The package containing $55,000 in currency which was mysteriously extracted from an express shipment from the First National Bank here to the Louisville and Nashville pay car at Flomaton, Fla., was found at the rear of the bank by the negro janitor of the building.

WHAT CANADA MOST NEEDS

President Curry Says it is Not Wider Markets But Better Transportation Faculties

Special To The Review.

Ottawa, Sept. 24—President Curry of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association in his annual address today, declared that what was the greatest need of Canada was not wider markets, but adequate transportation facilities to enable them to supply the home market. He declared in favor of immediate action on the navy question and against reciprocity. He also deprecated the connection of Canadian Labor Unions with those of the United States and suggested that a little more discernment in the treatment of men would go far towards relieving the shortage of labor which prevented manufacturers from doing the business they should.

Laurier's Ontario Tour.

Ottawa, Sept. 24.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier, back from his tour of Northern Ontario, will spend this week in Ottawa, starting out again next week on a tour of the older parts of the province, beginning at Cornwall on Monday.

The "Old Chief" was at his office in the Parliament Buildings yesterday conferring with some of his lieutenants in regard to party organization, etc.

GRAIN GROWERS' ORGAN SAYS BLOCKADE IS INEVITABLE

Winnipeg, Sept. 24.—Under the caption of "A Grain Block Unavoidable," The Grain Growers' Guide will say to-day:

"All signs point to a congestion in the movement of grain this fall far worse than that of last fall and winter—bad as it was. The exceptional rainfall during the harvest has delayed cutting as well as threshing. The weather last fall was unfavorable and the crop movement was greatly delayed. But the grain at this time last year was moving in treble the volume it is at the present time, and this season's crop is considerably in excess of the 1911 crop.

During the two weeks ended September 21 there were only 1,296 cars of western spring wheat passed inspection, as against 4,482 for the same weeks last year. The continued rain of last week which visited all three provinces delayed threshing still more and the crop movement will probably be from ten days to two weeks later than last year.

"With these facts in hand it is impegative that every effort be put forth to meet these most exceptional conditions. The railways will not be able to handle the grain that is offered them. There is not enough elevator capacity to accommodate the immense quantity of grain that cannot reach the lake front before the close of navigation.

"Since the doors to the southern market are closed and locked the best remedy in sight is to have through railway rates to the south. These through rates to the south were in force for a time last winter and afforded a great deal of relief. But they were not put into effect soon enough. It is the plain duty of the Dominion Government and the three transcontinental railways to make arrangements at once with the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington by which the southern route may be thrown open early."

PREMIER BORDEN HAD QUIET TALK WITH SUFFRAGETTES

Told Them That the Franchise Question Was a Matter That Belongs to the Provincial Legislatures

Toronto, Sept. 24— When Premier Borden reached the city yesterday, he was waited upon by a deputation of suffragettes who asked him if it would not be possible for him to grant the franchise to Canadian women to be exercised in Federal elections.

Under the present Dominion Franchise law, Mr. Borden explained to the deputation, the matter was entirely of Provincial jurisdiction. The Federal Parliament has adopted for Dominion elections the electoral lists prepared under authority of the Provincial Legislatures. "If any steps are taken by the Provincial Parliaments to extend the franchise to women, all persons entitled to vote at Provincial elections may also participate in Federal voting. In so far the question is one for the consideration of the various Provincial authorities.

"But," said the Premier, amid expectant silence, "I don't want you to think that the Dominion Parliament in unable to deal with the matter. It has power to repeal the present Franchise Law and discontinue the policy of adopting Provincial electoral lists and have lists prepared to be used exclusively for Federal elections."

"I could not give you any assurance," he cautioned, evidently noting a premature expression of triumph in the countenances of his suffragist audience, "on that matter, before consulting my colleagues. The question has never been considered. Naturally it would require careful consideration. The whole subject with which your suggestions are concerned would come before the Government if we decided that a new Federal electoral list should be prepared as a substitute, so far as use in Federal elections is concerned, for the Provincial lists. Just how soon such action may be considered, I cannot say. I am very happy, however," he continued, with an engaging smile, "to have this document which you have been good enough to hand me, as a means of information and suggestion when the question does come up for consideration. If there are any other pamphlets prepared by your society relating to the matter, I should be happy to have you send copies to me and to my colleagues."

PREMIER BORDEN EXPOUNDED HIS CREED AT TORONTO BANQUET

Canada's Needs Will Not Be Forgotten, But the Call of the Empire at Present is Urgent—Over 7,000 Were Present

Toronto, Sept. 24.—Enthusiasm and more enthusiasm on the patriotic and truly Canadian and British side of citizenship had full rein in the magnificent new Arena last night when Premier Borden was tendered a non-partisan reception and banquet by the Board of Trade. Fifteen hundred guests added to the ordinary seating capacity of the Arena constituted an audience which may easily have exceeded 7,000. The decorations were simple, but ample. The great girders were pearled with electric lights and a huge crown gemmed with colored lights was suspended from the centre of the roof. The proceedings were prompt, and G. T. Somers, president of the Board of Trade, who was in the chair, was admirable in the position, and his address struck a pleasant note.

It fell to Sir James Whitney to open the speech-making, which he did in proposing Mr. Borden's health. Sir James moved off like a stately three-decker and fired double-shotted salutes to the glory of the Empire.

"We have met here to-night to do honor to our own Prime Minister," declared Sir James Whitney, when proposing the health of Mr. Borden, "under the auspices of one of the most important commercial organizations of Canada.

"When the Prime Minister went to Great Britain, conditions in England were in a critical state," said Sir James. "The political atmosphere was charged with high explosives, which called for the greatest diplomacy.

"Our distinguished Prime Minister received a most royal welcome, and what he said and did are now matters of history, and will be written on the future pages of history. He did his duty so remarkably well, and conducted himself with such rare dignity, prudence and skill. So much so, that Sir George Reid of Australia said that he elicited the whole hearted admiration of all classes in Great Britain.

"He also kept himself free from party entanglements, to which the Government leader is so apt to come in contact. He comes back with a knowledge of conditions, and a solution, though not complete, they will be supplemented in time to the satisfaction of all Canadians."

It was only after a prolonged burst of cheering, and table pounding, and applauding that made the wide arena ring, that Mr. Borden was able to speak. Then he spoke, dealing chiefly with problems of country and Empire and only alluding long enough to the Government's naval policy to say that there would be no announcement until Parliament met.

Mr. Borden evoked a burst of applause when he gave as his creed, "that in so far as I have seen my duty I have endeavored to do it; and that I hope will be course through all my life.

"It has been born in upon me that no matter how great the heritage of Canada the heritage of Empire is infinitely greater. I come back to this country more than ever inspired with the ability of the statesmen of the Motherland to work out those problems that will confront the Empire.

"I was told that all through Europe the visit of the Canadian Ministers was receiving as much attention as in the British Isles.

"The maintenance of the Empire depends upon the maintenance of a sure path across every ocean," and continuing upon this subject, Mr. Borden suddenly referred to the Government's policy regarding Imperial defence, but those that thought he might dilate fully on the naval policy were disappointed. He went on:

"It is not for me to make any announcement to you for although an audience like this is a great temptation to a speaker to be indiscreet, I will stand by the rules of the constitition. And I must delay any announcement until the Governor-General calls us together at Ottawa and permits us to deliberate on matters of state."

After alluding to Canada's growth and the welding together of scattered communities by Sir John Macdonald, Premier Borden, and great applause met his words, said, "that God grant that our relations with our neighbors to the south will always be as friendly as they are to-day.

"Our great inland waterways and our railways should be supplemented by great highways. I hope it will be the aim of the Provincial and Federal Governments to lend such aid that will enable the development of roads that will be the equal of any in Europe, and of those being built in the country to the south. Not that we will divert from any of our policies of the past."

Coming back to his mission to the Mother Country, Mr. Borden declared: "I told them there that Canadians would not shirk their responsibilities when the needs of Empire arose, but Canada would not be an adjunct, but would demand to be allowed to assist. When peace or war are to be declared, this country, in its place in the Empire, would demand and ought to have, some corresponding voice in the discussions of the issues that mean peace or war."

N. W. Rowell, leader of the Ontario Opposition, who proposed the toast of the Canadian Parliament, paid tribute to Premier Borden as the most influential man in the present administration. "And, although I am not always possessed of the same sentiment and opinions as Sir James Whitney, it affords me great pleasure to be able to concur with him on this occasion," he declared.

When dwelling upon the gradual growth of governmental administration in the country, the Opposition leader declared that Canada was no longer a colony, but a self-governing portion of the British Empire. He referred to the words of Balfour, who said, when speaking of Canada: "It is one of a coalition, not a colony dependent, but a free, self-governing community, which is an integral part of the Empire." It is the business of every loyal Canadian to help to maintain the unity of that Empire, consistent with the free, self-governing principles of these oversea dominions, said Mr. Rowell.

Other speakers were Hon. W. T. White, Hon. A. E. Kemp, Hon. Mr. Pelletier and Hon. Geo. E. Foster.

OFFICER DUNCAN IS NOW ON TRIAL

How Information Was Obtained by Reporters in Farmers' Bank Case.

Toronto, Sept. 23—The investigation by the city police commissioners as to the alleged laxity of Inspector of Detectives Walter Duncan in handling the papers of the Farmers Bank case promises to be much more far-reaching than was originally supposed. Evidence was taken at the initial sitting yesterday which went to show that there had been more or less general dissatisfaction and lack of confidence on the force itself with Inspector Duncan's handling of police matters.

Certain officers went so far as to say that the inspector's veracity was frequently called in question on the force, and that he had more than once endeavored to shift blame for alleged indiscretions of his own to other members of the force. A number of newspaper men were called to testify that the inspector had given them access to the papers in question, while the trend of all the evidence was to the effect that a friendly understanding existed between the inspector and Percy Haverson, a reporter on The World, through which the latter was accorded privileges denied to other newspaper men. The hearing resumes to-day.

BULGARIA WANTS WAR WITH TURKEY

Military Party Seems Likely to Gain the Upper Hand

St. Petersburg, Sept. 24.—An investigation of conditions in Bulgaria discloses unanimity of sentiment that that country is on the eve of a long-cherished war against Turkey. Unless the conferences which the Russian Foreign Minister, M. Sazanoff, will have in London with British statesmen are fruitful for Macedonia, the war party is likely to gain the upper hand. The army is already taking papers which have been issued enumerating recent concessions made to the Albanians and the extension of similar reforms to other provinces make the unusual admission that these reforms are the result of advice tendered by the ambassadors here, and of conversations between the Ottoman ambassadors abroad and the Foreign Ministers of the respective countries, notably Russia.

If all epitaphs had to be truthful it would be better to leave some tombstones blank.

UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IS DEMANDED IN BELGIUM

Half a Million Socialists Will Strike Unless the Government Extends the Franchise to Women

Brussels, Sept. 24.—A great general strike is projected by the Socialists of Belgium in support of a universal suffrage amendment to the constitution. Hostilities against the Government which has resolutely set its face against the desired legislation, will begin in November. Half a million workers, it is calculated will be involved in the strike, which, it is proposed shall last six weeks at a cost to their funds estimated at ten millions of dollars.

The railways, the postal and telephone services, mines, docks, arsenals, factories and workshops of all kinds are to be involved in what its promoters contend will be a bloodless campaign. Women seem as earnest as the men in the propaganda, which reaches throughout Belgium. Promises of substantial financial support have been received, the committee officials aver, from the United States, France, England, Germany, Sweden and elsewhere, and arrangements have been completed, according to the same authority, to send forty thousand children to temporary homes in the north of France on the declaration of the strike.

The thoroughness of the Socialist leaders who are engineering this movement is in evidence on all sides. All extra work in the mines has been strictly avoided so that there shall be no accumulation of coal stocks against the evil day. Similar action has been taken in factories and workers are limiting the output strictly to the quantities necessary to meet requirements from day to day. Any attempt to depart from this rule is prevented by the workmen. In the homes of the workers the strictest economies are being observed so that funds may be available when the weekly wages cease to come in and the men and women are saving up their money as though for their annual holiday.

In spite of the announced desire of the committee that the peace shall be in no way disturbed during the strike, such vast numbers of revolvers have found their way into the hands of workmen that the Government has issued special instructions to burgomasters, police and gendarmes to round up all arms.

MR. BORDEN CONFIDENT

Premier Borden has faith in the people. He is not afraid to appeal to the electors of Canada on any question in which the welfare and integrity of the Empire is involved. At the Montreal banquet he stated clearly that if England makes it known that immediate aid is required for naval defence he will appeal to Parliament, and if that aid is not forthcoming he will go directly to the country and abide by the verdict of the voters.

It is not at all likely that it will be necessary for the premier to resort to this course. He has behind him in Parliament a loyal and enthusiastic majority that will sustain him without a doubt in the statesmanlike course which he has adopted on the all-important questions of the day. But if it should be found necessary to go to the country the people who one short year ago declared so emphatically for a united empire can be relied upon to repeat that verdict more forcibly than ever.

THE PRICE OF OATS

When Sir Wilfrid Laurier visits Peterboro next week he may be given an object lesson bearing on his pet theory of wider market for the Canadian farmer. Perhaps, after all it may be possible to convince him that the farmer has the best market in the world.

There is a local firm that handles large quantities of oats and the firm has recently found it necessary to go to the United States for supplies because that variety of grain is so much cheaper there than in Canada. The firm in question is obliged to do this in order to take care of its foreign trade. This condition of affairs does little to bear out the contention of Sir Wilfrid and his party that a Canadian farmer has need of wider markets for his produce.

This cry of wider markets, or reciprocity, under another name, is a fallacy, while the supply is not equal to the demand in nearly all the products of the farm. It has been shown time and again that the price for wheat is higher in this country than in any of the milling centres of the United States. What is true in the case of wheat and oats is true of nearly everything else that the farmer raises.

However, we must all be prepared to listen to the same line of argument when Sir Wilfrid addresses the people of Peterborough in the Brock street rink next week.

FARMERS AND THE BANKS

The Globe has a timely article on the farmer and the banks, in which it says:

"Why must the Western farmer rush his grain to market in such a hurry every season? For two reasons. In the first place, because as a general thing he has no adequate storage accommodation, and in the second place, even if he had the best of fireproof and vermin-proof storage for his grain he could not raise money on it. The Bank Act gives no authority to lend money to the farmer on the security of his crops, so the Western grain grower might have thousands of dollars worth of grain in absolutely safe storage bins on his farm without being able to obtain a loan of a dollar upon it."

Attention is called to the fact that the banks will lend money on the grain just as soon as it reaches the elevator and the Globe calls for an amendment to the Banking Act, in order to give the farmer a chance to raise money on his wheat if he desires to withhold it from market for a time.

This is not the only grievance that the farmers of this country have against the banks. In Ontario all the ready money in the rural communities is gathered in by the branch banks (which are to be found these days in every town and village) and are diverted to the money centers and the large financial enterprises of the country. When a farmer wishes to negotiate a small loan for the purpose of extending his business or to meet a pressing obligation the banks refuse to accommodate him in a majority of cases no matter what he has to offer in the way of security.

It was not always thus. Before the days of the branch bank the rich farmer in a community was the banker for his neighbor. He loaned money directly to his fellow farmer, for long or short periods, on mortgages or notes, and every one prospered. If the borrower was not ready to meet his obligation on the day specified there was no trouble. The time was extended and the payment of interest continued. The old time farmer bank is now an institution of the long ago and the more enterprising dwellers in the rural communities grieve over its passing.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Fair criticism cannot be construed as abuse even according to Webster's dictionary. No Canadian paper has abused Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the statement of an ever-sensitive local contemporary to the contrary notwithstanding, and what is more no paper could find justification for such a course. Throughout his long public career the veteran Liberal chieftain has always been regarded as a man of lofty ideal, honest in his every purpose, and one upon whom the slightest shadow of suspicion of wilful wrong doing has never fallen.

Now that Webster's dictionary has been branded as an etymological monstrosity the status of any hitherto standard publication can no longer be regarded as safe.

In spite of the pessimistic forecast, that says that the Panama Canal will never be opened for traffic, we will still believe that the work will be completed and the great waterway continue to be a bone of contention among the nations of the earth.

Sir Edward Carson says the men of Ulster have never been conquered, that they will fight home rule to the last ditch. Seeing that the other side apparently possess the same spirit the outlook for harmony is certainly dark.

If the suffragettes really do bombard the Dublin prison to secure the release of Miss Mills, that move will constitute a riot rather worth while.

Now President Taft's political enemies are pleading his religious principles as one reason why he should be defeated. Only four years ago it was held that he didn't have any because he attends a Unitarian church.

AN ENGLISH VIEW.

London Paper Recounts the Story of the Canadian Pacific.

The world possesses no parallel to the wonders of the Canadian Pacific Railway. It is the largest private landowner in the Empire. Under Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, the line has grown until it has over ten thousand miles of railway, and controls over five thousand more in the United States. At Winnipeg the Canadian Pacific has the world's largest railway sidings—120 miles of track.

It has over 80,000 miles of telegraphs, a thousand elevators, a series of magnificent hotels between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, and it controls a fleet of seventy-two steamships of twenty different types. Twelve thousand men are required as crews and shore staffs to cater for its passenger and transportation activities. The total distance traveled by these ships on their ordinary schedule per year equals fifty-seven times the circumference of the earth. Placed in a single line—but there, the statistics of this company are so colossal that the brain is bewildered.

Amazing as these statistics are, they are no guide to the romance which is woven into the construction of every mile of this great railroad. Its whole record is one of apparently insurmountable obstacles overcome. The line was "a gigantic gamble," but its triumph is due to the persistency and determination of Van Horne and Shaughnessy to make it "go"!

The story of how succeeding Conservative and Radical Governments in turn facilitated and then obstructed the building of the road; how the treacherous "muskegs" (large swamps that looked like safe soil, but required millions of tons of earth to fill up before trains could run over them) were negotiated; how the unknown regions of the Rockies were blasted, mighty rivers bridged, and glaciers conquered; how millions of dollars had to be repeatedly found to carry on this tremendous work, in the hope that it might some day return—these are merely some of the "heads" of the chapters of the amazing story of the construction of the railway in every paragraph of which Sir Thomas would be found to have played a Titanic part.

One fact may be adumbrated in order to convey some idea of the gigantic effects upon the Dominion of Sir Thomas' life's work. When, on November 7, 1885, Lord Strathcona drove in the last spike of the Canadian Pacific Railway at Craigellachie, the site of the city of Vancouver was an almost untrodden forest.

Lord Strathcona was even then a white-haired man, but so marvellous is the rush that follows the rail that his lordship has lived to see Vancouver a great city with a population of 100,000, owning a magnificent land-locked, mountain-sheltered harbor, whose ships are found in all the great ports of the world.

The Canadian Pacific Railway has made Canada a nation. Our own country has no parallel to the marvellous results which have sprung from the work of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy. This England of ours already had an overcrowded population when railways began, and with their advent every town in the country waited anxiously to be linked up for the facilitation of its commerce. The commerce and the passengers were ready for the trains as soon as they ran. But in Canada the Canadian Pacific Railway laid its track across thousands of miles of almost untracked solitudes, where human life was all but unknown. It had to make its own commerce and provide its own passengers—and it has got them!

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy found himself at the top of the Canadian Pacific Railway in 1900, and the following year he was knighted as the reward of his splendid work of Empire.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Sept. 23.—Business in Manitoba spring wheat over the cable was dull, as the prices were one cent to two cents out of line, but the demand for Duluth wheat is fairly good and a steady trade is being worked. The condition of the market for oats is unchanged, prices being strong and supplies limited. A fair business is doing in Manitoba barley over the cable. The local and country demand for old crop spring wheat flour is increasing, and the market is more active at steady prices. Millfeed is scarce and firm, with a good demand. Butter is stronger, and prices are tending upward. Cheese is fairly active and firmer. Exports for week, 64,564 boxes, against 77,322 last year. Demand for eggs good. Dressed hogs advanced 75c to 80c.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Sept. 23.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ended Sept. 21 were 1760 cattle, 3100 sheep and lambs, 2900 hogs and 590 calves, while the supply on the market this morning for sale amounted to 1140 cattle, 2900 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 300 calves.

A firmer feeling prevailed in the market for really choice steers, owing to the continued scarcity of such, but the offerings of all other grades were ample to fill the requirements and prices ruled steady. The quality of the stock coming forward is far from being up to the mark, owing to the fact that farmers thruout the country are disposing of all their young cattle on account of the high prices ruling for feed. The gathering of buyers was fairly large, and, as they all wanted some beef, the demand was good and an active trade was done. A few choice steers sold as high as $7 to $7.25, while full loads of good cattle brought from $6 to $6.50 per 100 pounds.

An active trade continues to be done in lambs, owing to the fact that butchers and packers are now putting them away for their winter requirements, but, as supplies are coming forward freely, the tone of the market was easier than a week ago, and prices ruled 25c per 100 pounds lower, with sales of Quebec stock at $6.25 to $6.75, and Ontario at $6 to $6.25 per 100 pounds. There was also a weaker feeling in the market for sheep, and prices declined 25c to 50c per 100 pounds. The demand for calves was good at firm prices.

The strong feeling which has characterized the hog market for some time now still continues to be the main feature of the trade, and prices since this day week have advanced 20c to 25c per 100 pounds, owing to the small supply. Indications are that unless receipts increase in the near future values will go still higher. Selected lots sold at $9 to $9.10 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $6.75 to $7.55; do., medium, $5 to $6; do., common, $4 to $4.75; canners, $3.75 to $4; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $5.25 to $5.50; do., medium, $4.75 to $5; do., bulls, $3.50 to $4.50; milkers, choice, each, $60 to $70; do., common and medium, each, $40 to $50; springers, $30 to $35.

Sheep, ewes, $3.75; bucks and culls, $3.25 to $3.50. Lambs, $5.25 to $6.25.

Hogs, f.o.b., $9 to $9.10.

Calves, $5 to $12.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—Cattle—Receipts, 23,000; market steady. Beeves, $5.85 to $11; Texas steers, $4.60 to $6.25; western steers, $5.90 to $9.30; stockers and feeders, $4.30 to $7.70; cows and heifers, $2.90 to $8; calves, $8 to $11.

Hogs—Receipts, 25,000; market lost early advance; lights, $8.35 to $9.10; mixed, $8.35 to $8.85; heavy, $7.90 to $8.85; rough, $7.90 to $8.20; pigs, $5 to $8; bulk of sales, $8.35 to $8.75.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 52,000; market steady; native, $3.60 to $4.50; western, $3.60 to $4.60; yearlings, $4.75 to $5.50; Lambs, native, $4.75 to $7.10; western, $5 to $7.40.

HAPPY THOUGHT

Why Bread is Better Baked in Some Ranges Than in Others

It is all a matter of the way the heat gets into the oven.

Some stoves have ovens that heat easily and quickly and remain very hot.

Others have ovens that require a wasteful amount of fire in the fire-box before baking heat is reached.

These are the two extremes. For some things each type has advantages. But for all your requirements neither is really satisfactory.

"Happy Thought" Ranges give you the heat in the oven that exactly corresponds with the fire in the firebox. So a little fire means a light heat and a big fire means a perfect hot-blast in the oven.

In baking bread, this feature enables you to secure the benefit of every ounce of heat—to make every lump of coal pay for itself—to continue the heat steadily for as long as you wish in order to have the bread baked uniformly all the way through.

More than a Quarter Million Canadian women use the "Happy Thought" every day.

CHAPTER VIII.

LOCAL COLOR.

AT sunset a small ketch fanned in to anchorage, and a little later the skipper came ashore. He was a soft spoken, gentle voiced young fellow of twenty, but he won Joan's admiration in advance when Sheldon told her that he ran the ketch all alone with a black crew from Malaita. And romance lured and beckoned before Joan's eyes when she learned he was Christian Young, a Norfolk islander, but a direct descendant of John Young, one of the original Bounty mutineers. The blended Tahitian and English blood showed in his [illegible] and tawny skin, but the English hardness seemed to have disappeared. Yet the hardness was there, and it was what enabled him to run his ketch single handed and to wring a livelihood out of the fighting Solomons.

Joan's unexpected presence embarrassed him until she herself put him out of his pain by a frank, comradely manner that offended Sheldon's sense of the fitness of things feminine. News from the world Young had not, but he was filled with news of the Solomons. Fifteen boys had stolen rifles and run away into the bush from Lunga plantation, which was farther east on the Guadalcanar coast. And from the bush they had sent word that they were coming back to wipe out the three white men in charge, while two of the three white men, in turn, were hunting them through the bush. There was a strong possibility, Young volunteered, that if they were not caught, they might circle around and tap the coast at Berande in order to steal or capture a whaleboat.

"I forgot to tell you that your trader at Ugi has been 'muddled,'" he said to Sheldon. "Five big canoes came down from Port Adams. They landed in the night time and caught Oscar asleep. What they didn't steal they burned. The Flibberty Gibbet got the news at Mboli pass and ran down to Ugi. I was at Mboli when the news came."

"I think I'll have to abandon Ugi," Sheldon remarked.

"It's the second trader you've lost there in a year," Young concurred. "To make it safe, there ought to be two white men at least. I've got a dog for you. Tommy Jones sent it up from Neal island. He said he'd promised it to you. It's a first class nigger chaser. Hadn't been on board two minutes when he had my whole boat's crew in the rigging. Tommy calls him Satan. Jack Henley was killed at Marovo lagoon two months ago. The news just came down on the Apostle."

"Where is Marovo lagoon?" Joan asked.

"His own house boys did it," Young went on; "but they were put up to it by the Marovo natives. His Santa Cruz boat's crew escaped in the whaleboat to Choiseul, and Mather, in the Lily, sailed over to Marovo. He burned a village and got Henley's head back. He found it in one of the houses where the niggers had it drying. And that's all the news I've got, except that there's a lot of new Lee-Enfields loose on the eastern end of Ysabel. Nobody knows how the natives got them. The government ought to investigate. Ah—oh, yes—a war vessel's in the group, the Cambrian. She burned three villages at Bina—on account of the Minota, you know—and shelled the bush. Then she went to Sio to straighten out things there."

The conversation became general, and just before Young left to go on board Joan asked:

His large, almost girlish eyes rested on her for a moment before he replied, and then it was in the softest and gentlest of voices.

"Oh, I get along pretty well with them. Of course, there is a bit of trouble once in awhile, but that must be expected. You must never let them think you are afraid. I've been afraid plenty of times, but they never knew it."

"You would think he wouldn't strike a mosquito that was biting him," Sheldon said when Young had gone on board. "All the Norfolk islanders that have descended from the Bounty crowd are that way. But look at Young. Only three years ago, when he first got the Minerva, he was lying in Suu, on Malaita. There are a lot of returned Queenslanders there—a tough crowd. They planned to get his head. The son of their chief, old One Eyed Billy, had recruited on Lunga and died of dysentery. That meant that a white man's head was owing to Suu—any white man, it didn't matter who, so long as they got the head. And Young was only a lad and they made sure to get his easily. They decoyed his whaleboat ashore with a promise of recruits and killed all hands. At the same instant the Suu gang that was on board the Minerva jumped Young. He was just preparing a dynamite stick for fish, and he lighted it and tossed it in among them. One can't get him to talk about it, but the fuse was short, the survivors leaped overboard, while he slipped his anchor and got away. They've got 100 fathoms of shell money on his head now, which is worth £100. Yet he goes into Suu regularly. He was there a short time ago, returning thirty boys from Cape Marsh—that's the Fulcrum Brothers' plantation."

"At any rate, his news tonight has given me a better insight into the life down here," Joan said. "And it is colonial life, to say the least. The Solomons ought to be painted red on the charts—and yellow, too, for the diseases."

"The Solomons are not always like this," Sheldon answered. "Of course, Berande is the worst plantation and everything it gets is the worst. All the old timers shake their heads at it. They say it has what you Americans call a hoodoo on it."

"Berande will succeed," Joan said stoutly. "I like to laugh at superstition. You'll pull through and come out the big end of the horn. The ill luck can't last forever. I am afraid, though, the Solomons is not a white man's climate."

"It will be, though. Give us fifty years, and when all the bush is cleared off back to the mountains, fever will be stamped out, everything will be far healthier. There will be cities and towns here, for there's an immense amount of good land going to waste. The black, the brown and the yellow will have to do the work, managed by the white men. The black labor is too wasteful, however, and in time Chinese or Indian coolies will be imported."

"Then the blacks will die off?"

Sheldon shrugged his shoulders and retorted:

"Yes, like the North American Indian, who was a far nobler type than the Melanesian. The world is only so large, you know, and it is filling up"—

"And the unfit must perish?"

"Precisely so. The unfit must perish."

In the morning Joan was roused by a great row and hullabaloo. Captain Young had landed Satan at the moment when the bridge building gang had started along the beach. Satan was big and black, short haired and muscular and weighed fully seventy pounds. He did not love the blacks. Tommy Jones had trained him well, tying him up daily for several hours and taking off one or two black boys at a time to tease him. So Satan had it in for the whole black race, and the second after he landed on the beach the bridge building gang was stampeding over the compound fence and swarming up the cocoanut palms.

"Good morning," Sheldon called from the veranda, "and what do you think of the nigger chaser?"

"I'm thinking we have a task before us to train him into the house boys," she called back.

"And to your Tahitians, too. Look out, Noah! Run for it!"

Satan, having satisfied himself that the tree perches were unassailable, was charging straight for the big Tahitian.

But Noah stood his ground, though somewhat irresolutely, and Satan, to every one's surprise, danced and frisked about him with laughing eyes and wagging tail.

"Now that is what I might call a proper dog," was Joan's comment. "He is at least wiser than you, Mr. Sheldon. He didn't require any teaching to recognize the difference between a Tahitian and a black boy. What do you think, Noah? Why don't he bite you? He savvee you Tahitian, eh?"

Noa Noah shook his head and grinned.

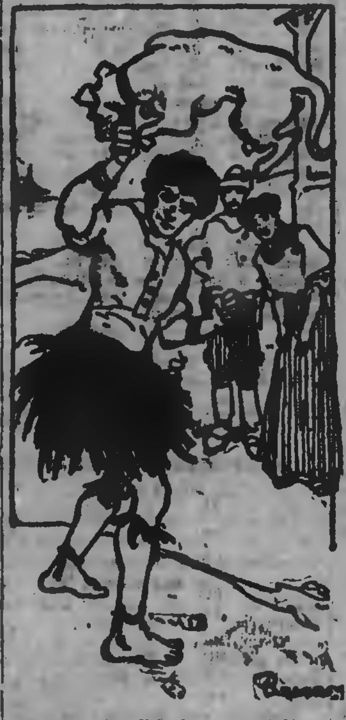
"He no savvee me Tahitian," he explained. "He savvee me wear pants all the same white man."

"You'll have to give him a course in 'Sartor Resartus,'" Sheldon laughed, as he came down and began to make friends with Satan.

It chanced, just then, that Adamu Adam and Matauare, two of Joan's sailors, entered the compound from the far side gate. They had been down to the Balesuna, making an alligator trap, and, instead of trousers, were clad in lava-lavas that flapped gracefully about their stalwart limbs. Satan saw them and advertised his find by breaking away from Sheldon's hands and charging.

"No got pants," Noah announced, with a grin that broadened as Adamu Adam took to flight.

He climbed up the platform that supported the galvanized iron tanks which held the water collected from the roof. Foiled here, Satan turned and charged back on Matauare.



IT WAS A FAIR GRIP ON THE LOWER JAW.

"Run, Matauare! Run!" Joan called.

But he held his ground and waited the dog.

WOMEN, AVOID OPERATIONS

Many Unsuccessful — And Worse Suffering Often Follows. Mrs. Rock's Case A Warning.

The following letter from Mrs. Orville Rock will show how unwise it is for women to submit to the dangers of a surgical operation when often it may be avoided by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She was four weeks in the hospital and came home suffering worse than before.

Here is her own statement.

Paw Paw, Mich.—"Two years ago I suffered very severely with a displacement. I could not be on my feet for a long time. My physician treated me for several months without much relief and at last sent me to Ann Arbor for an operation. I was there four weeks and came home suffering worse than before. My mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did. Today I am well and strong and do all my own housework. I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and advise my friends who are afflicted with any female complaint to try it." — Mrs. ORVILLE ROCK, R. R. No. 5, Paw Paw, Michigan.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for women's ills, and has restored the health of thousands of suffering women. Why don't you try it?

Ulster Approves Covenant.

New York, Sept. 24.—A Belfast cable yesterday afternoon says:

The Ulster Unionist Council met here to-day (Monday) and approved the text of the anti-home rule covenant drawn up by its executive committee on Sept. 19. Orangemen throughout Ireland will subscribe to it next Saturday, at what promises to be the most momentous political gathering since the days of the Scotch Covenanters.

Former Solicitor-General of Ireland Sir Edward Carson was chairman. Other notables present were the Marquis of Londonderry, Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, ex-Attorney-General for Ireland James H. Campbell and several members of Parliament of the King's Privy Council.

The covenant pledges Orangemen not to recognize the Irish Parliament, to disregard its laws and to refuse payment of taxes to the Dublin treasury. The utmost loyalty to King George is expressed.

It is understood that the council will also plan a provisional government, to assume control in Ulster the day home rule becomes effective.

The covenant says resistance to home rule will be passive "as long as possible."

Many Workmen Killed.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 24.—A steamer with 160 sawmill workers aboard was rammed by a tugboat on the Dvina river near Archangel yesterday. The steamer sank in ten minutes and most of the passengers jumped into the water and 35 of them swam ashore.

Twenty are known to have been drowned, while many others are among the missing.

Prof. Dickie Kills Himself.

London, Ont., Sept. 24.—Prof. Dickie, who came here from Belfast, Ireland, some time ago and has been lecturing anatomy at the Western Medical College, deliberately committed suicide in his boarding-house yesterday.

Going into the bathroom he stuffed towels under the door and then turned on the gas. He left a short note to the janitor begging his pardon for the trouble he was going to cause. Dickie was 35 years old and unmarried. Worry over ill-health is supposed to be the cause of suicide.

A Noted Artist's Home.

The late Sir Lawrence Alma-Tadema's house in St. John's Wood is one of the show places of London. It is a marvellous painter's palace. It was designed by the great artist himself, and for years the builders were constantly at work in one part or another, altering and improving under the watchful eye of the master, until everything was exactly as he wanted it. The house, which has no doors, is full of beautiful marble pillars and panels painted by his brothers of the brush, and no better quotation could have been selected to adorn this remarkable residence than that to be seen in the reception hall:

I count myself in nothing else so happy
As in a soul remembering my good friends.

And everyone whose privilege it was to enjoy the famous artist's hospitality will agree that the motto was characteristic of the man.

Fell When Peace Ended.

A curious tradition attaches to the obelisk on Studley Pike, the towering height commanding the country in which occurred the recent catastrophe to the Yorkshire express. The memorial was set up originally in 1815 to commemorate the signing of the treaty of peace that followed Waterloo. As a peace memorial it bore itself proudly for many years. Then, in the middle of the century, war broke out in the Crimea. The peace memorial tottered and fell to the ground. After the war it was re-erected, and there on Studley Pike it is a conspicuous landmark for miles around.

Trousers For Oxen.

Cape Town newspapers state that the latest thing in the sartorial line is trousers for oxen. This method of clothing beasts of burden is not due to any accession of style in South Africa, the garments having become a necessity to protect the animals from the tsetse flies, which are a torment and often a fatal enemy.

WHILE every man, whether he works for others or for himself, should carry a LIFE INSURANCE POLICY. There is especial need of this on the part of the man who is IN BUSINESS FOR HIMSELF. In the case of such a one's death the proceeds of a policy may mean not merely the usual financial protection for his dependents. They may be the means of saving a profitable business from disruption and a family from serious loss. Every enterprising business man occasionally contracts obligations which he cannot immediately pay, but which, if he retains his health and strength, he manages to cancel in course of time. Sometimes, however, death prevents the payment of business debts that were fully warranted by the outlook when they were incurred. To compel payment of these debts out of the policy-holder's regular estate might greatly embarass his family. But if the head of the firm is insured for an adequate sum, the pressing indebtedness may be met, the business saved, without embarassing the family, and either carried on successfully or sold to good advantage.

On his own account also, a business man should be eager to insure his life for as much as he can conveniently pay premiums on. The business man's credit is always improved by the fact that he has had his life well insured. A Life Insurance Policy, therefore, is a good asset and should be considered indispensable by any one who is conducting a business of his own.

Remember that the late Cyrus W. Field was said to be worth at one time $20,000,000, yet he did not leave a dollar to his family, except his Life Insurance.

Life Insurance is the one asset that never deteriorates at death.

The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada will give you the protection you need. Call, phone or write them—

JURY RETURNED VERDICT OF COMMON ASSAULT AGAINST WILLIAM LEAL

After Deliberation of Nearly Two Hours on the Evidence.

WILL BE LIBERATED

If Bail of $2,000 Can be Secured—He Must Give $1,000

Instead of being convicted of attempted murder, as many supposed would be the outcome of his trial, William Leal, who was charged with shooting his wife, was found guilty of only common assault, the jury reaching their verdict after one hour and three-quarters' deliberation.

The trial which commenced at one o'clock Monday afternoon lasted till after midnight, the jury's decision being pronounced at 11.45 p.m.

JUDGE WAS SURPRISED.

Mr. Justice Clute, while expressing some surprise at the jury's finding, suspended judgment upon the prisoner, and granted him liberty providing he could give $1,000 bonds for his future good behavior, and two sureties of $500 each, or $2,000 in all. During the interim till such security is forthcoming, Leal will be confined in the county jail.

MRS. LEAL TESTIFIED.

Mrs. Leal, wife of the prisoner, was the only new witness. Her story did not condemn her husband, although she admitted that they had quarrelled over a trival sum of money. The evidence of the other witnesses tallied with what was produced at the preliminary police court hearing.

Crown Prosecutor N. F. Davidson, K.C., made an eloquent plea when addressing the jury. From the evidence which they had heard he urged them to weigh carefully its significance in arriving at a decision, and wound up with a strong, sane recountal of all the salient features of the case that had been revealed in the evidence.

Mr. D. O'Connell, who conducted the defence, assisted by Mr. G. N. Gordon and Mr. Basil Hall, also made a strong address to the jurors.

Leal was indicted on five counts, the mildest of which was that of common assault, and of which the jury found him guilty.

In addressing the jury, before their retirement, Justice Clute charged them very strongly against the conduct of the prisoner as gathered from the evidence.

"CYNIC" ATTENDS CHURCH BUT OBJECTS TO SERVICES

Does Not Believe in a Harvest Festival When so Much Grain is Rotting in the Fields.

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—Last Sabbath evening I attended a local church and it happened to be a Harvest Festival service.

Through the columns of your well-informed paper I read that rain (and yesterday snow) is hindering the garnering and rotting the crops. Yet under direction of the reverend leader we sang the good old harvest hymn:

"All is safely gathered in Ere the winter storms begin."

I joined in the chorus, naturally, but the thought came: "What a bunch of misguideds here present." "Lord have mercy upon us."

I enclose a cutting to show you the opinion of one English vicar, who feels that in the bad year experienced this service strikes a discordant note.

CYNIC.

The clipping enclosed by "Cynic" and which is taken from the London Daily Mail, and which refers to conditions in England, is as follows:

In many places the suggestion has been made that the customary harvest thanksgiving service shall be abandoned. The rector of Bridgham, Norfolk, has decided not to hold harvest festival services this year. As the harvesters have been idle and as the crops are either rotting in the fields or being washed away by flooded rivers, he is of the opinion that there would be no meaning in a thanksgiving service, and a note of reality, he thinks, would be impossible in such a disastrous season as we have had this year.

CHORUS LADIES LURED HUBBYS AND SOME ONE TOLD THEIR WIVES

From the peaceful hamlet of Lindsay, comes a tale of woe in which pretty chorus girls, naughty hubbys and irate spouses played a prominent part. The story goes something after this manner.

"The New Barmaid Company," came to town, last week, for a two night stand.

The ladies of the chorus were pretty and alluring and victims came fast and furious.

A launch party was organised and several fond hubbys, who were only too glad to get away from the atmosphere of calling days, etc., took the chance.

But in this, as in all other plots, the villain was in evidence. Either by malice or joke, he "piped off" to the lady of the house and the news spread. The result was a general assault on the port at which the launch party was due to return. On the arrival of the boat, there was a regular riot.

Brand new coiffures, faces and other adornments of the chorus ladies were turned into salvage. Their gentlemen friends got theirs too, and hereafter, they will be under surveillance when a theatrical company comes to town.

"ALL ENGLISH" MUSICAL COMEDY

Next Friday and Saturday at the Grand.

The musical comedy success, direct from the Avenue Theatre, London W. entitled "The New Barmaid," will be presented at the Grand Theatre, opening a two days' engagement on Friday next, September 27. The company of over forty people, the scenery, the dresses, the uniforms, etc., are "All-English," having arrived but a few days since from London, England, per Allan Liner "Sicilian." The attraction comes direct to Peterborough from the Princess Theatre, Montreal, where the "New Barmaid" has been playing all week. It is a distinct novelty for an all English company and production to visit Canada in this way. Hitherto all the successful English musical comedies have been presented by American managers with American companies. Loftus & Lubbock hope to have commenced a new era in Canadian theatrical management. The seat sale opens to-morrow (Wednesday) morning.

NEW TROUBLE FOR THE INSPECTOR

He Says Conditions in West End Are Deplorable.

The troubles of Sanitary Inspector Spence continue to pile up. The preserving and pickling season which is now on has added to his duties until he scarcely knows which way to turn.

"Where you would naturally expect conditions to be best, they are really worse, and that is in the best residential sections of the city," said the inspector yesterday just after he had made an official tour of the west end.

Mr. Spence says that he walked through one lane and was actually surprised. It was the worst he had ever encountered in the line of duty. The lane in the rear of every residence was littered with garbage, the refuse from the preserving and pickling operations, dumped promiscuously upon the ground.

The inspector repeated to the householders his instructions that proper garbage receptacles be provided. All promised to comply with the by-law, but Mr. Spence says the trouble is that the matter generally rests there. No one does comply and his only alternative is to summon the residents to the police court. This he intends to do unless conditions are improved.

Mr. Spence says that in this particular district a private individual is gathering the garbage for hog feed but takes the best of it only, and scatters the rejected portion over the ground.

BE ON THE SAFE SIDE AND BOIL WATER

The report of the M.H.O. on the condition of the city water for the month of August, was read at the meeting of the Water Commissioners, yesterday afternoon. Eight tests were made, the analysis being such as to create suspicion. The M.H.O. advised that consumers still boil the water.

For this month to date, the situation remains unchanged.

It is interesting to note that not one case of typhoid fever has been reported to the M.H.O. this year and there have been comparatively few cases of scarlet fever.

METERS MAY BE PLACED IN THE CHINESE LAUNDRIES

Board of Water Commissioners to Get After the Railways Too.

That the Board of Water Commissioners, will take up the question of installing water meters in the laundries operated by Chinamen in the city, was intimated by a remark passed by the chairman, at a meeting yesterday afternoon, when he gave as his opinion that the Chinamen should pay by meter.

There are nearly one dozen such laundries in Peterboro. The remark was made during the deliberation by the members, of a letter from Fanning's Laundry, where notice had been given that the meter would be attached. The request was that the laundry and house be separated. This is a somewhat similar case to that of Parkers' Laundry, which was decided some time ago after considerable discussion and which resulted in payment by meter.

The members did not feel that an exception could be made and took no action.

SIGNED PETITION AND MUST PAY.

Joseph Barnard of 114 Dufferin street, wrote that he was assessed for a bath and closet but he had neither water or sewer. It was pointed out that Mr. Barnard's case was one in which he gave authority to have his name used on a petition asking for water. This made him responsible for an assessment for water. No action was taken.

RATES FOR RAILWAYS TO BE INCREASED.

The C.P.R. pays to the Commissioners $600 per annum; the G.T.R. pays $800. This is not enough in the opinion of the members, as there has been an increase in traffic of late. The chairman will interview the superintendents of the local divisions on the question.

EPWORTH LEAGUERS SPOKE ON SOCIAL LIFE IN CITY AND COUNTRY

The Epworth League meeting held at St. James' church last evening was of exceptional interest. The attendance was most satisfactory and all enjoyed the program. The pastor, Rev. J. N. Clarry was chairman.

The meeting was in charge of the Good Citizenship department, the subjects being "Social Life in the City and Social Life in the Country," five minute talks being given. The first subject was in charge of Miss Emmerson, Mrs. T. Brown and Mr. J. G. Moss, while Miss Pethick, Mr. Drummond and Mr. McLaren spoke on the other subject.

Their remarks were followed by a short address by the pastor who referred to both phases of social life in which he mentioned the fact that the most benefit was derived from country life.

LIKES ONTARIO BEST.

Lecturer Says He Is Satisfied to Stay in Eastern Province.

"I have been in the West and I believe this to be better than the West. As I go through the country I am preaching dairying and stock raising."

Such were the remarks of an Ontario institute lecturer upon his return from the hinterland clay-belt of Ontario where he had been sent on a lecturing tour to the Farmers' Institutes. The text upon which he has based his sermons to the farmers, has been wisely chosen. Dairying and stock raising are two of the branches of agriculture that make for fertility and improvement not only of the soil but of country life in general. Mixed farming is one of the great benefits to any country and more especially so in Canada where our increasing population is demanding food supplies on an enormously increasing scale. The next ten years will see in Canada one of the most wonderful developments that any country has ever seen. Ontario is not the only province that is rich in domain. It is gratifying to know that her hinterland is so rich in possibilities. The time is not far distant when the whole line of the National Transcontinental Railway will traverse a thickly settled country where magnificent farms are producing great wealth and providing untold comforts for good agriculturists.

Dairying is a good business. Perhaps there is none that pays better on the farm. Oxford County and Leeds County in Ontario, have made wonderful progress with this branch of farming. A trip through either county is all that is necessary to convince anyone of the manifold wealth and blessings that fall to persons in the dairy business. The average out-put of $100 per acre in dairying supplies by South Oxford is one of the marvels of intensive agriculture.

Stock-raising is an equally profitable department. It is full of intense interest. The raising of horses, cattle, hogs and sheep as well as poultry, is a business that brings not only a great deal of joy to the breeder, but carries with it money rewards and comforts unequalled in any profession. There is money in hog raising. Cattle raising has made its kings. Horsebreeding has produced men of international reputation and energy. The sheep breeder is the only one in Canada who does not enthuse over the question of stock raising, but even he is awake to its enormous possibilities. Thousands of acres of Canadian soil are waiting for the touch of the shepherd's magic crook.

Mixed farming gives opportunity to both these branches — dairying and stock raising. But each branch has been suffering a decline in various parts of the country for one reason or another. Many farmers in the older provinces are quitting dairying chiefly because of the labor problem. Mixed farms are rapidly turning to grass farm and so the situation changes. The opportunities for stock farming were never brighter.—Farmers' Magazine.

Uses for Sawdust.

The Canadian lumbermen, who for years wasted the sawdust which fell from the mills, poisoned the rivers, caused enormous loss in the production of fish and injured the public health, may now look back with chagrin and wonder over the fact that to-day flour for trade purposes from sawdust is now in common use. It is an ingredient of dynamite, linoleum, xyolite, etc. The wood flour is ground in a mill, very similar to those which grind corn and rye. Pine and spruce sawdust is used, and after passing through the stones and the bolting chest, it is sacked or baled for shipment. It is then worth from about $12 to $13 a ton.

The flour has a number of uses. It is the absorbent for nitro-glycerine, which is the explosive ingredient. Wood flour dynamite is inferior to that made with infusorial earth as the absorbent; but it serves many purposes and is cheaper.

But dynamite is one of the smallest prospective uses for the product. Linoleum makers mix it with linseed oil and give body to their floor coverings. It is not considered quite equal to ground cork for this purpose, as it is less elastic, but it is cheaper and meets requirements for medium grades.

THEATRICAL

"The Girl of My Dreams"

John Hyams and Leila McIntyre in the musical comedy "The Girl of My Dreams" at the Grand last night, were greeted by the largest house of this season. The whole show, taken by its scenic effects, the singing, dancing, acting and plot, was without hesitation, the best musical comedy that has visited Peterborough for some time. John Hyams, as Harry Swifton, with his droll ways and jokes, kept the audience in a continual uproar whenever he was on the stage. Leila McIntyre, as Lucy Medders, the Quaker Girl, was also well received. Her sweet childish manner of speaking or singing with her clear beautiful voice, made her very popular with the audience. The support was well over the standard. Irving Brooks, as Count Von Henniggiefits, was very funny and also a good gymnast.

Some others who were very good were Neil Burns, as Pigeon Williams Sylvia De Frankie, as "Cuddle" Swifton, Frank McEwen as Socrates Primmer, Frances Faillard as General Bombastine, and Alice Hills as Daphne Daffington.

The chorus was well trained and could sing. Every song was admirably rendered and called for frequent encores. Perhaps the most popular were "The Girl of My Dreams," and "Dr. Tinkle Tinker." The show throughout was clean and refreshing.

Perhaps it would interest some to know that John Hyams and Leila McIntyre are married and have a pretty little daughter of about seven years.

The company left this morning for Guelph.

TWO CHARGES MAY BE HEARD

Information May be Laid Against Police Officer.

The incident of yesterday afternoon in which Arthur Head and a police officer differed when the officer remonstrated with Mr. Head for travelling with his horse on the wrong side of the road, may result in an interesting case, the latter having intimated that he wished to have an information laid against the police officer.

The case will be heard shortly in Police Court.

Mesmerism.

Mesmerism, so called, was propounded by the German physician, Frederick Anthony Mesmer of Merseburg, in 1766. In his famous thesis published that year Mesmer contended that the "heavenly bodies diffused through the universe a subtle fluid which acts on the nervous system of all living beings and in a special sense on man." He gained numerous followers and for several years made all Europe ring with his fame at the same time that he was taking in money by the handful. In 1784 a committee of physicians got after Mesmer's system and succeeded in exposing it to the ridicule of the world. Mesmer was at once discredited, and since that time mesmerism has been practically a dead issue.—New York American.

CATCHER TROUT GOES TO TORONTO

ecial to the Review.

, N.Y., Sept. 24.—Secretary Farrell, of the National As- of Baseball Leagues, has t a list of men selected by the opening days of the five lowed the teams in A." to draft players. Drafts adian League are: Trout erborough, Herbert and Ku- Ottawa, for Toronto; Hynes ondon, and Courtney from rd, for Portland, Ore. Orm, of Peroria, has been drafted by Providence.

The drafting of Trout, for the International League champions, will be of considerable help from a financial standpoint to the local club. The fans will be mostly interested in learning what disposition the Toronto club will make of the clever young backstop. Another season in the Canadian League would be of great benefit to him, and as is usual in cases where the players are young and need more experience, he may not be called to the big show of 1913.

DRAFTING OF THE CANADIANS

ass AA leagues are now tak- r turn in the drafting pro- h is to elevate several young from minor league compa- o big show, such as is stag- he International league and Association. Last year, o leagues were quite active ing up youngsters from the Canadian league, even though they had major league clubs put in the draft in almost each case. New regulations prevented that this year, with the result that the various class AA clubs have had to do their own picking, which they are now doing. That several Canadian league youngsters will go up, is only too certain; in fact, the writer is in a position to know already of certain players who will graduate. Indications are that several surprises will be presented to the fans if present facts are indicative of the manner in which the clubs have signed up the youngsters, while one or two interesting facts are being gradually brought out. For instance, one well known club is putting in a draft on Kubat of the Ottawa club, and also Herbert, and in doing so found it necessary to draft from the Fort Wayne club of the Central league, both Ottawa players being the property of the Fort Wayne club and not of the Ottawa owners. This means that the Ottawa club will not profit in any way, while the claim that tOtawa was largely composed of "farmed" players is only too correct. —Hamilton Spectator.

The Peterboro club is going to lose at least one player, that being Trout the youngster who did such splendid work behind the bat. Trout's work impressed more than one scout this season and a draft has already been put in on him. Doubtless this will prove of some satisfaction to the Peterboro owners and to the fans as well, for Trout has been very popular in the Lift Lock city.

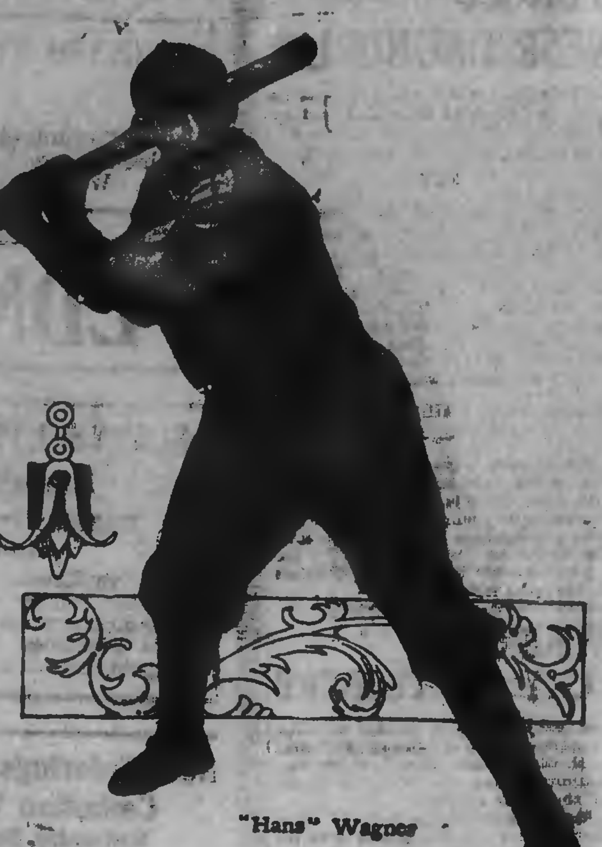
TO LEAD THE PITTSBURG PIRATES



"Hans" Wagner

Hans Wagner is going to manage the Pirates next year, according to the latest advices from Pittsburg. Fred Clarke, who has managed the team for many years and who has never had the men finish outside of first division, has announced that he is going to retire after this season. He says he has saved all the money he needs for the rest of his life, and will be glad to get away from the strain and worry of a pennant race. Wagner has been in the major league for 15 years, and is even playing so well this year that Manager McGraw recently said that he is the brainiest and cleverest player in the history of the game. Clarke was to have quit last season and Outfielder Tommy Leach was promised the job. This year, however, Clarke announces will positively mark his farewell. Incidentally President Dreyfus has now changed his mind as to the manager for next season and promised Wagner the position.

A Neglected Field.

Some twenty Canadians, says The Star Weekly, were asked to write the series of biographies known as the Makers of Canada. A good many of the biographies covered the period in which responsible government was won. The writers, who had received no instructions to emphasize self-government, were fascinated by the story. It is told in different ways in the lives of Sydenham, Papineau, Cartier, William Lyon Mackenzie, Ryerson, Baldwin, Lafontaine, Hincks, Brown, Howe. Every writer who encountered the subject dwelt upon it and wished he could have written more. There is no more important or interesting period of Canadian history than the quarter of a century between 1825 and 1850. It has one classic, the famous Durham report, the stately periods of which will bear comparison with those of Gibbon or Macaulay. That report ought to be far more widely circulated than it has been, and it ought to serve as an inspiration to writers of Canadian history.

Adam Trenger, a New York wholesale milk dealer, was sentenced to serve twenty days in jail and to pay a fine of $150 on conviction of selling milk 15 per cent. below health department standards.

IMMUNE.

He laughed with glee and said, said he:
"I care not, no, not I.
The price of beef brings me no grief;
Let it go to the sky.
And butter may go all the way
To sixty cents a pound,
While folk may beg to get an egg;
Serene I shall be found.

"Were folk like me you'd quickly see
Food prices take a fall,
For trusts so bold, with goods unsold,
Would soon begin to crawl.
They'd make a flop, and rates would drop,
Be cheap as cheap could be.
The way to bust each wicked trust
Is to become like me.

"I do not care for food that's rare,
Care not for food that's plain.
Why, its mere sight upsets me quite;
To taste it gives me pain.
What do I eat? I simply heat
Some water in a pan
And melt in it a gluten grit.
I've got dyspepsia, man!"

Girlless Vancouver.

Although cartoonists are in the habit of portraying Vancouver as a blushing miss, it would seem to the casual eye that Vancouver is very much the bachelor city. Unattached males are everywhere. The restaurants do a thriving business feeding stray young men who look whistfully at the congealed pie and sigh for the days when mother's cooking sustained them through the long school hours before they went to work for a living. According to statistics there are about three times as many men as women in the city. That is indeed a sad state of affairs for the aforesaid men. Most of them can look back to eastern towns and cities where there is a girl waiting for them to make a fortune, but under present conditions in Vancouver, the girl has to wait for many moons to come.

Whether matrimony is a failure or not will never be found out by a large number of the unfortunates. They can't afford even to make the experiment, for there is no place to live unless one is a budding millionaire.—Vancouver Sunset.

Fashion and Rare Birds.

In South Australia a movement is on foot for the conservation of the rarer birds—such as the ibis, the egret, the crane and the spoonbill—now sacrificed at the behest of Dame Fashion. The result of the destruction of these birds has been the increase of the plagues of grasshoppers and a diminishing fish supply, for the wading birds subsist on crustaceans that destroy the fish spawn.

The Staff of Life.

Beyond a doubt it was a long time before man became a bread eater. During untold ages he lived on the simple fruits of the earth—roots, berries, etc.—together with such game, big and little, as he could capture in the forests. Not until the agricultural stage in human development arrived did mankind have bread, and the agricultural stage is the latest in the series. Tradition has it that bread was first known in China during the reign of the Emperor Ching Noung, away back about 1998 B. C., and that the "staff" was introduced into the other parts of the world from that country. As a matter of fact, we do not know when or where it was that man began to eat bread, only we may be sure that it was very recent as compared with the period that the race was without it.—New York American.

ENTERTAINMENT AT LINDSAY

FINANCES WERE GOOD

FAIR WAS NOT UP TO MUCH

The entertainment provided by the Directors of the Lindsay Fair did not meet with much approval, according to the Lindsay Post, which has the following:

The special features secured for this year's fair were not up to the standard of excellence which characterized the shows of other years.

These same attractions were booked for Peterborough and Oshawa fairs and the directors were lead to believe that they were something out of the ordinary. The performers, while clever in their respective stunts, did not put up attractions in keeping with the excellence and importance of a fair which is considered to be among the best outside of Toronto and Oshawa exhibitions. The people of Lindsay and district are proud of our fair, and a number of its best friends have suggested that the directors in future secure special attractions independent of outside shows. Lindsay fair is in a class by itself, and nothing but the best in special features is good enough for the people.

Then there were monotonous waits between the different events and people who paid to enter the grand stand were complaining of the tedious delay. They wanted to see something doing all the time.

We feel that the directors of the fair will take the above in the nature of suggestions as they are given with a view to still further add to the excellence of our annual show.

Notwithstanding the bad weather and many other conditions which were unfavorable, the receipts were better than ever. The gate receipts for the three days totalled $2,888.93, grand stand $742.00, with the Midway and other receipts, which when summed up, gives a grand total in advance of any year in the history of Lindsay's Grand Central Exhibition.

by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular, free

HON. L. P. PELLETIER SUCCEEDS WHERE OTHERS HAD FAILED

Secured Cheaper Cable Rates Which Mean Much to Canadians Who Have Business and Social Relations With the Old Country.

It has been left to the Borden cabinet to take the first step in a scheme of reduced cable rates between England and Canada. Hon. L. P. Pelletier, Postmaster General, returned with Premier Borden from England, carrying in his pocket a nice present for Canadians in the form of a substantial all round decrease in rates for Canadians on cablegrams between Canada and the Mother Country. He secured the reduction after a hard struggle, in which he was aided by Postmaster General Samuel of England, and was able to accomplish in a few weeks what the Postmasters General of the Laurier cabinet could not during their fifteen years of power.

MR. PELLETIER'S SUCCESS

The Hon. Mr. Pelletier secured three important concessions, all redounding to the benefit of the Canadian people—reductions on messages subject to delivery of ordinary wires on ordinary press telegrams and night press telegrams.

There has been in force a reduced rate for cable messages under the name of "deferred" rate. The difference between the deferred and the ordinary rate lay in the time of delivery. The ordinary rate entailed immediate delivery of a message in England, while the deferred rate guaranteed the delivery of the message within twenty-four hours after being sent.

THE NEW WAY

For telegrams in plain language the present deferred rate of twelve cents per word will be reduced to nine cents, and also these messages instead of being subject to a delay of twenty-four hours, will be transmissible without any more delay than what is necessary to give priority to the ordinary rate telegram of twenty-four cents a word.

It is thus evident that for a little more than a dollar a twelve word message can pass between England and Canada in a few hours. The private citizen in an emergency can communicate cheaply with relatives in Great Britain, while the commercial man can conduct his business in a much easier manner. The ties between the Motherland and her Dominion are drawn more closely together by a French-Canadian minister who was denounced by his Liberal opponents as a Nationalist and an enemy to Canadian development.

NEW NIGHT RATE ALSO.

Another rate of night telegrams will be inaugurated: For the sum of seventy-two cents a message of twelve words can be flashed over the Atlantic to Great Britain, and for each additional word five cents will be charged. These lettergrams will be subject to the prior delivery of ordinary traffic to be delivered on the morning of the day following that on which they are transmitted.

WEEK-END MESSAGES

There is at present in existence a rate of [illegible] dollar forty-four cents for thirty words and twenty-four cents for each additional group of five words for week-end cable letters handed in up to Saturday for delivery on the following Tuesday.

This arrangement is replaced by a much more favorable one. The new rate will be one dollar and eight cents for twenty-four words and five cents for every additional word, but the time of delivery is Monday instead of Tuesday as before.

While these reductions have been secured for the people of Canada at large, the Hon. Mr. Pelletier also obtained the inauguration of new rates for press messages between Great Britain and Canada, and which will result in a large dissemination of Canadian news in England and vice versa.

A GREAT ACHIEVEMENT

The whole scheme, though not so vast as Mr. Pelletier anticipates it will be yet, goes into force at once. And it is safe to say that few men could have accomplished so much in such a short time and against such odds. Mr. Pelletier in fighting for reduced cable rates was advancing many steps further the scheme of a vast empire cable system controlled within the empire. He makes no secret of his ambition to make the transmission of message across the Atlantic as cheap as between any two towns in a Canadian province.

STRIKING CONTRAST

Mr. Pelletier's success was in striking contrast to the failure of the Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Postmaster General in the Laurier cabinet, who prated so loudly and so long of his endeavours to secure reduced cable rates.

A new minister gifted with administrative and business ability to a rare degree took the reins of office, Mr. Pelletier effected changes which presage a revolution in the hitherto hampered cable relations between Canada and Great Britain.

LIBERAL MEETING NEXT TUESDAY

The Gathering Will be Held in the Brock Street Roller Rink.

The Liberal meeting in this city next Tuesday evening will be held in the Brock street rink as the local committee have decided that the Grand Opera House would not accommodate the crowd that will turn out to hear Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Accompanying the Liberal leader will be the Hon. Charles Murphy, Hon. George P. Graham and Hon. MacKenzei King, each to appear in his own particular role.

The Liberal Association of Lindsay will send a strong deputation and band by special train, and visitors are expected from all the towns adjacent to Peterborough, special railway rates being provided for the occasion.

A CHURCH EXPERIMENT.

The Memorial Baptist Church at the corner of Richmond street west and Tecumseth street, in the midst of one of Toronto's most congested districts, is now the home of a unique Christian organization. It is the only church building in Toronto being used for both regular services and extensive settlement work. And it is the first Baptist church in Canada at which any settlement work has ever been done. The building was erected in 1887, when the district was considered residential. The congregation then had a membership of 300, and the church, which seats about 500, was generally full at Sunday services. But conditions changed in the district, and the congregation dwindled, practically disappeared.

It is a non-sectarian "parish," extending from Bathurst to Shaw street, and from Arthur street down to the bay. Forty young women workers have made a systematic house-to-house survey of the district, noting population and conditions, and this census has been supplemented by personal investigation by Rev. A. L. Brown, the pastor. The district has 2,498 houses, and a population of about 20,000. The houses are small and the streets are squalid. About half the population is foreign, including a large percentage of Jews. A good example of the mission's work is the home garden scheme. The yards in the district are very small, and there has been little inducement to keep them tidy. One day Mr. Brown announced on his blackboard outside the institute that at a certain hour on a certain day he would give away flower and vegetable seeds to boys and girls, under certain conditions. A great crowd of children assembled, and the demand for seeds was greater than the supply. Two thousand eight hundred packages were distributed, each of 200 children receiving seeds of eight vegetables and six flowers. Later cucumber seeds were distributed. It was desired that the latter will be planted in pails, on posts, or in some place where the vines would be ornamental without interfering with space. If handed out with the other seeds, the cucumbers would not have been given such an advantageous and economical position in the small yards. And this little detail goes to shew how carefully Mr. Brown is planning his work. So 200 homes now have gardens where none flourished before.

One night Mr. Brown was busy with a committee at the institute, when two little girls sent in word that they wanted to see him. No one else would do, and they must see him right away. He went out. "Oh, Mr. Brown," said one of the little girls, in quite a state of excitement, "my lettuce is up!" This is an example of the interest taken in the home gardens. Prizes will be given, for the best vegetables and flowers, and the neatest yards, the nicest vine-covered fences, the finest window boxes, etc. The prizes will include four silver medals, four bronze medals, and thirty dollars in cash. The gardens are visited once a month by the judges, who keep a record of their condition; careful cultivation and cleanliness throughout the season counting in the competition. Photographs were taken of all the gardens before planting, and others will be taken when they are at their best in the fall, and all these will be shown in a lantern slide exhibition.

Other organizations include a sewing class for school girls, which already numbers 40; millinery and dressmaking classes; a mothers' club, which has been attended by as many as 45 mothers, bringing 55 babies; a young men's club, now 25 strong; a schoolboys' club of 25; a ball club; domestic science and manual training classes. Babies will be cared for while mothers are at work, and it is also planned to instal a model laundry, where women on earn money by washing under ideal conditions.

Nailing a lie won't always keep it down.

DEAN OF LIBERALS DIES SUDDENLY

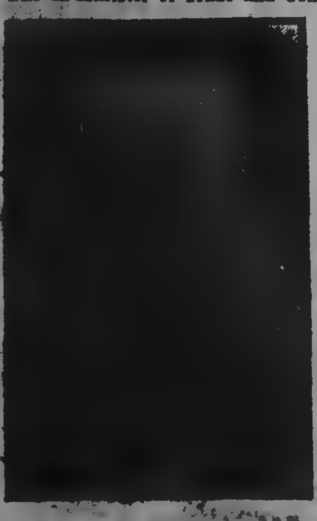
Kingston, Sept. 25.—Sir Richard Cartwright died suddenly at 11.25 yesterday morning. He was a patient at the General Hospital here.

Following an operation for hernia last week, Sir Richard had rallied, giving his medical attendants every hope for his recovery, notwithstanding his advanced years. At 10 o'clock yesterday it was suddenly discovered that the venerable statesman had lapsed into unconsciousness, death subsequently being caused by heart failure, due to shock from the operation. The end came peacefully, and he was surrounded by his family, including Lady Cartwright.

It is the wish of the relatives that the funeral be a private one at St. Mark's Church, Barriefield, on Thursday morning, and that Rev. O. G. Dobbs, cousin of Sir Richard, should officiate.

Born Dec. 4, 1835, Sir Richard had not completed his 77th year. He was the son of the late Rev. R. D. Cartwright, chaplain to the forces at Kingston, and was the grandson of the Hon. Richard Cartwright, a prominent United Empire Loyalist of his day, formerly a judge in the court of common pleas in Upper Canada.



SIR RICHARD CARTWRIGHT.

The ex-Minister of Trade and Commerce under the Laurier administration, was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and after his return to Canada, became president of the Commercial Bank of Canada, an institution now defunct. He entered public life as a member of Parliament for Lennox and Addington in 1863, and continued to sit for that constituency until Confederation in 1867. Under the British North America Act, Lennox and Addington was divided into two constituencies, and from 1867 to 1878 Mr. Cartwright sat for Lennox County. Being defeated at the elections in the latter year, he was subsequently returned for Centre Bruce, which he represented up to the close of the Parliament. He was then elected for South Huron, and since the general election of 1887, he has sat for South Oxford. He belonged to one of the old Tory families of Upper Canada, and in the early days of his public career gave an independent support to Sir John A. Macdonald.

Since the period of the "Pacific Scandal" he has acted with and been a member of the Reform party, and on the resignation of the Macdonald administration, in November, 1873, he became Finance Minister in the Cabinet, then formed by Mr. Mackenzie, and continued in that office up to the defeat of the Government, September, 1878. Subsequently, while in opposition, he became chief spokesman for his party on all fiscal subjects, and developed in debate powers of oratory superior to other public men of his time, save only the Hon. William Macdougall. His speech in seconding the vote of thanks to the volunteers who had served in the Northwest Rebellion, 1885, is regarded as one of the masterpieces of Canadian Parliamentary eloquence.

On Sir Wilfrid's accession to power, in July, 1896, the late Sir Richard Cartwright—he had been created a K.C.M.G. in 1879—became Minister of Trade and Commerce in the newly-formed Government, and as such was engaged for some months in framing a new fiscal policy for the Dominion. In February, 1897, he undertook, with Sir L. H. Davies, a trade mission to Washington.

Just before the general election of 1904 he was called to the Senate, and from 1909 till the defeat of the Laurier administration was leader of the Government in that body.

He was a large property owner in Kingston and its environs and had given largely to charitable and deserving undertakings. He was elected president of the Women's Medical College, Kingston, 1887; vice-president of the Trusts Corporation of Ontario, was one of the Canadian trustees in Canada for the Equitable Life Insurance Co., president of the Frontenac Loan and Investment Co. during its existence. Sir Richard was president of the Ontario Reform Club, Toronto, and of the Eastern Ontario Liberal Association.

During Sir Wilfrid's absence from Canada in 1897, he discharged the duties of acting Premier. He was made a K.C.M.G. on the completion of the 60th year of the late Queen Victoria's reign. He was a member of the Church of England, and in 1859 married Francis, the elder daughter of Col. Alexander Lawe, H.E.I.C.S., of Cork, Ireland.

Lady Cartwright is a vice-president of the local Council of Women.

LEADERS LAY WREATHS ON DEAD STATESMAN'S CASKET

Premier Borden and Sir Wilfrid Laurier Pay Graceful Tribute to the Late Sir Richard Cartwright.

Ottawa, Sept. 25.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier said: "I have lost in Sir Richard one of my oldest personal friends. I was associated with him for more than thirty years.

"As leader of the party, my relations with him were at all times most cordial. If there arose between us differences of opinion, it was never difficult to adjust them satisfactorily. Sir Richard was a very strong man, [illegible] only who were intimately [illegible] with him knew his chival[illegible]. [illegible] was a patriot, a thorough gentleman, and a charming man."

Premier Borden said: "The death of Sir Richard Cartwright comes as a shock to those who have been his colleagues in Parliament whether on one or the other side of the House. He has been a great figure in public life for more than 40 years, and no one can forget his strong personality, his wonderful power of debate, or the wonderful contrast between the extreme kindliness of his disposition in private life and his great command of attack and invective in debate, whether upon the hustings or in Parliament."

Regret at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Sept. 25.—The news of the passing of Sir Richard Cartwright was received in official and political circles here with a feeling of profound regret. The venerable Liberal knight was much admired and respected by the men of both political creeds and on all sides are heard generous tributes to his memory.

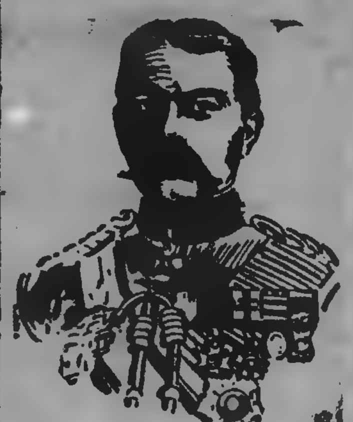
Although it is understood that his funeral will be private, one or more members of the Cabinet will be present to represent the Government.

Special To The Review.

Kingston, Sept. 25—The funeral of the late Sir Richard Cartwright, will be held Thursday afternoon. The service will be held at St. George's Cathedral, at two-thirty, conducted by the Dean, assisted by Rev. Ogilvie Dobbs of Brockville, cousin of the deceased. Senator Lougheed will represent the Dominion Government.

The pall-bearers selected are Frank and John Dobbs, Kingston and F. Ohara, Ottawa, all cousins; Col. Smith, S.C. McGill, J.R. Walkem of Kingston. Interment will be at Cataraqui cemetery.

Lady Cartwright is in receipt of condolences from Premier Borden and his cabinet.



LORD KITCHENER.

Who is now on his way to Egypt. Before leaving London he was warned that he might be shot, and detectives are guarding him.

Belleville Jail Delivery.

Belleville, Sept. 25.—Frank Smith, who was an inmate of the county jail here, made good his escape yesterday morning by the aid of a long bench and a rope made of his bedclothing. He succeeded in getting over an 18-foot wall which surrounds the jail building whilst alone in the yard for a few minutes.

On Saturday last Smith was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary for burglarizing a music store in this city, and was to have been taken to Kingston yesterday. He is a young man and claims Texas as his home.

No trace of the fugitive has been found.

WHAT A MUNICIPAL PLANT WILL MEAN TO PETERBOROUGH

Power and Light at Actual Cost---No Corporation to Realize a Fat Profit and Pay Handsome Dividends—Power Prices Cut in Two.

The people of Peterboro now have before them the estimated cost of power if a municipal plant is established. The figures submitted practically cut the present prices of power in two for the manufacturers of Peterboro.

Some of the aldermen at last night's meeting of the council objected to Hon. Adam Beck's figures on the ground that they are not definite. It must be remembered that they are estimates. That they are safe goes without saying.

When the municipal plant is in operation it will be found that the cost will be even less than the figures submitted by Mr. Beck. As the patronage is extended the price will decrease.

This has been the case in every municipality where Hydro-Electric has been installed. It will prove true in Peterboro.

Peterboro people want the Hydro-Electric. They declared for it at the last municipal election by a majority of over 1,300.

Another by-law is to be submitted to the ratepayers the object of which is to empower the council to issue debentures for $88,000 to put the proposed municipal plant in working order. Of this amount $58,000 is required to pay for the Peterborough Light & Power Co.'s plant authority to expropriate which has already been obtained from the local Legislature. The construction of an underground system in the business centre of the city will it is estimated, cost $30,000.

The Hydro-Electric not only means cheaper power for the manufacturer but cheaper light for the householder. It means, in a word, power and light at actual cost. There is no corporation to reckon with, no fat dividends to be earned at the expense of the consumer.

The Hydro-Electric is no experiment. Everywhere it has been tried it has proved satisfactory and the system is being steadily extended. Thirty municipalities declared for it last January and a similar number have voted in favor of it during the present year.

When the by-law is submitted the ratepayers will be told by the private interests not to fasten a new debt upon the city.

The city can give the people cheaper light and power, pay back the $88,000 out of the proceeds and still have a surplus. When the plant is paid for the price will take another drop for as before stated there are no dividends to pay.

An attempt will be made to have the Hydro-Electric regarded as a political question. That was tried at the last Provincial election and failed. It is purely and simply a business proposition.

The opponents of Hydro-Electric in their campaign literature published last December stated that the Peterboro manufacturer is now paying $20 per horse power for his power. Take their own figures and compare them with those submitted by Mr. Beck and which range from $12.55 to $17.95 according to amount used.

Private lighting will be cheaper in the same proportion. Peterboro's streets will be lighted as brilliantly as those of Toronto.

HON. ADAM BECK,
Toronto.

President of the Hydro-Electric Commission. A communication from Mr. Beck bearing on the local light and power situation was read at the Council meeting last night.

WILSON WINS IN HIS HOME STATE

Prevented the Nomination of a Senator by over Twenty Thousand

Special To The Review.

Newark, N.J., Sept. 25 — Governor Wilson won a sweeping victory in New Jersey primaries yesterday, according to returns which have sifted into Democratic headquarters to-day. In his fight to prevent the nomination for United States senator of former Senator James Smith jr., Wilson carried the state by a plurality of about twenty thousand.

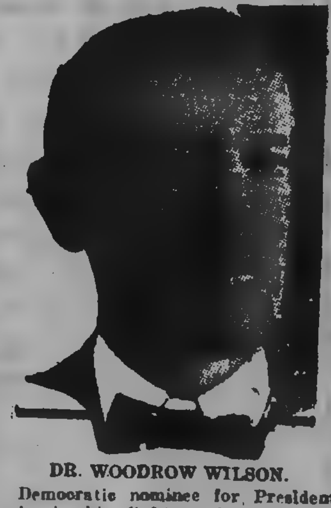
Lord Kitchener Received Warning Before He Left London

Special To The Review

New York, Sept. 25—A cable from London says that before leaving London for Paris, on his way to Egypt, yesterday, Lord Kitchener received a warning that he might be shot enroute. Consequently Scotland Yard has taken extraordinary precautions for his safety.



DR. WOODROW WILSON.

Democratic nominee for President who in his fight against the reelection of a Senator in New Jersey yesterday, carried the State by a plurality of twenty thousand.

Apple Packing as an Art.

Galt, Sept. 25.—Waterloo County, holding first place for size and extent of farmers' institutes, signalizes again the practical character of its work by holding an apple packing demonstration at E. B. Hallman's farm, New Dundee, Friday. It is the first demonstration of the kind. Apples will be packed in barrels and boxes, graded and marked, and the business of marking discussed. Leslie Smith of Wellington, an expert packer, will give an address.

Waterloo Crops Ruined.

Galt, Sept. 25.—Continued wet weather has practically ruined the root crops, potatoes, carrots, onions and celery in various sections of the Waterloo district, where a specialty is made of such. A vegetable famine is looked for. Oats, barley and hay are also extensively damaged.

SCHOOL BOARDS BUY FROM UNCLE SAM

That's the Charge Made by the Manufacturers Association in Session at Ottawa—Y.M.C.A. Also Scored For Same Reason

Ottawa, Sept. 5.—A discussion which at times promised to become rather heated, began just before the Canadian Manufacturers' Convention adjourned for lunch, when John Firstbrook, of Toronto, a director of the Young Men's Christian Association there, took objection to a clause in the report of the commercial intelligence committee, alleging that secretaries and physical directors of the Y.M.C.A. in Canada, encouraged the board of directors of their associations to buy materials for new buildings for Y.M.C.A.'s in the United States.

The report of the committee advocated supporting home industries, and then specified the Y.M.C.A. boards as examples of bodies who seemed inclined to discourage home industry.

After a dozen or more of the delegates had aired their views for and against the clauses, the chairman of the committee, C. S. J. Phillips, finally consented to withdraw them after explaining that neither he nor his colleagues had thought of singling out the Y.M.C.A. for criticism. The matter, he said, had been brought to the attention of the committee by a member of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and herefore it had been dealt with and the result of their dealings embodied in the report.

"Why confine the criticism to the Y.M.C.A.?" asked W. H. Rowley of Ottawa, "banks, trust companies and other concerns are equally as guilty."

Another delegate got after the school boards in Toronto and Winnipeg, saying that they bought desks and other materials galore from firms in the United States.

This brought R. D. Fairbairn of Toronto, an ex-member of the Toronto school board, to his feet in defence.

There were cries to withdraw the clauses, and other cries to leave them in, coming from all parts of the room. C. R. McCullough of Hamilton, managed to make himself heard in defence of the business ability of the members of the association, who would go where they choose to buy their goods the best and cheapest. It was bad, however, he maintained, to single out the Y.M.C.A.

The 41st annual convention of the C.M.A., which opened here yesterday morning, with an attendance of about 400 delegates, spent a very busy day, while in the evening the delegates were the guests at a brilliant reception given by the Ottawa Valley branch of the association at the Chateau Laurier. The guests were received by Senator and Mrs. Edwards, and included a number of the Cabinet Ministers and well known men in business and political life.

A good deal of interesting discussion centred round the report of the insurance committee at the afternoon session. The report said that Canada is becoming a more attractive field for insurance companies throughout the world. There are now 79 companies with interests in Canada. Of these, 29 are Canadians, 23 British and 27 United States and foreign. Though the number of insurance companies has increased abnormally in Canada during the last few years, yet the volume of business of these companies has not increased proportionately. As a matter of fact the increase of business has been little more than the increase in 1905.

This statement was made in the report of the commercial intelligence committee presented to the Canadian Manufacturers' Association yesterday afternoon. The report continued:

"Not but what our production is increasing fast enough, for in the ten-year period from 1900 to 1910, the annual output of our factories rose from $481,000,000 to $1,164,000,000. As against this however, our exports of 'manufactures' increased by only $16,000,000, while the exports of all classes of Canadian products increased by only $110,000,000. Meantime our imports entered for consumption have forged ahead at a tremendous rate. In the last ten years they have jumped from $202,000,000 to $547,000,000, with predictions that for the current fiscal year they will exceed the $600,000,000 mark.

"These figures point very clearly to two conclusions; first, that our purchasing power as a nation has enormously increased, evidencing the growth and prosperity of the country as a whole, and second, that as a result of that growth our home market keeps expanding at a rate that enables it to absorb a very large percentage of everything we produce.

"It seems," says the report, "highly probable that among the skilled artisans of the United Kingdom are thousands who would willingly come to Canada at their own expense providing they were assured of steady employment at remunerative wages on their arrival here, and the efforts of your committee have been directed towards forming a connection through which the Canadian employer in need of men and the English, Scotch or Irish mechanic in need of work would be brought together."

LULL IN ULSTER PROTENDS THE BREAKING OF THE STORM

Leaders Are Resting in Preparation for an Exciting Day on Saturday—Copies of Covenant are Being Circulated Belfast, Sept. 25.—From an oratorical viewpoint, yesterday was comparatively quiet in the Ulster campaign, Sir Edward Carson and Frederick E. Smith, the chief leaders, both resting and reserving themselves for the strenuous events in the coming few days.

Baron Willoughby de Broke, who was a strong supporter of the "no surrender policy" during the debate on the veto bill in the House of Lords, was the moving spirit of the demonstraton at Dromore, which had all the features of prevous campaign meetings — a guard of honor for the principal speakers, a torchlight procession and similar attractions.

Meanwhile unceasing activity is displayed in the preparations for the great day Sept 28, when, it is expected, some half million persons will sign the covenant to oppose home rule to the end. The organisers resemble a military general staff. There is a council to give directions and many staff and subordinate officers to execute them. There are generals of division and brigade commanders in the different districts.

The signing of the covenant on Saturday will be an elaborate ceremony. After a solemn service in Ulster Hall, Sir Edward Carson with his colleagues, the Belfast Corporation, the harbor commissioners and city magnates, will march to the City Hall, escorted by guards of honor from the Orange lodges. Additional guards numbering 2,500 men will be provided by the Unionist clubs in five shifts of 500 each, to keep the precincts of the City Hall during the period of receiving signatures. All the guards of honor will wear dark colors, red, white and blue armlets and carry five-foot staves, surmounted by a small Union Jack.

After the ceremony the same guard will escort Sir Edward Carson to the steamship sailing for Liverpool, in which city a similar demonstration on Monday is projected. As the steamer proceeds down Belfast Lough, huge bonfires will be lighted on the hills. A regular army of signalers will be employed Saturday to transmit the news of the day's doings to every corner of the province by heliograph and lamp signals from church spires and mountain top.

Will Not Fight Says Chronicle.

London, Sept. 25.—The Daily Chronicle's special correspondent, who is accompanying the Unionist leaders in their anti-home rule campaign in Ulster, thus refers to the "performance of the Unionist circus."

"The performances, of course, are not meant for the benefit of the Irish people. They are organized for the purpose of intimidating the Government and misleading the British electorate. Not a single vote in Ulster has been turned or would be turned if the performances went on until Christmas.

"There will be no fighting. Khaki uniforms and dummy rifles have frightened nobody. These God-fearing royalists never fight unless they are at least five to one and the enemy are unarmed. All these threats about resistence, all this talk about 'dying in the last ditch in defence of our liberties,' are the sheerest bunkum.

"The astute lawyers who are running this movement have no more intention of injuring their finger-ends by picking oakum in His Majesty's jails than they have of exposing their bodies to the bayonets of His Majesty's soldiers."

Templeton's Defi.

Dromore, Ireland, Sept. 25.—Lord Templeton, representative peer for Ireland, and founder of the Unionist clubs in Ireland, declared last night:

"Once for all, under no circumstances will the loyal people of Ireland consent to be governed by a priest-ridden parliament."

Lord Templeton spoke at a big demonstration of Ulster day campaigners, and, in proposing an anti-home rule resolution, said that the movement was a spontaneous uprising.

OVER-WORKED KIDNEYS

Cause, Rush of Blood, Fullness, Dizziness

J. T. Chetland, the well-known railway engineer of Hamilton, found the strain always resting upon men of his occupation vastly intensified by a tendency of the blood to rush to his head, and often at times when clearness of vision and great steadiness were demanded. Finding some difficulty in bending—a stiffness with pain having settled in his back, it occurred to him that his kidneys might be at fault. "This was a happy idea, for by it I not only got rid of the pain but many other troubles as well. I took a full dose of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and was glad to note that some obstruction of the kidneys, which I had lately noticed, was at once relieved. The flushed appearance of my face gave way to a more rational color and there was a perceptible improvement in my appetite. Dr. Hamilton's Pills certainly act splendidly upon the blood, removing heat and fulness and that sort of dizziness that makes a man at the throttle wish when it siezes him that he were elsewhere."

No medicine gives such unquestionably good results for stomach, liver, and blood troubles as Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are mild, certain, and always curative. Refuse any substitute. All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c per box, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

THE GLOBE WILL JIBE

Premier Borden says with reference to his party's naval policy—

"But the country shall not be kept waiting. We shall summon parliament in November and bring down our policy. Perhaps those who are so ready with their jibes now will not be so ready when we meet them with our policy on the floors of parliament."

This will probably prove to be the case with the single exception of the Globe. That journal has prepared itself for anything that may happen. It has invented one naval policy after another, and then proceeded to demolish them even as a child erects a house of cards, for the pleasure of sweeping it down with his little hand. Whatever the naval policy of the Government as disclosed when parliament meet, the Globe can quote from one of its hundred or so editorials, and claim that it truthfully forecast the situation.

If a man make a score of guesses on what the weather is to be tomorrow, he need not plume himself as a prophet, if one of these guesses proves correct.

CYNIC'S PLAINT

Judging from his letter in the Review yesterday in which he objects to harvest festival services because the weather has been for some time unfavorable for the gathering of this year's crop, "Cynic" did not go to church with the properly devout spirit even though he joined in the singing of the hymn which gives thanks for the safe garnering of the fruits of the earth.

"Cynic" should go back a century or so and read up on the historical accounts of the origin of these festivals or thanksgiving services. Hall Caine has admirably described the ceremony in his novel, "The Manxman." In olden times when the last sheaf of the harvest was gathered into the barn or placed in the rick, the neighborhood assembled at the invitation of the farmer and held high carnival, feasting and dancing. The event was made an occasion for enjoyment rather than of thanksgiving until the church later took a hand in the celebration and gave to it a religious tone. Thanks was offered up for life, then for health and last of all for food. The measure of the latter and perhaps the least of all of the three blessings was not considered. That there was sufficient for all was enough and a sufficiency there has generally been no matter what the weather conditions may have been.

"Cynic" need not fear. He is in no immediate danger of perishing from starvation. This year's crop, either in the east or in the west, in Canada or the United States, is one of the greatest that the old earth has ever produced. The greater part of it has been safely garnered and if by reason of the latter rains some of it is likely to be lost or depreciated in value, there is still left enough for all. Neither man or beast is threatened with starvation.

Why then cavil if the churches follow out their usual program and hold services rendering thanks and praise for the temporal benefits showered upon mankind. Leave it to the heathen to rage and to the unorthodox people to imagine vain things. The case of the English rector who has decided to hold no harvest festival is hardly an instance in point. The foodstuffs which England can produce even under the most favorable circumstances is but a drop in the ocean of the world's supply. England is no more in danger of enduring the pangs of hunger than is "Cynic" himself. There is plenty of corn in Egypt. The elevators and the granaries of the west are already bursting with wheat even if a fraction of the crop is spoiling in the fields.

SIR RICHARD CARTWRIGHT

Sir Richard Cartwright was not only one of the oldest statesmen in Canada at the time of his death yesterday but had the distinction of holding public office since 1863, at which time he was only 27 years old, and of dying in the harness at last. During the half century of his career he has met with reverses as well as triumphs, but possessed of indominitable will power, he was a man who always seemed able to carry his point and who could not be downed.

Sir Richard has been called a hidebound partisan, one who was intolerant in his treatment of those who opposed his views, and it has also been said of him that he was dreaded by political friend and foe alike. However this may be, he was certainly possessed of the courage of his convictions, and no scandal was ever whispered in connection with his name.

Finance Minister during the administration of Hon. Alexander Mackenzie Sir Richard was the recognized financial critic during the long years that the Liberals were in opposition following their defeat in 1878. When Sir Wilfrid Laurier formed his cabinet in 1896 Sir Richard drew the portfolio of Trades and Commerce. In 1903 he was appointed to the Senate and became leader of the Liberal element in that body. Even his years seemed to detract nothing from his fighting powers for at the last session he vigorously opposed and succeeded in blocking several important legislative measures originated in the lower house of Parliament.

Now that he is gone his virtues are recalled. Premier Borden testifies that as a parliamentarian the late Sir Richard had no superior anywhere. However trenchant he may have been as a political foeman, in private life he was a genial and faithful friend.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Toronto residents after all are no free game civic spirits. No sooner is the assessed value of the city boosted and the papers set up a story of unparalleled prosperity than the ratepayers individually and in bunches begin to protest that the increase has been made at their expense.

Toronto may not be presented with the Normal School grounds but what does that signify, seeing that she has signed Trout, the White Caps star catcher, for her baseball team.

The Globe's last guess as to the government's naval policy is that England is to receive a lump sum as an emergency grant and that parliament is to be called together in November to rush the matter through with all speed. Wonderful, isn't it what secrets are hidden from the wise and prudent and revealed unto babes!

Sanitary Inspector Spence's official hand may not be against every man but from the trouble he is having every resident seems to be arrayed against him.

by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Labor Unrest.

Industrial conditions in Canada were seriously disturbed by labor disputes during July, the number in existence in that month being considerably greater than the number existing during June. The number actually commencing, however, during July compares favorably with that of the previous month. In all, forty-six disputes were reported to the Department, an increase of nine as compared with June, and an increase of 28 as compared with July, 1911. About 17,000 employes were affected by these disputes as compared with 15,000 during June, and 10,000 during July, 1911. A termination of the Garment Workers' strike occurred during July, which caused a resumption of operations by more than four thousand employes after nearly two months' of idleness. Few of the disputes commencing during July were individually of serious consequence as factors in disturbing financial conditions.

"He is The Fearless One—that is what his name means," Joan explained to Sheldon.

The Tahitian watched Satan coolly, and when that sanguine mouthed creature lifted into the air in the final leap the man's hand shot out. It was a fair grip on the lower jaw, and Satan described a half circle and was flung to the rear, turning over in the air and falling heavily on his back. Three times he leaped and three times that grip on his jaw flung him to defeat. When he contented himself with trotting at Matauare's heels, eying him and sniffing him suspiciously.

"It's all right, Satan; it's all right," Sheldon assured him. "That good fella belong along me."

Then Satan turned his attention to the three house boys, cornering Orifiri in the kitchen and rushing him against the hot stove, stripping the lava-lava from Lalaperu when that excited youth climbed a veranda post and following Viaburi on top the billiard table where the battle raged until Joan managed a rescue.

CHAPTER IX.

AS BETWEEN A MAN AND A WOMAN.

IT was Satan's inexhaustible energy and good spirits that most impressed them. His teeth seemed perpetually to ache with desire, and in lieu of black legs he husked the cocoanuts that fell from the trees in the compound, kept the enclosure clear of intruding hens, and made a hostile acquaintance with every boss boy who came to report.

Christian Young sailed away in the Minerva, carrying an invitation (that would be delivered nobody knew when) to Tommy Jones to drop in at Berande the next time he was passing.

"What are your plans when you get to Sydney?" Sheldon asked that night at dinner.

"First I've heard that I'm going to Sydney," Joan retorted. "I suppose you've received information, by bush telegraph, that that third assistant understrapper and ex-sailorman at Tulagi is going to deport me as an undesirable immigrant."

"Oh, no, nothing of the sort, I assure you," Sheldon began with awkward haste, fearful of having offended, though he knew not how. "I was just wondering, that was all. You see, with the loss of the schooner and—and all the rest—you understand—I was thinking that if—a—if—hang it all, until you could communicate with your friends, my agents at Sydney could advance you a loan, temporary you see, why I'd be only too glad and all the rest, you know. The proper"—

But his jaw dropped and he regarded her irritably and with apprehension.

"What is the matter?" he demanded, with a show of heat. "What have I done now?"

"Certainly not the unexpected," she said quietly. "Merely ignored me in your ordinary, everyday, man god, superior fashion. Naturally it counted for nothing, my telling you that I had no idea of going to Sydney. Go to Sydney I must, because you, in your superior wisdom, have so decreed."

She paused and looked at him curiously, as though he were some strange breed of animal.

"Of course I am grateful for your offer of assistance; but even that is no salve to wounded pride. For that matter, it is no more than one white man should expect from another. Shipwrecked mariners are always helped along their way. Only this particular mariner doesn't need any help. Furthermore, this mariner is not going to Sydney, thank you."

"But what do you intend to do?"

"Find some spot where I shall escape the indignity of being patronized and bossed by the superior sex."

"Come now; that is putting it a bit too strongly." Sheldon laughed, but the strain in his voice destroyed the effect of spontaneity. "You know yourself how impossible the situation is."

"I know nothing of the sort, sir. And if it is impossible, well, haven't I achieved it?"

"But it cannot continue. Really"—

"Oh, yes, it can. Having achieved it, I can go on achieving it. I intend to remain in the Solomons, but not on Berande. Tomorrow I am going to take the whaleboat over to Pari-Sulay. I was talking with Captain Young about it. He says there are at least four hundred acres, and every foot of it good for planting. First, I'll buy the island; next, get forty or fifty recruits and start clearing and planting; and at the same time I'll run up a bungalow; and then you'll be relieved of my embarrassing presence—now don't say that it isn't."

"It is embarrassing," he said bluntly. "But you refuse to see my point of view, so there is no use in discussing it. Now please forget all about it and consider me at your service concerning this—this project of yours. Suppose the government sells you Pari-Sulay at a pound an acre, clearing will cost you at least £4 more—that is, £5 for 400 acres, or, say, $10,000. Have you that much?"

"No; I haven't quite $3,000."

"Then here's another way of looking at it: You'll need, as you said, at least fifty boys. Not counting premiums, their wages are $30 a year."

"I pay my Tahitians $15 a month," she interpolated.

"They won't do on straight plantation work. But to return. The wages of fifty boys each year will come to £300—that is, $1,500. Very well. It will be seven years before your trees begin to bear. Seven times $1,500 is $10,500—more than you possess, and all eaten up by the boys' wages, with nothing to pay for bungalow, building, tools, quinine, trips to Sydney and so forth."

Sheldon shook his head gravely. "You'll have to abandon the idea."

"But I won't go to Sydney," she cried. "I simply won't. I'll buy in to the extent of my money as a small partner in some other plantation. Let me buy it in Berande?"

"Heaven forbid!" he cried in such genuine dismay that she broke into hearty laughter.

"There, I won't tease you. Really, you know, I'm not accustomed to forcing my presence where it is not desired. Yet as you said yourself, it was impossible for me to go away, so I had to stay. You wouldn't let me go to Tulagi. You compelled me to force myself upon you. But I won't buy in as partner with any one. I'll buy Pari-Sulay, but I'll put only ten boys on it and clear slowly. Also, I'll invest in some old ketch and take out a trading license. For that matter, I'll go recruiting on Malaita."

She looked for protest and found it in Sheldon's clenched hand and in every line of his clean cut face.

"Go ahead and say it," she challenged. "Please don't mind me. I'm—I'm getting used to it, you know. Really I am."

"I wish I were a woman so as to tell you how preposterously insane and impossible it is," he blurted out.

"Better than that, you are a man. So there is nothing to prevent your telling me, for I demand to be considered as a man. I didn't come down here to trail my woman's skirts over the Solomons. Please forget that I am accidentally anything else than a man with a man's living to make."

"I have told you," he began stiffly, "that recruiting on Malaita is impossible for a woman and that is all I care to say—or dare."

"And I tell you, in turn, that it is nothing of the sort. I am a navigator, and that is more than your Solomons captains are. And I am a seaman—a better seaman than you, when it comes right down to it and you know it. I can shoot. I am not a fool. I can take care of myself."

Sheldon made a hopeless gesture.

"That's right," she rattled on. "Wash your hands of me. But as Von used to say, 'You just watch my smoke!' I suppose you've been accustomed to Jane Eyres all your life. That's why you don't understand me. Come on, Satan; let's leave him to his old music."

He watched her morosely and without intention of speaking, till he saw her take a rifle from the stand, examine the magazine and start for the door.

"Where are you going?" he asked peremptorily.

"As between man and woman," she answered, "it would be too terribly—or—indecent for you to tell me why I shouldn't go alligatoring. Good night. Sleep well."

He shut off the phonograph with a snap, started toward the door after her, then abruptly flung himself into a chair.

"You're hoping a 'gator catches me, aren't you?" she called from the veranda, and as she went down the steps her rippling laughter drifted tantalizingly back through the wide doorway.

The next day Sheldon was left all alone. Joan had gone exploring Pari-Sulay and was not to be expected back until the late afternoon. The loss of the Jessie had hit Berande severely. Not alone was his capital depleted by the amount of her value, but her earnings were no longer to be reckoned on, and it was her earnings that largely paid the running expenses of the plantation.

"Poor old Hughie," he muttered aloud once. "I'm glad you didn't live to see it, old man. What a cropper, what a cropper."

Between squalls the Flibberty Gibbet ran into anchorage, and her skipper, Pete Oleson (brother to the Oleson of the Jessie), ancient, grizzled, wild-eyed, emaciated by fever, dragged his weary frame up the veranda steps and collapsed in a steamer chair. Whisky and soda kept him going while he made report and turned in his accounts.

"You're rotten with fever," Sheldon said. "Why don't you run down to Sydney for a blow of decent climate?"

The old skipper shook his head.

"I can't. I've been in the islands too long. I'd die. The fever comes out worse down there."

"Kill or cure," Sheldon counselled.

"It's straight kill for me. I tried it three years ago. The cool weather put me on my back before I landed. They carried me ashore and into hospital. I was unconscious one stretch for two weeks. After that the doctors sent me back to the islands—said it was the only thing that would save me. Well, I'm still alive. But I'm too soaked with fever. A month in Australia would finish me."

In Central America many natives are gathering the seeds of this plant, Cedron Seed, a rare medicine that has valuable curative powers. But few drug stores carry this seed, owing to the high cost of the article.

This country is a large consumer of this costly seed because it enters into the famous catarrh remedy, Peruna, sold the world over.

FACTORY AND FARM

Together They Build up the Ideal Home Market

No better example of the interdependence of the manufacturing and agricultural interests is required than Ontario. It is not necessary to go into the enormous industrial expansion in the province in the last two years. This is everywhere evident. But what of the farm? The field crops of Ontario last year were valued at $250,000,000 or an average of $1,666 from each of the 150,000 farms. Five years ago, the value of Ontario's agricultural output was placed at 140 millions, and ten years ago it was not more than a hundred millions. The number of farms to share in that one hundred millions was larger then than now, so that the average income of each farm was considerably less than $1,666. In fact, the average income in 1901 was about $600, according to calculations made from statistics published by the Department of Agriculture. This means that the Ontario farm of to-day is giving its owner returns that are at least 160 per cent. greater than they were in 1901. The growing value of the output of the farms can only result in one thing, and that is the increased value of the land. Thus, the latest records of the assessment of the rural areas show that the farm lands of Ontario are worth over $106,000,000 more than in the first years of the last decade. To make the comparison still more striking, the assessed rural land of Ontario is worth $10 an acre more than in 1901, and another significant fact is that the area of these lands has extended in the last ten years fully 1,50,000 acres.

What is true of Ontario also applies to Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island. The greatest prosperity is where a fertile farming district is tributary to a good factory town. The one helps the other. The best market for the local farmer is the home market and the best produce for the citizen is from the nearby farms and gardens.

CANADIAN WORKINGMEN

Living and Working Under Better Conditions Than in England

The British Board of Trade has issued a complete and thorough description of working class conditions which serve as a comparison with conditions under which Canadian workingmen are living to-day. Take Birmingham as typical of Old Country industrial centres. There are prevalent types of houses have three and five rooms respectively. Nearly 30 per cent. of the population live in 3-room houses. Any person familiar with Canadian cities must recognise that the homes of the working classes, particularly those of skilled artisans, are a great improvement on this. In Hamilton, the predominant type of workman's dwelling is a five-roomed cottage, attached to which in nearly every case is a garden. These houses are practically all furnished with sanitary appliances. But the significant point does not lie so much in the character of the house as in the fact that in the majority of instances, the workman owns his own home. In fact, it has been estimated that at least seventy per cent. of the men employed in Hamilton factories either own their house outright or are engaged in purchasing them with their savings.

Next as to wages. In Birmingham payment is by piece work in many instances and individual earnings show considerable variations. This works out to about 19 cents an hour for a 54 hour week and the building trades, 16½ cents an hour in the engineering trades, and 15 cents an hour in the printing trades. Wages in the Canadian city are very much in excess of these rates. Bricklayers now receive 48 to 60 cents an hour, at least twice as much as similar workmen earn in Birmingham. Carpenters get 37c. an hour. Printers earn $17 a week or 36 cents an hour for a 48 hour week. Skilled mechanics earn an average of 35½c. an hour. In short, wages in the Canadian city range about one hundred per cent. higher than those in England. But of course, the cost of living is decidedly greater in Canada. The Birmingham artisan gets his three-roomed dwelling for about four or five dollars a month, while for a five-roomed house he pays approximately $6.00 to $7.20 a month. To compare this rental with that in Hamilton, somewhat similar accommodation should be selected. A five-roomed house of about the same character as the Birmingham house could be had for $10 or $12 a month, the Canadian rents being from 60 per cent. to 66 2-3 per cent. higher.

Combining the elements of wages, rents and food costs, and noting that, while wages are double in Canada, rents are only two-thirds greater and food very little higher, it must be evident that the workingman is much better off financially in Canadian city.

WHILE every man, whether he works for others or for himself, should carry a LIFE INSURANCE POLICY. There is especial need of this on the part of the man who is IN BUSINESS FOR HIMSELF. In the case of such a one's death the proceeds of a policy may mean not merely the usual financial protection for his dependents—they may be the means of saving a profitable business from disruption and a family from serious loss. Every enterprising business man occasionally contracts obligations which he cannot immediately pay, but which, if he retains his health and strength, he manages to cancel in course of time. Sometimes, however, death prevents the payment of business debts that were fully warranted by the outlook when they were incurred. To compel payment of these debts out of the policy-holder's regular estate might greatly embarass his family. But if the head of the firm is insured for an adequate sum, the pressing indebtedness may be met, the business saved, without embarassing the family, and either carried on successfully or sold to good advantage.

On his own account also, a business man should be eager to insure his life for as much as he can conveniently pay premiums on. The business man's credit is always improved by the fact that he has had his life well insured. A Life Insurance Policy, therefore, is a good asset and should be considered indispensable by any one who is conducting a business of his own.

Remember that the late Cyrus W. Field was said to be worth at one time $20,000,000, yet he did not leave a dollar to his family, except his Life Insurance.

Life Insurance is the one asset that never deteriorates at death.

The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada will give you the protection you need. Call, phone or write them—

P. C. McGINTY GROWS SOME FREAK TOMATOES

Police Constable McGinty, finds opportunity during his leisure time at home to do a little gardening and raise a few vegetables. He has been particularly successful this year in spite of unfavorable weather and he now has a wonderful specimen of freak tomato growth on exhibition in the windows of W. H. Hamilton's grocery store on Simcoe street. There are fifteen tomatoes clustered on one shoot, all, however, being joined together by the stems which have interwoven themselves throughout the cluster. All the tomatoes have attained a good growth and save for one, that is at the top of the bunch, they are all a nice healthy red. Why the one which is yet green failed to assume the same color as its companions is not only a mystery to P.C. McGinty, but to all who have viewed the collection. "Charlie" is being heartily congratulated on his successful gardening and if he can continue to grow tomatoes in such fashion, his fortune is assured.

Good Meeting Held at Home of Mrs. Kendry

The Mission Study Class in connection with the Women's Missionary Society of the George street Methodist church held their first meeting last night at the home of Mrs. Jas. Kendry, 754 Water street. In spite of the weather there was a good attendance and much interest was shown in the carrying out of the program prepared for this season's work. At the conclusion of the business, refreshments were served. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Geo. Curtis, 690 Aylmer street, on the evening of Tuesday, October 15.

MUSICAL

Bandmaster Gliddon has secured the extremely beautiful and descriptive musical selection for the use of the Regimental Band, known as "Fantasia Pastorale," arranged by M. Retford, the celebrated composer, and written by Kling. The piece is intended to convey the idea of a shepherd's life in the Alps and is specially arranged for the use of regimental bands and orchestras.

The opening bars are played Andante and softly. The breaking of the day is ushered in by the clear, echoing sound of the mountaineer's horn. Later as the sun floods valley and mountain and life begins to awaken, sounds ring out loud deep and prolonged. The cymbals are introduced with splendid effect and the awakening of nature is most ably depicted. The song of the nightingale can also be detected. In the next part the sound of cow bells is heard, and the calls of the quail and the cuckoo, the flute and oboe being called into play.

Then follows the shepherd's morning song, heralded by a beautiful clarionet solo, and the sustained echoing of the horns. The departure for the Alps played an octave higher, and is so realistically composed that the scene is almost conjured up mentally. The delicate, but expressive love scene follows as the mountaineer woos the laughing mountain lass, the bars being rendered with expression and very softly.

The storm scene in the mountains brings out some splendid musical force, in which the bass drum and the cymbal are used to strengthen the impression. Perhaps the conclusion of the composition, the prayer of thanksgiving, is the most beautiful portion of the entire number.

The 57th Regimental Band intend performing the number in the near future.

"ENGLISH BARMAIDS" IN CANADA

The English are conservative to the backbone, despite having elected a Liberal Government in which Messrs. H. H. Asquith and David Lloyd George figure so prominently and in their adherence to the old style of being served in bars by young women, they perhaps exhibit their greatest conservatism. It is often remarked that pretty nurses not infrequently marry their patients, and just in the same way, it is no uncommon thing for an English barmaid to marry a rich frequenter of hotel or club—for even in many clubs the presiding genius at the bar is of the female sex.

EDNE MOLLON

This preamble leads up the engagement of Alex. Loftus and John Lubbock's "All English" company in "THE NEW BARMAID," musical comedy, at the Grand Opera House on Friday and Saturday, Sept. 27 and 28. The locale of "The New Barmaid," is laid in England, first act at the Owlett's Club, London, and second act on the bank of the Thames near Henley. Although, naturally the New Barmaid at the club figures prominently in the story of the play, she does not by any means exclusively control the interest—far from it, as Alexander Loftus, the celebrated comedian, playing the role of "Bertie White" a Clubman, has an exceptionally strong comedy part.

"The New Barmaid" is a clean, wholesome, genuinely funny musical comedy of the best type, just full of fun and life and gaiety, and is played by an exceptionally strong "All English" cast, headed by Alexander Loftus, and including Misses Edne Mollon and Lillie Leslie, in the principal female roles, and Messrs. Vincent Erne, R. N. Cory, James Wilson, Norman Clark, and other English actors in the chief male parts. An added attraction is the picked chorus of twenty pretty English girls, and an augmented orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Basil Horsfall.

Works Absolutely Necessary Will Alone Receive Attention During The Balance of the Year—No Action in the King Case—New Bridge Across the Otonabee—How Much Did the White Elephant Cost.

The City Council met in special session last evening, with the following members present: Mayor Bradburn, Ald. Anderson, Graham, Johnston Gordon, Duffus, Buller and Duncan and Gillespie.

Mr. D. O'Connell, representing the Peterborough Cereal Company, waited upon the Council, informing them that the company desired to secure the piece of land on Simcoe street, known as the River reserve, granted them seven years ago by special legislation. The conditions of the agreement at that time were that if the company should construct an addition to their plant and increase their number of employes, or in the event of their not complying, they could secure the land by payment of $1,000. In 1909, five years later, another special agreement was made granting the company the right to secure the land for the same amount, at any time without waiting for the expiration of ten years, as stipulated in the first agreement.

Mr. O'Connell stated that the Peterborough Cereal Co. are ready now to advance the $1,000. It appears, however, that the C.P.R. wish to divert Simcoe street, which may interfere with the company's plans. Mr. O'Connell, therefore, requested that a meeting of representatives of the C.P.R. and the Council should be held to endeavor to reach an understanding in the matter.

Mayor Bradburn assured Mr. O'Connell that the Council would take the matter up.

It was finally moved that the matter be referred to the Manufacturers' Committee, who will report back to the Council at the next regular meeting.

DALHOUSIE STREET BRIDGE.

Ald. Buller read the report of the City Engineer containing his estimate cost of the construction of the bridge at the foot of Dalhousie street without any provision for carrying a street railway track. The price was $69,700. Later it was moved that a by-law be submitted to the ratepayers in January, 1913, recommending the construction of the bridge at a cost of $69,700.—Carried.

DR. KING'S SUIT.

The question of the threatened suit of Dr. King against the city was raised and came in for some discussion. Ald. Buller claimed that evidence could be produced to show that the horse of Dr. King was a kicker, and that the cement mixer was not responsible for the accident.

Ald. Gordon said the circumstances had been reported to him, and that the city should be careful, and if the city was not responsible it might be the wisest matter to come to terms, seeing the suit was for such a small amount.

Ald. Buller—"I don't think the city should be weak-kneed about the matter and afraid to take the matter into court."

Ald. Gordon reminded the Council that it might terminate in a suit much like the recent G. H. Hatton case at the time he was given judgment against the city for a large amount.

Major Bradburn thought it was a case of where Dr. King might have used a little common sense at the time.

Moved by Ald. Gordon and Duncan, that clause 10, relating to Dr. King's suit, be struck out of the report of the Board of Works. The motion failed to carry and was left in abeyance.

The report of the Board, however, was received and adopted, with the exception of the one clause.

BOARD OF WORKS OVERDRAFT.

Ald. Buller, true to his promise in committee, brought in an itemized account of the expenditures of the Board of Works, which has resulted in overspending their appropriation. A summarized statement is appended:

Expended for special work since Aug. 31st, 1912......$ 2432.35
Expended to Sept. 12st 18464.93

Total expenditure... ...$20,896.28

In commenting on his report, the people's candidate vigorously denounced the present method that the city adopts in doing road work. He felt for one that it was about time some permanent road improvement work was started.

"To my mind we are just playing with road works."

Later on Ald. Buller stated that he would give an exact statement of what the Romaine street sewer had cost.

The matter of securing funds to carry on the operations of the Board perplexed the Council. In this connection Ald. Buller thought there was much unnecessary expenditure by the city in connection with laying crossings and special work not provided for in the appropriation, such as the south end extension and similar work.

Ald. Anderson reported that no other fund or appropruiation could be drawn upon, so far as a close investigation into the monies provided for the committees showed. He thought the only plan in sight was to wind up all the Board of Works operations as quickly as possible.

Ald. Johnston's opinion on future operations was to put two-thirds of the expenditures into permanent road work, and place a responsible man in charge of these expenditures in each ward.

Ald. Graham inquired what amount was now required to finish the Romaine street sewer.

Mayor Bradburn—"I, or no other member of this Council can answer that question. The roadway is sinking, and if it does any damage to the Church of the Sacred Heart, Mr. O'Connell has said they will hold the city responsible."

"How much do we owe Mr. Chipman?" asked Ald. Graham.

Ald. Anderson—"We don't owe him anything."

Ald. Graham—"I think we ought to bring an action against Mr. Chipman."

Ald. Buller thought it was no use gidding around about a matter of a couple of hundred dollars. When damage was done to the church the city would be called upon to face a suit for several thousand dollars.

Moved by Ald. Duncan and Johnston, that the Board of Works proceed with just such work as is absolutely necessary, the cost of same not to exceed $1,500.—Carried.

MORE INFORMATION NEEDED BEFORE FINAL DECISION IS MADE BY TEMPERANCE PEOPLE

Committee of Church Representatives Took up the Local Option Question Behind Closed Doors—A Sub-committee Appointed to Secure Further Information After Which The Question Will be Decided

A final decision as regards a campaign and vote, in the interests of local option for Peterborough, still hangs fire.

At the meeting of church representatives, in the Y. M. C. A. last night, it was resolved to continue the campaign, but as full information on the subject was not to hand a sub-committee was appointed for the purpose of securing this information, this committee to report within the next week or ten days.

Then, reinforced with the committee's report, another meeting will be held and the question will be brought to a head.

Among those present at the meeting last night were Rev. J. R. Weld, Rev. Chas. E. Cragg, Rev. W. C Riddiford, H. B. Cowan, A. B. Cunningham, Richard Lees, H. P. Lindsay, G. W. Powell, Andrew Brown.

The meeting last night being that of a committee, press representatives were not admitted.

In conversation with one of the gentlemen who attended the meeting, a Review representative learned his opinion, which was that the discussions would materialize into a decision to ask the people to vote on the question.

NO EXTENSION OF THE CITY FIRE LIMITS WILL BE MADE

At the meeting of the City Council Ald. Gordon brought in a resolution favoring the extension of the fire limits in the city farther south and west.

The motion was,—That the City Solicitor be authorized to amend the fire bylaw, extending the limits west, to and along the east side of Stewart street, and south to and along the north side of Dalhousie street.—The motion lost.

Mr. Gordon contended that there was danger of fire from the proximity of locomotives passing south on Bethune street.

It was also moved and carried that the Council be supplied with a list of patients and the amount of the expenses of the Queen Mary Hospital, from Jan. 1st. to Sept. 21st.

PRINCESS STREET RESIDENTS TO WAIT FOR NEW OUTFALL SEWER

Alex. Choinard, of Princess street, on behalf of the ratepayers on that street, appeared before the Board of Health yesterday afternoon with the request that they be provided with a sewer connection.

These people have the waterworks and are paying for the same, but the system is of little use without the sewer.

The Mayor advised that better result would be given the residents of this street when the outfall sewer, as ordered by the Provincial Board of Health, was constructed. This work must be done.

The city engineer was called before the Board for a report, and as his opinion was practically the same as Mayor Bradburn, no action was taken.

Mr. Hall, of Dalhousie street, asked for a sewer, and his request was granted. It is necessary to construct the connection of about 300 feet for his sole benefit.

The M.H.O. was given authority to purchase a milk tester at a cost of about $5. This tester shows all evidences of dirt.

Fear Competition From W[illegible]

Cardiff, Wales, Sept. 25.—The law society of Cardiff is opposed to women practicing law. A resolution in favor of the admission of women to the bar was defeated at the annual meeting of the society yesterday. The resolution also urged the council of the society to support a bill that is to be introduced in Parliament enabling women to practice. The chief ground for this opposition, it was said, was that competition by women would be injurious to men who practice law.

THERE'S PLENTY OF ACTIVITY AT THE Y.M.C.A.

The Young Men's Christian Association last night presented a sight that would have cheered the hearts of every citizen interested in the welfare of young men. The building was a veritable hive of activity. Every room was occupied to good advantage and about a hundred men and boys were busy at different activities. Probably the best sight was the working boys' class on the gymnasium floor. Twenty-four boys took the regular exercise in this class. All of the secretaries were busy serving the members and making things attractive for them. New members are joining daily and it is predicted that 1912 will be a banner year for the Association.

BY-LAW TO BE PREPARED AND PLACED BEFORE THE VOTERS IN NEAR FUTURE

Hon. Adam Beck's Letter to the Council Giving Prices for Power---By-law Will Call For the Borrowing of $88,000.

That a by-law be prepared and submitted to the ratepayers, authorizing the issuing of debentures for $88,000 for the acquirement of the distribution plant of the Peterborough Light and Power Company and the extending and improving of the plant. Carried.

The foregoing resolution was evolved by Ald. Gordon, seconded by Ald. Buller, following the discussion which ensued after the reading of Hon. Adam Beck's quotation of the cost of hydro-electric, and his letter to the Council which is given herewith—

W. H. Bradburn,
Mayor,
Peterborough.

Dear Sir— In pursuance with the Peterborough deputation, I desire to say that the Hydro Electric Power Commission's estimate of the cost of power for the municipality of Peterboro, as given in the reports to the city in April 1911, is the estimate upon which you may calculate at the present time. If it should be found later that the Commission cannot supply power in accordance with that estimate, the Commission will not enter into a contract with the municipality without the ratepayers having an opportunity to give the matter further consideration. And further, that the power will be develvoped as the city's requirements call for.

Yours truly,
HON. ADAM BECK.

The April 1911 reports referred to are as follows—

Continuous 24 hour service—

Average cost on basis of 2750 h.p. delivered, $15.95 h. p.

Limited hour and 10 hour service

The estimated value of the distribution plant of the Peterborough Light and Power Company is $58000. The estimated cost of the underground work would be $80,000. The underground operations provide for the lighting of George and Charlotte streets, with cluster lights at intervals.

Various members of the Council expressed themselves upon the proposition, and all were practically unanimous in the opinion that Hon. Adam Beck's figures were not just what was expected. That a more definite figure should have been quoted was the consensus of opinion. However, all Council were favorable to the proposal to submit the by-law to ratepayers just as speedily as feasible.

Ald. Gordon stated that the City should certainly aim to own her own lighting system.

Ald. Anderson—"I feel that the prices quoted are indefinite, and also the estimated cost of the plant, and that there should have been fuller information submitted. The price to the consumer is also indefinite."

Ald. Duffus was of the same opinion.

Ald. Gordon remarked that he would have like to see the Hydro-Electric do more than merely supply light to Peterboro. He would like to have seen them take over the Seymour Power Company in addition. However, he favored giving to the people all the information that was available on the subject, so that the rate-payers would then be in a position to realize just where they stand. The indefinite part of the Hydro Commission's quotation however, was the absence of a net rate, and there was a possibility of jeopardizing the success of the by-law if submitted under those conditions.

Mayor Bradburn sized up the situation, when he asserted that the City Council had done all they could and that he felt justified therefore, in submitting the by-law as outlined. If the people then failed to carry it, why, it was not the fault of the Council, and they could feel that they had performed all that was in their power to perform.

WEDDING BELLS

BUCK—SAWERS.

The marriage of Miss Marguerite G. (Daisy), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Sawers, to Mr. Charles Stuart Buck, M.A., son of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Buck, Port Rowan, took place on Wednesday morning in St. Luke's Anglican Church. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Frederick J. Sawers, M.A., brother of the bride. The church was artistically decorated for the occasion. Mrs. Greenslade, organist of the church played the wedding music. The bride who was given away by her father, was becomingly attired in her travelling suit of tan serge, with a Paris hat of tan moire and black chiffon velvet, with willow plume and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Maude H. Rush, gowned in a blue and gold shot silk dress, and large black hat, and carried yellow chrysanthemums. Dr. Harold Buck, Toronto, brother of the groom was best man. During the signing of the register Mrs. S. Dickson Hall, cousin of the bride, sang very sweetly "Oh Promise Me." The ushers were Mr. S. Dickson Hall and Mr. Harry Rush, manager of the Dominion Bank, Windsor. After the ceremony a reception was held at St. Luke's Rectory. Mr and Mrs. Buck left to spend their honeymoon in Ottawa and eastern points, and upon their return will reside in Port Rowan.

ARMSTRONG—WOOD.

At Bensfort on Wednesday, at the hour of 12 o'clock, the home of Mr. James Wood (Lakeview) was the scene of a very pretty but quiet wedding, when his only daughter, Amy Frances, was united in holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. James Stanley Armstrong, of Springville, eldest son of Mr. John Armstrong.

The ceremony, performed by Rev. F. W. White, of Fraserville, took place in the drawing room under an arch of evergreens, asters and ferns. The bride, who was given away by her father, was attired in a handsome gown of pearl grey satin with pearl ornament and trimmings, and wore the bridal veil caught with lily of the valley, and carried a sheaf of white asters and maidenhair fern. She wore the groom's gift, a sunburst of pearls. Only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties were present. The gifts were numerous and costly, showing the high esteem in which the young couple are held, one being a handsome set of silver, presented to the bride the Friday evening previous by the young people of the vicinity.

After the wedding breakfast the happy couple took the 4.38 train at Kendry for Toronto and other points west, the bride travelling in a grey broadcloth suit with black beaver hat.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong will reside at Balsam Grove, North Monaghan, and be at home to their friends after the middle of October.

ADVISED TO USE THE MONEY IN THE BANK

John Ward Said He Has an Account of $50 in Lindsay

Having hands as soft, small and white as those of any girl, but otherwise distinctly seedy in appearance, a man named John Ward appeared before Police Magistrate Dumble this morning to face a charge of vagrancy.

Ward tramped into the city via the railroad route, and his clothes in several spots told a story of hard usage. His face and general bearing were rather superior and intelligent, and he was plainly one of those unfortunate individuals to whom Dame Fortune had once been more kind.

An impediment in his speech caused him to stutter badly.

He managed to say that he came from Fenelon Falls, and that he occasionally took a drink. His hands bore no signs of being calloused, causing Magistrate Dumble to remark that he was evidently not very strong. The man claimed to have $50 in a bank in Lindsay. His Worship ordered him to make tracks in that direction as rapidly as possible and live upon his money.

Hugh Gibbs, 383 Bethune street, was taken into custody yesterday for becoming noisy while intoxicated. When in that condition Gibbs becomes particularly violent; when sober he is a regular worker. He was allowed ten days in which to find a $2 fine.

SUCCESSFUL REHEARSAL

Chorus of Fifty at First Practice of Choral Society

St. George's Choral Society held their initial practice last night in the assembly hall of the Collegiate Institute. Fifty voices turned out in the wet weather, and spent two hours in wrestling with the difficult chorus work of Handel's "Messiah." A pleasing incident was the invitation extended to Mr. John Allan by Mr. R. J. Devey to conduct the first chorus of the 'Messiah' 'And the Glory.' Mr. Allan, in accepting the courtesy, urged all singers in Peterborough to rally to the practices and be regular in attendance.

Later in the evening Mr. Allan presided at the piano for the "Hallelujah Chorus." Miss Flowers accompanied the main portion of the practice. Mr. Coleman, president, spoke a few words as to the future of the society, and all the members of the choir were delighted with the splendid room in which they rehearsed.

TO WIND UP CANADIAN LEAGUE AFFAIRS FOR 1912

Local Club Wants $400 From Ottawa—Meeting Next Wednesday.

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 25.—President James Fitzgerald of the Canadian Baseball League, has called the annual meeting for Wednesday of next week, at the Prince George, when affairs for this season will be wound up and plans made for 1913. The [illegible] for [illegible] Day gate and Ottawa's kick for $400 which [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] in August. President Fitzgerald explained to-day that the batting and fielding averages [illegible] at this meeting [illegible] has been paused through the failure of the Brantford scorer to send in his "dope."

It is probable that the Canadian League will become a six club organization for next year. President Fitzgerald is convinced that one or two of the smaller towns must go. He is now working up a scheme which may result satisfactorily to all concerned. It is said, in fact, that Guelph and Berlin will be dropped and that Toronto will enter as well as Montreal, thus making a six club circuit to include Ottawa, Montreal, Toronto, London, Hamilton and Brantford. If Montreal does not secure a franchise the St. Thomas team will be retained. Mr. Fitzgerald is very optimistic about the Canadian League's prospects, and predicts a banner season in 1913. Frank Shaughnessy will come up to represent Ottawa at next week's league meeting.

FOUR FAVORITES WIN.

Woodbine Attendance Suffers From Steady Rainfall.

Toronto, Sept. 25.—There were several features at the Woodbine yesterday. The attendance was the smallest since the days of Bonnie Duke and Harry Cooper, not more than 2,500 being at the course. Four favorites finished in front:— Caper Sauce, Paris Queen, Leochares and Union Jack.

AMBASSADOR DIES.

Von Bieberstein Had Been Envoy to Britain Since Last May.

Badenweiler, Baden, Germany, Sept 25.—Germany's most powerful and brilliant diplomat, Baron Adolf Marschall von Bieberstein, died here yesterday after a short illness.

The baron, who had occupied the position of German ambassador in London only since May this year, had come here to take a course of alkaline water treatment and was in comparatively good health until a week ago. Then he suddenly fell ill. The baron had suffered from an attack of influenza earlier in the year, and his death is attributed to the aftereffects of that malady and to his strenuous work in London since his appointment to the embassy there.

The baron, who was a native of Baden, often visited his old home. He was nearly 70 years of age, having been born at Neuershausen on Oct. 12, 1842.

His appointment to London at a critical time was generally supposed to be fraught with great significance. Baron Marschall von Bieberstein was regarded as one of the most accomplished diplomats throughout the world. Since the death of Bismarck he had been considered as Germany's "strong man." In fact, he stepped into the shoes of Bismarck when he left office in 1890, becoming on April 1, of that year secretary of state for foreign affairs. In 1894 he became Prussian minister of state, and three years later the Emperor, recognizing his abilities as a statesman, appointed him ambassador to Turkey. He remained at Constantinople over fourteen years.

War With Turkey Useless.

Belgrade, Servia, Sept. 25.—No benefit could be obtaind by the Balkan nations through a war with Turkey, according to a declaration said to have been made by the diplomatic representatives of Great Britain, France and Russia during a call at the Servia Foreign Office yesterday. The Stampa is the authority for the report of the foreign diplomats' action, and it adds that the three powers at the same time expressed their intention of inducing Turkey to introduce early reforms in Macedonia.

In spite of official denials that there is any prospect of hostilities, the Servian War Office continues to purchase large quantities of food supplies.

He Knows His Own Road.

Few men can ride over 1,500 to 2,000 miles of railway and not only know every mile of it, but also have located the route and been finally responsible for its construction. Yet this is the record of H. H. MacLeod, general manager of the C.N.R. Western lines, of which he was chief engineer before becoming general manager.

His knowledge of the road and country led to his appointment. Before his appointment, Mr. MacLeod, along with Vice-President Hanna, was making an inspection trip over the Western lines. There joined the party one of the heads of an American steel corporation making railway equipment, a shrewd judge of men, who backs his favorable estimates of men with millions of capital. He saw what was going on and heard the discussion that took place in the observation end of the private car. On the second day he leaned over to a fellow-traveler and said: "They are looking for a general manager, and the papers are talking about some one from the States. There is the man they need," pointing to MacLeod. "I'd make him general manager right now. Why, he knows everything about the system, and the way he handled the Boards of Trade and Town Councils of the towns we passed through, shows he knows how to handle men. Yes, sir, that's the man I'd appoint general manager." A month afterwards Sir William Mackenzie appointed MacLeod general manager of the Western lines.—Star Weekly.

Two Famous Blacks.

Mr. Peter Ryan, the Toronto registrar, who has been in the public eye in connection with the Farmers Bank enquiry, has a ready Irish wit which was amusingly illustrated some years ago when he was an alderman. With a Scotch member of the City Council he had been invited to a picnic of the colored citizens of old St. John's Ward, and was called upon for an address, in the course of which he used the following words:

"Gentlemen, I feel that there is a great bond between us, for I belong to the Irish race, which has been wronged for centuries, even as your race has been wronged. Yet we can pride ourselves that our races have done wonderful things for our oppressors. Where would the British Empire be if it was not for the Irish? And as for your race, where would England be to-day if it had not been for the Black Prince, and what would Scotland have been without the Black Douglas?"

This was too much for the Scotch alderman. Leaning over to Mr. Ryan, he said in a loud whisper: "Peter, I dinna ken aboot the Black Prince, but I'll stake my oath the Black Douglas was a Scotchman, and no an African." —Toronto Star Weekly.

No Sporting Blood.

If it be treason, then all right.
I do not care where fishes bite.
I'm satisfied to let them be
So long as they do not bite me.
I may bite them when on the dish,
But some one first must catch the fish.
So I repeat, to make it plain,
That fishing is to me inane.

Some people like their hook to bait
And in the water stand and wait
For fish to come and make a meal
Of their half hidden hook of steel.
There in the water, mud and slime
They claim they have a lovely time,
[illegible] while [illegible]
If they can catch a two cent fish.

And should they land a finny prize
It elevates them to the skies,
Gives them a feeling that they are Superior to those, by far,
Who do not try with line to score,
But buy their fishes at the store.
If only little ones they land,
They fabricate to beat the band.

I know it is a crime, in short,
[illegible] about the sport,
To quite emphatically decline
To monkey with the hook and line,
Not to be tempted to the stream
Where fishermen of [illegible] dream,
But as I feel as I have said,
If it be treason shoot me dead.

A Relic of 1812.

A relic of the old days of the War of 1812, probably was unearthed recently in putting in a sewer in Toronto when a gang of laborers struck portions of the skeleton of what was once a large sized man. The bones found were in a remarkable state of preservation.

The discovery of the skeleton brings vividly to mind the stirring days of 1812, when Canada, but a very weak colony, was attacked by the armies and fleets of the United States. A large number of American soldiers were killed in an engagement with the British troops at the place where the skeleton was found, and it is probably the remains of one of these soldiers that were unearthed.

R. L. BORDEN THEIR GUEST

CANADA AND THE EMPIRE

The Future of the Dominion Linked With That of the Mother Land —The Premier's Speech

"Although the Dominions of this Empire may be sundered by oceans, for the preservation of its unity, for the preservation of its power and influence, and for the maintenance of its work, the Motherland and the Dominions are one and indivisible."

This was the concluding sentence in the speech of the Right Honorable R. L. Borden at the banquet given him on Monday evening in the Arena, Toronto, by the Board of Trade of that city. This was, probably the greatest function of the kind ever held in Canada. The tables, occupying the entire floor of the Arena, had accommodation for fifteen hundred, and every chair was occupied. The seats fo the spectators rose tier on tier from the tables to sides and ends of the area, uroviding accommodation for five thousand visitors, and all were occupied.

Devotion to the Empire and the British institutions was the prevailing note of the various speeches and first found expression in the address to Mr. Borden by the Board of Trade, read by the President, Mr. G. T. Somers, who said in part:

"We welcome you in certain confidence that if through intercourse with British Ministers you feel that Great Britain is at a crisis in its fortunes you will ask the Parliament of Canada for such an immediate and such an adequate contribution towards naval defence as will at least discharge some portion of the long and great obligation of Canada to the Mother Country, and which will finally convince the world that the overseas dominions will not flinch from any duty or any sacrifice necessary to maintain the absolute unity and security of the Empire."

Sir James Whitney in proposing the health of "Our Guest" praised the course Mr. Borden took while in England. He referred to other great Caadians who had with distinction represented Canada at Imperial functions and discussions and added:

"I am bound to confess that no other Canadian ambassador has had the honor to sit in the gallery set apart for strangers and listen while the Prime Minister of Great Britain declared to the listening Commons of Great Britain the thanks which he and bis Government and the British people felt it their duty to give our distinguished ambassador."

Mr. Borden's Speech

Mr. Borden in rising to reply was given a great ovation, the entire audience rising to wave handkerchiefs and cheer. The Prime Minister said that while abroad he and his colleagues had received greetings which would always remain in their memories but the deep-voiced whole-hearted Canadian greeting was in truth the best of all. He continued as follows:

"We in Canada are big enough and broad-minded enough to realise that whether we be Liberals or Conservatives, whether we follow the one party banner, or the other, we are all inspired alike by the desire to see our country take her proper place in this great Empire of ours, and before the nations of the world. So, perhaps, it is in that spirit, possibly because you have been good enough to give me the credit of endeavoring to do my duty as I see it, that I am receiving this right, royal welcome from the citizens of this province and this city.

"I realize as well as you do that in Britain it was not a reception to me or my colleagues which met us on every hand; it was indeed a greeting to you, to this great Dominion, which in days gone by has taken so great a part and in the years to come will take a still greater part in the work and in the influence of the Empire. We are happy here to-night to see above us the Crown, the symbol of that tie which binds us all together in the Empire."

A Proud Heritage

Mr. Borden said that a man must be devoid of all imagination who did not realize that in the goodly land which had been given into the guardianship of Canadians they had a heritage of which they might well be proud. "Since 1867," continued the Premier, "we have developed in this country a national spirit, which I am sure is not excelled in any of the great dominions of the Empire, and I believe is not excelled in any nation in the world.

"Visiting that great Motherland, as strong and as virile and as capable of taking her part in the world's work as ever she was, looking over the ocean and over the Continent, realizing what she was in the past and what she will be in the future, the thought has been borne in upon me that however great the heritage of Canada may be, the heritage of the Empire is greater. And there is a greeting which I may bring you, a greeting of kinsman to kinsman, the assurance that those people in the Old Land whence came our ancestors are capable of doing their part, and will do their part, and they look to you and all their kinamen in the dominions to aid in building up this Empire to the end that its influence for peace, for civilization and for the good of humanity may be as great in the future as in the past. So, Mr. Chairman, I come back to Canada inspired with even a firmer faith than before in the future of the Empire and in the ability of British statesmen in the Motherland and in the dominions over the seas to work out those problems which confront us in the momentous years that are already upon us."

Turning Toward Canada

Mr. Borden said that in Britain he and his colleagues had endeavored to conduct themselves as the representatives of the whole people of Canada. The people of the Old Land, and indeed of all Europe, were turning their eyes towards the Dominion in a way which he believed few Canadians realized. When he arrived in England he was told that the visit of the Canadian Ministers to the British Islands on an avowed mission of importance had attracted almost as much interest in the press of Continental countries as in the newspapers of the Motherland. The people of the Old Land were as much concerned as were the people of Canada that the unity of the Empire, nay, more, the very existence of the Empire, was dependant upon a sure path across the seas, and that they are determined to maintain for themselves and for you a sure path across every ocean where British dominions lie. That which is not essential to other nations is the very life of this Empire.

"It is not for me to-night," the Premier continued, "to make any announcement to you, although before a great audience like this it is a sore temptation to any man to be indiscreet for the time. Well, I must follow the good old constitutional rule that announcements with regard to great subjects like that which has been alluded to by Sir James Whitney should be made to Parliament."

Great Problems

The Premier said that there were many other great domestic problems which must be decided in the near future. The first two duties devolving upon the Government of a country like Canada was perhaps to see as far as might be humanly possible that equality of opportunity which was the aim of democracy be given to all. The present Government would not lose sight of that duty. Canada had already solved great problems. Liberals and Conservatives alike had grown hand in hand, and Canada had grown from a fringe of communities on the Atlantic seaboard until she had taken in the whole of that Western country, now the home of thousands of settlers. Toward Canada the migrating nations were turning their eyes as perhaps they never did before. The Dominion would welcome them whether they came from the Motherland or from the great Republic to the south, or from the Continent of Europe. "Bring them in," said Mr. Borden, "and build up on this continent standards of life of which we shall not be ashamed when we compare them with those of other countries. We speak of East and West in sentiment and ideals. Let there be no East or West, but let there be one Canada."

Our Great Highway

The Prime Minister discussed the problem of transportation, of the importance of cheap carriage of Canadian products to the markets at home and abroad, and of the possibilities for the development of inland waterways. There was one problem which should not be forgotten—500 or 600 miles of territory having now little or no population, situated between the East and the West. He and his colleagues would do all within their capacity to bring the inhabited East into touch with the inhabited West, and to prevent all divergence of sentiment, because after all, there was no divergence of interest. It should be borne in upon every man that the facilities afforded by the great lines of railways and waterways should be supplemented by highways. Highways were the necessary link in any well-considered scheme of transportation. Mr. Borden hoped that it would be the end to give to the people of all the provinces such assistance as would enable them to develop in the early years to come a system of highways which would bear comparison with those in the United States. He wished the people to understand that the Government did not intend to abandon any proposal it had made in the past in that regard.

THE RIGHT HON. R. L. BORDEN

Mr. Borden said that Canada had every resource which she could wish. Canadians should realize that it was not their duty to bury their talent but to take those resources and manufacture, as far as might be, every article required by the Canadian people. He realized that Ontario had accomplished a great achievement in bringing electric power from Niagara to the cities and towns, and he hoped the same benefit would be extended to every farmer on his land.

"Have we not also to consider," he said, "the ideals, the aspirations, the ethical standards in public and private life, the conception of duty, not only to our neighbor, but to our country. Are these not the very soul of the nation, and shall not we in Canada see that not only the body is developed, but that the soul of our nation is developed also." Continuing the Premier recalled where he had told the English people that Canadians would join in the upbuilding of the Empire, and did not propose to be an adjunct even of the Empire. They would be a great part of the greater whole. If in the issue of peace and war the country took its just share and responsibilities of the Empire it ought to have some corresponding voice in determining the question which would involve the issue of peace and war. Sir James Whitney had spoken of certain dangers which might confront the Empire. Mr. Borden said it was not for him to add to that. No man, however, was more convinced than he that if the day of stress should come when the Motherland and the Dominion would have to assert their place in the world in the interest of the Empire, and the preservation of its power and influence, the people of Canada as one man would rally to the defence of that Empire.

Hon. George Foster remarked that it was the business of the whole Empire to see that the trade routes are protected by police forces of the ocean which are able to keep order and keep the streets clear for commerce and intercourse of the Empire.

Our Growing Revenue

Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, referred to the increasing revenues of the Dominion as a result of expanding trade. He hoped to pay out of their consolidated revenue not only the current and running expenses of this great Dominion, but capital charges as well, and still have a substantial surplus to apply in the reduction of the national debt. It was extremely fortunate that this year Canada could make this fine showing in the world. It had been said there was a congestion of Canadian securities in the London market. That was so, but it was only a passing phase, and cities were growing up in the West, cities in the East were increasing their population. Therefore there had been a great demand for money from the London market. Their friends in London knew the security offered by the Canadian municipalities was of the best. The pocket of the world's financial houses was deep, and he expected that this year's revenues would have a strengthening effect upon the securities of the Dominion, and Canada needed large revenues. He was happy to think they would have them. The great demand of Canada was for railways, and in connection with that demand it devolved upon the Dominion Government to give consideration to the improvement of its inland waterways system, to the promotion of its terminal facilities, and to see that their harbors were enlarged and improved and proper facilities given for increasing trade. He believed the revenues of Canada would be quite able to take care of such expenses as they might incur on current account and still leave substantial surpluses in years to come.

Hon. A. E. Kemp remarked to Canadians who would have representatives of the Dominion seated in the British Parliament that if men of such sufficient ability to make their influence felt in the British Parliament would pay attention to the great problems which required solution within the borders of Canada they would serve the Dominion better in our own House of Commons.

N. W. Rowell, K.C., leader of the Opposition in the Ontario Legislature said in part: "We see the mother of us all groaning under the burden of maintaining this Empire, taxing her citizens in order to maintain it. As Canadians, as self-respecting, liberty-loving, virile people, shall we not say the time has come when we must bear our share and we must take up our burden with you?"

NEWS FROM OMEMEE

Special Correspondence

Omemee, Sept. [illegible].—Mr. Fitzgerald, of Peterborough, came out in his car on Thursday afternoon to look over the site for the armory. The position of the building was staked out and the contract let for excavating, which began on Monday, under the management of Mr. W. Magee. Mr. John Beatty, of town, is inspector of the work for the Government. The armory will be a commodious, handsome and well constructed building with capacious space on two sides for drill. The erection of the armory is a mark of progress, for which the promoters deserve great praise.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bland, of Mt. Pleasant, were in town on Thursday.

The Government boat is almost up the river to Omemee. It has been working for some time clearing the logs and floating bogs from about [illegible] feet of the channel of the river. The bogs will be staked or boomed to prevent their return to the boats' course. This will give Omemee a waterway to the Trent Valley Canal system, and may open up trade in wood, tanbark and other commodities. It is certain to stimulate the tourist trade, which has been steadily growing, and it will bring to our people a fuller enjoyment of the popular summer water excursions of the Kawartha Lakes.

Friday and Saturday were banner days of the Lindsay Fair. Great crowds went up from here each day. Saturday's crowd was enormous. The Fair maintained its usual high standard and catered to all the wants of a multitude of vivacious and exacting sight-seers. Some of our local exhibitors carried off prizes.

Mr. John Boyd, of Mount Pleasant, was the guest of his daughter, Mrs. J. W. Mitchell. He went up to the fair at Lindsay on Friday.

Reeve Mulligan has been having the grounds and fences surrounding Coronation Hall put in order.

Miss Hamilton has charge of the dressmaking department of Mr. Charles Ivory's.

Mrs. Yelland is home from a trip to Saskatchewan and Alberta. She enjoyed the outing very much and speaks of repeating it in the near future. Her son, Albert, is at present in the West.

Mrs. Porter of Sturgeon street was visited on Sunday by Mr. and Mrs. Fergus Porter of Janetville and later left with them in their auto.

A good number of duck has been captured by our local gunmen. Deer hunters are preparing and planning for their annual outing.

Nobleman Buys Land.

London, Sept. 25.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—One of the largest individual land sales ever effected in this country has just been completed here. The purchaser, the C.A.P. is informed, is no less a person than Lord Joicey, the famous coal mine owner and one of the wealthiest Liberal peers in Great Britain. His lordship has purchased nearly 24,000 acres of mixed farm and dairy farming land in the vicinity of Fort George, B.C., for which he paid $450,000.

Expects Election at Once.

London, Sept. 25.—(C.A.P.)—The Yorkshire Post affirms confidently that there will be a general election almost immediately. It states that the only real difference is whether it will be before or after Christmas.

"It is not impossible," The Post says, "that we are on the eve of a Liberal split regarding the home rule which may not equal that of 1886, but still may be very serious."

A Lesson In Literature and a Lesson In Love.

By INA WRIGHT HANSON.

From the doorway Fitzgerald looked moodily at me from in front of the dresser. I looked moodily at Fitzgerald.

"She refused me," he said.

"I've got to go to Mrs. Whiting's dinner," I answered.

Fitz nodded and threw himself heavily into a chair.

"I wouldn't go, you know, after Mrs. Whiting's niece refused me, so she had to rustle up you."

I glared at him, then jerked open the top drawer.

"Seems to me, in the interest of humanity, you might have staved off your old proposal till after the dinner. I've got to take Miss Whiting in. What shall I say to her? I'm no society man."

"You might talk about me. It's darned strange she refuses me," Fitz responded modestly. "Of course I'm fat, but what of that? Look at my money!"

I turned from my hair brushing and regarded Fitz with surprise.

"She's different from other girls," he went on mournfully. "You never know what she is going to do or say next. She said if she ever found the man she wanted to marry and he didn't ask her she would propose to him. You say a word for me, old man, and maybe she will change her mind about it."

"All right," I said and started for the infernal dinner. If I had been left in peace I could have translated a few more pages of that Latin I was on.

Why I should have (figuratively of course) fallen on my face and worshiped Claudia Whiting the moment I saw her I don't know. That any man could help adoring her after he came to know her is incredible, but I think I began before ever she said a word to me. It couldn't be because her eyes were the bluest I ever saw or her hair crinkled sunshine—I suppose a poet would describe it better—or her lips red as the roses she wore in her belt. One day since that dinner she told me something about affinities. It may be that mysterious word holds the reason.

What we talked of is vaguely remembered. I know that I walked homeward carrying with me a vision of sweetest seriousness, for that describes Claudia as she appeared that day. When I turned the corner, beyond which were my lodgings, I saw Fitzgerald at my gate, his broad back toward me. I remembered my forgotten promise and fled incontinently. I could not face him. Later I stole into my room like a thief in the night.

Next day I went to call on her and to make my peace with Fitz, who had interviewed me that morning. She was in the garden, and I stated the object of my call at once.

"If you knew him better you would appreciate him more," I said and launched forth at some length into his peculiar graces and virtues. Claudia listened, and when I had finished she leaned toward me, smiling roguishly.

"And didn't you care about coming to see me? If it had not been for Mr. Fitzgerald you would have come anyway, wouldn't you?"

To think that she should have looked straight into my heart and discovered my perfidy! I almost let go of my secret. I almost answered, "I came because I love you." And this on the second meeting.

Then because I must talk, and there were some things I must not say, I began talking of myself—my college life, my failing health, forcing me to live for years in the pine forests; then when my health was restored how the woods still held me with their solitudes, so that I was unhappy and ill at ease in society.

"I have quite a pretentious cabin there," I said. "In it are my books and my violin. Back of it flows a clear stream with trout waiting for me to catch them for my breakfast. Nothing is wanting there to make me entirely comfortable."

My face grew hot, for all at once I realized there was a want—a void—to be filled. That if I went back to my cabin now it would be as lacking as the body whose soul is not within.

"I was born and bred in the woods!" exclaimed Claudia. "The stars look closer and bigger than they do in the cities of the lowlands. Up there in the mountains are ferny nooks and manzanita; there is watercress, which makes me hungry this minute. Oh, I know about the woods!" Her blue eyes were shining like the stars of which she spoke.

Then she asked me about my books, and I told her of my published ones and those in contemplation—dry old tomes. Why should I have supposed that they would interest a young creature like her?

But I rambled on, lost in her sweet companionship, till the sun suddenly dropped out of sight and I saw her shiver in the breeze that stirred the poplars. Then I remembered Fitz.

"Do give him another chance," I said perfunctorily as I rose to go. She looked at me seriously, but made no answer.

For the greater part of a month Fitz was away from town, and I saw Claudia nearly every day. Before going he asked my promise to say a word in his favor every time I saw her. There are limits to the duties of friendship, but I promised because I felt that he would make her a good husband. He was an honorable man and had more money than he knew what to do with.

She was such a bewildering little creature, was Claudia. At the first meeting she was so sweetly serious. She had told me since that she was frightened to death of me because I knew so much. Fancy it! The day she told me, though, she was bubbling over with laughter, and I suspect she was poking fun at me in her irrepressible way. Then there was the morning when we walked together to church and she talked so quietly of holy things, and there was that last afternoon in the garden before Fitz came home.

That day it was the hardest of all to forget myself and remember Fitz. Sometimes when the tenderness of my heart would creep into my words little spots of color would come and go in her girlish face. I scarcely saw her eyes that day, the white lids drooped so insistently over their blue beauty. At last I pulled myself together with the thought that he could do so much more for her than I, even if she could bring herself to think of me at all, and made my last earnest speech for him.

She frowned a little; then she smiled and looked thoughtful.

"I think I shall have to teach you to read poetry," she said.

"Will you?" I asked eagerly.

"Begin on 'The Courtship of Miles Standish,' then," she answered and ran, laughing, up the walk.

"I did the best I could for you, Fitz," I told him when he returned that evening. And I rehearsed the last speech in full.

"What did she say?" he demanded.

"Why, she didn't say anything to that. She told me—or hinted—that my education was deficient because I had little knowledge of poetry, and she told me to begin on 'The Courtship of Miles Standish.'"

Fitz looked at me mournfully. "That's my finish then. Have you read it?"

"I was just beginning."

Fitz walked heavily from the room, and I took up my new Longfellow.

Short of stature he was, but strongly built and athletic.
Brown as a nut was his face, but his russet beard was already Flaked with patches of snow.

Pretty good description of myself, I thought. Not exactly patches, but there were certainly threads of gray. I read on till the speech was finished, the egotistical words of Miles Standish; then I bowed my head in shame and anger. I had talked steadily of myself and my work, but she had led me on. She had no right to call me down so. Tomorrow I would go back to my cabin and forget, but yet I knew I should always remember. I was still brooding when Fitz came back.

"I don't blame you, old man," he began. "Probably you'll make her happier; but, Lord, look at my money!"

I blinked at him as he settled down.

"Neat way she had of bringing matters to a focus," he went on, picking up my book, which lay face downward on the table. "Why, darned if I believe you've read it all!"

"I've read enough," I said resentfully. "I read what she thinks of me."

One moment that blessed Fritz gazed at me; then in words of one syllable he gave me the gist of that poem—made me understand that my Claudia was impersonating the Puritan maiden in her immortal speech. "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?"

And to think I ever had deemed Fitzgerald stupid!

I found my blessed girl in the garden, but she did not hear my approach. She was on tiptoe, trying to reach a rose which swung above her head.

"I have come to speak for myself, Claudia," I said.

The dear hands ceased from their quest to hide the blushes of her sweet face. Her girlish form trembled.

"You think me bold!" she cried apprehensively.

It was such a glorious affair to prove to her just what I did think of her, and it took a long time. And then she explained to me about affinities.

In planning for the future don't overlook the present.

Strides of Science.

There was a thin and nervous woman who could not sleep. She visited her physician, and he said:

"Did you eat anything just before going to bed?"

"Oh, no, doctor," the patient replied.

"Well," said the physician, "just keep a glass of milk and some biscuit beside you, and every night the last thing you do make a light meal."

"But, doctor," cried the lady, "you told me on no account to eat anything before retiring."

"Pooh, pooh!" said the doctor. "That was three months ago. Science has made enormous strides since then."—Philadelphia Record.

Usual Reasons.

"Officer, I want you to arrest the man in that house," said the excited young man to the policeman.

"What for?" asked the guardian of the peace.

"He kicked me out of his house."

"Did he?"

"Yes, he did."

"And did you want to marry his daughter or sell him some poetry?"—Yonkers Statesman.

Odious Comparison.

"You have the greatest collection of animals since the one Noah put on the ark," said the admiring friend.

"Noah!" repeated the circus magnate scornfully. "Why he traveled by boat and had only two elephants."—Washington Star.

Advising the Omniscient.

"What are you writing, old chap?"

"An article entitled 'Advice to Graduates.'"

"Eh! 'Advice to grad— Well, of all the presumption!"—Boston Transcript.

MADE RESIGNING EASY.

Uncle Ike's Real Reason For Giving Up Preaching.

When Senator Mark Smith of Arizona was a boy he lived on a big plantation in Kentucky. It was in slave days, and one of his father's slaves was Uncle Ike, who was the preacher for the place.

Smith's father had built a small church on a corner of the plantation, and Uncle Ike held forth there every Sunday. This was pleasing to Ike because it not only gave him a chance to exhort the negroes, but it absolved him from any of the Sunday chores.

One Sunday Mark went out by the barn and found Uncle Ike sitting disconsolately under a tree.

"Look here, Ike," said Mark, "why ain't you down there preaching?"

"Well, Mars Mark," Ike replied, "I ain't goin' to preach to dem niggahs no more. They's always fightin' 'mongst theyselves, an' I'm sick an' tired an' done quit preachin'."

"Stop your lying, Ike," said Mark. "You wouldn't quit such a soft snap as that. What's the matter?"

"Well, Mars Mark," Ike replied, "ef you mus' know, dem triflin' niggahs done sent me my resignation."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Familiar With All.

Frederick Donaghey was host at a dinner the other evening, and after the coffee and cigars were served he told of a young Englishman who applied to the head librarian of the New York public library for a position. The official questioned him regarding his knowledge of English literature.

"Have you ever heard of W. M. Thackeray?" was the first query.

"Ever heard of him?" exclaimed the applicant. "Why, I knew him well. We lived in the same neighborhood in London and often took walks together Sunday afternoons."

"Of course you know of Charles Dickens?" said the librarian.

"I should say I do," replied the Englishman. "Mr. Dickens and I were on terms of the greatest intimacy in the old country."

"And George Eliot?" continued the library head.

RAILWAY RATES THE MAIN QUESTION NOW

Canadian Manufacturer Says That is More Important Than the Tariff Problem—R. S. Gourlay Named for President

Toronto, Sept. 26.—The report of the railroad and transportation committee at the annual convention of the C.M.A. here yesterday dealt with every classification of freight baggage and transportation. Most of the material in the report of the committee has been called to the attention of the Railway Commission, such as freight rates, size of baggage, etc.

R. D. Fairbairn of Toronto, head of the Fairbairn Scale Co., charged the railroads with being over-zealous to boost the rates. "The rates to the west," he said, "are based on one way only. It is a well-known fact that it costs as much to send goods to, say, Saskatoon or any other place in the west, from the east, as it does to Australia. The railroads can carry freight at a good deal less rate than at present. The sole object of railroad companies seems to be to increase their rates all along the line.

"I tell you, gentlemen," declared Mr. Fairbairn, with vehemence, "transportation is a much more important subject to Canada just now than the tariff question. The tariff in many cases is not a factor at all. The Dominion Government should carry the Intercolonial Railway through to the coast. We have had a little experience in municipal and Government ownership, and it has met with a good deal of success.

R. S. GOURLAY,
Who is named for Presidency of the C.M.A.

Mr. Fairbairn's expressions were readily endorsed in many respects by other delegates.

Some of the supreme advantages manufacturers especially can derive from a system of technical education were outlined in an address by Dr. James Robertson, chairman of the technical education commission.

The election of officers takes place to-day, and it was announced last night that R. S. Gourlay of Toronto would be the new president, while C. B. Gordon, president of the Dominion Textile Co., Montreal, will be the new vice-president.

Vigorously condemning the use of any but safety matches for use in the homes, and claiming that to use matches that can be lighted anywhere too often places the lives of children in the home in great danger, Franklin H. Wentworth of Boston, president of the National Fire Protective Association, delivered a forceful address before the delegates at a smoker held in the Parliamentary restaurant last night. He said that the association of which he was the head was doing a splendid work and was doing much to encourage fire prevention, giving many examples.

Jail-Breaker Seen.

Kingston, Sept. 26.—The man identified as Frank Smith of Texas, who escaped from Belleville Jail Tuesday morning, while awaiting removal to the penitentiary, was on a freight train at Outer station yesterday afternoon. The conductor on the train tried to take him in charge, but he escaped. He had no coat, and the conductor pulled his shirt off in the scuffle. The police hurried to the scene, but the man made good his escape.

It was learned that he had secured a coat and shirt from a farmer, telling a hard luck story about being on his way to Montreal to see his brother, who was dying.

WAS BAD BUNGLE

Mayor Harrison Condemns Escape of Bank Robbers

Chicago, Sept. 26.—Mayor Carter H. Harrison yesterday characterized the escape of the Canadian bank robbers from the Chicago police as the worst case of bungling that he could imagine.

"Captain J. J. Mahoney and Lieut. B. P. Burns both are to blame," said the mayor. 'Captain Mahoney should have given the case his personal attention, and Lieut. Burns never should have attempted to make such an arrest single-handed."

Several women habitues of the James Sidias saloon, where the bank robbers loafed, and where Lieut. Burns was badly beaten, were arrested by the police yesterday. Captain Halpin, who examined the women, said that none of them had told him a straight story of what occurred the night Burns attempted to make the arrests. The women were ordered held for further examination.

Students "Invade" Town.

Montreal, Sept. 26.—Fifty McGill students from the university survey camp had a conflict Tuesday night with citizens of the town of Cartierville, near here. The students becoming disturbed by the continuous rainfall at their camp, entered the town, and coming to blows with the townfolk, drove them across the river. There the students rallied and returned. The mayor summoned the chief of police and the town fire brigade. The students divided their forces and by a rear attack drove the firemen before them and captured the two hose wagons. By this time hostilities had continued for two hours and both "armies" agreed to peace terms.

PLENTY OF CARS TO MOVE GRAIN

Outlook in the West is Once More Hopeful

Winnipeg, Sept. 26.—Threshing has again been resumed all over the west, with bright, clear weather general. While there has been some frost, the reports generally assert that no damage has been done the crop. Tuesday grain trains to the east again resumed operations, and yesterday the demand for motive power on all the lines in Manitoba was strong.

The elevators are not getting a chance to handle the new grain, as most of it is going direct to the grain cars, and every siding is full of empties. Not in the history of the west has the situation to rush grain to the market been so good as to-day.

CANADA'S NAVAL PLAN HAS STIRRED UP AUSTRALIA

Premier Borden's Toronto Speech Gives New Life to Patriotism in the Antipodes

London, Sept. 26.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—A special despatch to The Daily Mail yesterday states that Borden's speech at Toronto and reports that Canada intends to offer three super-dreadnoughts as an emergency contingent to the Imperial navy, have aroused much attention of Australia and Australians realizing they must no longer lean on Great Britain, but must stand on an equal footing and shoulder with the Mother Country and other dominions in the defence of the whole Empire. There is a genuine dread of the growth of Japanese influence in the Pacific, and though little is said on the subject the feeling is strong that Australia should prove her readiness to play her part with New Zealand and the United States in policing the Pacific.

Australians are willing to bear taxation for these purposes. The smoldering embers of patriotism which led Australians to flock to the Boer war have again recently been fanned into a fierce flame.

Premier Fisher, interviewed, said the opinion was undoubtedly consolidating on the question of national defence, for which common Imperial scheme it was essential that Australia must be left to develop her own defence unit.

"I cannot see the advantages of the existence of an Imperial defence council of dominion representatives, who would sooner or later get out of touch with the thought of the peoples represented and become only dead channels through which the policy of governments would imperfectly come from. I believe a better plan would be to hold biennial personal consultations with the British military and naval authorities in the same manner as was done last year. That would keep life in a common scheme of imperial defence.

"New Zealand's interests are irrevocably bound up with Australia. I believe it is now recognized by the best thinkers that New Zealand will eventually join in one Australian unit for defence. I think it marvelous that the cadet scheme for military training of all boys has been established with so little friction. The people now regard it as a national necessity and an individual responsibility which each must shoulder."

Archbold Weary of Reporters.

Southampton, Eng., Sept. 26.—John D. Archbold, president of the Standard Oil Co., is sick of being bothered about political exposures, he declared in a brief interview yesterday before sailing for New York.

Three men were placed on guard at the door of his cabin to keep off interviewers.

WILLIAM BELL KILLED BY RAILWAY TRAIN AT GUELPH

Pioneer Piano Manufacturer Meets With Shocking Death —Mutilated Beyond Recognition—Was 80 Years Old.

Special To The Review.

Guelph, Sept. 26—The body of William Bell, founder of the Bell Piano Company, was found on the Grand Trunk tracks, about two miles east of the city this morning, by section men, so badly mutilated that identification was possible only by papers found in his pockets. He left home about two thirty yesterday afternoon and had not been seen afterwards, his family thinking he had gone to Toronto. He was eighty years old.

SAYS IT IS A POLITICAL DODGE

President Curry's Reply to Grain Growers Guide.

Special To The Review.

Ottawa, Sept. 26—In the opinion of a majority of the delegates of the C. M. A., the telegram from the Grain Growers' Guide, re increased British preference, received this morning, was sent solely for political reasons. President Curry brought the matter before the Convention this morning and announced he had drafted a reply stating that members of the Manufacturers' Association believed that all Canadians are doing their best to promote a feeling of loyalty and closer union between all parts of the Empire. The attitude of the C. M. A. on British Preference has been set forth in resolutions adopted after long and thoughtful consideration of the varied interests involved. He believed no adequate consideration of the grain growers' proposal is possible at this late hour of the convention, but if they desired a conference on any matter looking to the advancement of Canada, the Association would gladly co-operate.

Deposed Governor Will Fight.

London, Sept. 26.—The Chinese town of Foo Chow has been declared in a state of siege by the governor, who has received notification from the Pekin Government that he has been superseded, according to a news agency despatch from Tien Tsin yesterday.

Many of the inhabitants are hurriedly leaving the city in fear of bloodshed.

Thorold Student Shot.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Sept. 26—While examining a revolver at the Niagara University grounds yesterday afternoon, Joseph Connolly, of Rochester, shot Patrick Manley of Thorold, Ont., in the abdomen. The shooting was accidental. Both are students at the university.

Heavy Snow In Western States.

Minneapolis, Sept. 26.—Snow again fell yesterday in the northwest, reports from the Dakotas and Minnesota telling of heavy falls in various districts. In the Twin Cities and Central Minneapolis a rain which had lasted twelve hours was followed by a cold wave, which weather officials thought would send the thermometer lower.

Despatches from Fargo, N.D., said that the snow flattened uncut corn and flax, and that thousands of harvest and threshing hands have left the state, unwilling to believe the weather will improve.

Roosevelt's tongue has not yet lost its sting, but no man has ever stung himself into the Presidency.

SCOTCH TROOPS TO BE SENT TO IRELAND TO PRESERVE PEACE

Trouble Expected on Ulster Day, Sept. 28, and Government is Taking Precautions.

Belfast, Ireland, Sept. 26.—Regiments of Highland Light Infantry and Scottish Borderers will be drafted into Belfast to-day in anticipation of trouble on Ulster Day, Sept. 28 when the covenant in defiance of home rule is to be signed by Ulsterites. The Royal Irish Rifles already stationed here are confined to barracks in readiness for emergencies.

More than a thousand members of "Young Citizen Volunteers of Ireland" were enrolled last night. The new organization is to assist when called upon by the civil authorities in the maintenance of peace.

The demonstration at Portadown yesterday was one of the most remarkable of the campaign owing to the display of armed force and the enormous number of Orangemen and Unionists who assembled to greet Sir Edward Carson and other Unionist leaders. Sir Edward declared that they were performing the obsequies of home rule.

Frederick E. Smith M.P. for Liverpool, expressed the opinion that the battle was already won. He added: "The Government, even if it has the wickedness, wholly lacks the nerve to order the British army to use coercion to Ulster."

The streets of Belfast are being gaily decorated for Saturday. There has been an enormous sale of Union Jacks.

At the Portadown demonstration determination not to submit to home rule was expressed by 20,000 Orangemen and Unionists, residents of the County of Armagh, Ulster.

Rifles were carried by some of the battalions into which the members of the Unionist clubs were formed when they took part in a great procession yesterday afternoon.

Two large cannon were also dragged along on gun carriages, while an ambulance in charge of sisters moved with the procession and carried a large supply of splints and bandages.

Even King Could Do Wrong.

Crumlin, Ireland, Sept. 26.—Lord Templetown, founder of the Unionist clubs of Ireland, at an anti-home rule demonstration here last night, declared that if the King signed the home rule measure to-morrow it would be an unconstitutional act.

Captain Jas. Craig, M.P. for Down, advised the Ulstermen to continue drilling.

$135,000 For Home Rule.

Philadelphia, Sept. 26.—Pledges of contributions, aggregating $135,000 within the next two years to advance the cause of home rule in Ireland were made here yesterday by delegates to the biennial convention of the United Irish League of America.

Michael J. Ryan, city solicitor of Philadelphia, was re-elected president. The other officers are: Vice-president, Hon. Charles Doherty, Minister of Justice, Canada; Maurice T. Malony, Attorney-General, Ottawa, Ill.; John Fitzpatrick, mayor of New Orleans; Hugh McCaffery, Philadelphia, and Michael S. S. Smith, St. Louis, secretary; John O'Callaghan, Boston; treasurer, Thomas B. Fitzpatrick, Boston.

No place was chosen for another convention, as the delegates believe that before another two years the cause for which the league was organized will have been accomplished.

Speeches took up the entire morning session of the biennial convention of the United Irish League of America. Among the speakers was Sir George Croyden Marks, a Liberal member of the British Parliament. He was escorted to the convention hall by a special committee and was given a warm welcome.

He told the delegates that it was the desire of the Liberal party to give to the Irish home rule which, he added, had been withheld from them too long.

Sir Geo. Marks represent Launceston division in Cornwall, and is a consulting engineer and patent expert. He was knighted last year.

Westerners For Protection.

London, Sept. 26.—M. Turner, agent-general for British Columbia, writes The Westminster Gazette denying a previous correspondent's assertion that western men are free traders. "I am quite confident," says Mr. Turner, "there are few, if any, free traders in British Columbia. The workmen are practically all protectionists. I know this well, from many elections I've run there."

Turner incidentally asserts the cost of living in western Canada is little, if any, higher than in England.

A War Tragedy.

Cuernavaca, Mex., Sept. 26.—Ambushed at Ojo de Agua, Capt. Escobedo and seven of his soldiers were killed by rebels Tuesday. On receipt of the news here, Senorita Sofia Moneadia, an actress, and the sweetheart of Escobedo, committed suicide.

Amnesty for Rebels.

Mexico City, Sept 26.—A new movement to obtain peace in Northern Mexico was made yesterday, when President Madero and his Cabinet instructed the Minister of War to offer amnesty to the followers of Pascual Orosco, the rebel leader.

Russell Appeal Heard.

Montreal, Sept. 26.—Argument was concluded in the Court of Review yesterday in the famous case of D. Russell v. the Pinkerton Detective Agency for $200,000 damages. Russell lost his case in the lower court, where he claimed that the Pinkertons were involved in trying to have him confined in an insane asylum.

HON. COL. HUGHES IS KEPT BUSY

Minister is Deluged With Invitations to Attend Functions

London, Sept. 26.—Hon. Col. Hughes is having an exceptionally busy time during the last week of his stay. When he is at the Savoy Hotel a half dozen callers besiege his rooms, the number of invitations received being overwhelming. The colonel told the C.A.P. yesterday that he had no use for militaay aeroplanes

"You'll get just as good results by climbing a mountain or a church steeple," he said.

At the army council dinner the other night all the Canadian officers in London attended. Col. Hughes responded to the toast to the overseas forces. Coventry and Newmarket have been visited earlier this week. On Sunday, Col. Hughes visited Paris, and Tuesday met several interested in the university interchange students.

Several of the officers are now in Scotland, but Col. Hodgins is studying the territorial system here. Col. Harston is at Woolwich studying ammunition problems.

Ulster Unionists have approched more than one of the party for expressions of sympathy or encouragement, but those approached deemed it wiser to keep free of such matters.

To-morrow, Col. Hughes dines with Lord Roberts, and for the week-end will be the guest of Lord Selborne in Hampshire.

Sir Wilfrid's Tour.

Toronto, Sept. 26.—On the second week of his speech-making tour through Ontario Sir Wilfrid Laurier will pass through Toronto on Wednesday, Oct. 2. While here he will be the guest of Sir William Mulock, and N. W. Rowell, K.C., leader of the Ontario Oppositon, will give a private dinner in the ex-Premier's honor. Sir Wilfrid will spend the day here quietly and will deliver no speeches. He will go to Woodstock and Chatham from this city.

Pall-Bearers Chosen.

Kingston, Sept. 26.—The following have been selected as pall-bearers for the funeral of Sir Richard Cartwright: Col. H. R. Smith, Sergeant-at-Arms in the House of Commons, Col. S. C. McGill and Messrs. J. B. Walker, K.C., Francis Dobbs John Dobbs, all of Kingston, and F. C. T. O'Hara, Ottawa. The latter was for many years private secretary to Sir Richard.

BIRTHS SHOULD BE ADVERTISED

Dr. Helen MacMurchy Gives Address at Washingtan

Washington, Sept. 26.—"Popularise the birth registry bureau," was the advice of Dr. Helen MacMurchy at the fifteenth International Congress on Hygiene and Demography yesterday. She declared it would reduce infant mortality at once, because it would bring all cases of birth under the eye of the proper health authorities. She said the birth registry bureau should be advertised so extensively that everybody would know of it. She suggested that bright lights be used to illuminate it by night.

It was pointed out that New Zealand which had been the first country to give cash contributions to help expectant mothers, had the lowest infant mortality in the world.

SUITS AGAINST WHITE STAR LINE

Fourteen Cases Will be Heard Soonin London.

Special To The Review.

London Sept. 26.—The first batch of fourteen claims against the White Star Line for the lives lost in the Titanic disaster will be brought by relatives during the approaching law sittings. Findings in these cases are expected to govern subsequent claims.

Strange Cause for Suicide.

St. Thomas, Ont., Sept. 26.—Mrs Helen Fletcher, aged 40, wife of A. E. Fletcher, Locust street, took paris green Monday night with suicidal intent because her husband started smoking again after having stopped for a time. She died yesterday. The family came from Brantford in May last. The deceased leaves five daughters and one son by a previous marriage.

Brush Factory to Close.

London, Ont., Sept. 26—The Thomas Bryan, Limited, for the past forty years brush manufacturers in this city, will move to Toronto within a few weeks. For the past ten years this concern has been part of the Boeckh Bros. & Co. of Toronto.

CHINESE MUTINY

The Republic Needs Money to Pay Off the Troops.

Pekin, Sept. 26.—The troops encamped outside the gates of Wuchang, capital of the Province of Hupeh, mutinied Tuesday night and attacked the city. The troops numbered several hundred and were composed for the most part of cavalry. A strong force of Gen. Li Yuen Heng's regiment immediately engaged the rebels, and after several hours of fierce fighting, dispersed them. The casualty list is not known, but two officers were executed for failing to divulge their knowledge of the movement.

It is believed that the attacking party only intended to loot the city, but most of the towns in the interior have no defenders from such outbreaks, in which both the republican and former imperial troops indulge. The republican spirit apparently is not appreciated by the classes from which the soldiers are recruited.

The object of the present loan is ostensibly for the purpose of payiny off and discharging this menacing army, which is very large, according to the lists submitted by the generals.

GRAIN GROWERS DECLARE FOR BRITISH PREFERENCE

Asks Canadian Manufacturers to Help Them Bind Canada and England Closer Together

Winnipeg, Sept. 26.—The Grain Growers' Guide last night sent the following by wire to President Curry of the manufacturers' convention in session at Ottawa:

"The western grain growers are anxious to know if the Manufacturers' Association will join hands with them in an effort to bind Canada closer to the Motherland by urging the Government to reduce the tariff on British imports to one-half that charged American imports, to complete free trade with the Motherland in ten years.

"The grain growers feel that this would be a tangible form of showing their patriotism and would develop a much greater trade with the Motherland and thus strengthen the ties of the Empire and show the world that Canada's loyalty to the Motherland is deep and abiding and not merely words. It would also show the world that Canada stands behind the Motherland to uphold the traditions of the Anglo-Saxon race and keep the Union Jack in the proud position it has held for a thousand years. Such an action would also be undoubted proof that Canada has no desire for political union with the United States. Would you kindly bring the matter before your annual convention now in session at Ottawa and ascertain if the manufacturers present are willing to join hands with the grain growers in this great Imperial scheme?"

Willing to Consider.

Ottawa, Sept. 26.—At a late hour last night President Curry of the C. M. A. said he had not received any message from the Grain Growers' Guide, but if it came before the convention opened in the morning he would bring it before the delegates. He declined to make any personal comment on it when apprised of the text of the message.

May Incite War.

Constantinople, Sept. 26.—Apprehension has been aroused in diplomatic circles here in regard to the decision of the Turkish Government to hold extensive army manoeuvres next month in the village of Adrianople.

It is said that 50,000 troops are to be put into the field.

It is thought that at the present juncture this action may furnish Bulgaria with a pretext to proceed with the mobilization of its army or, alternatively, that it may endanger the Bulgarian Cabinet.

Condolence From the Duke.

Kingston, Sept. 26—Lady Cartwright has received the following message from His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught: "Very distressed at sad news. Duchess and I sympathise deeply." Signed Arthur. The message was sent from Prince Rupert.

Messages of condolence were also received from Hon. R. W. Scott, Hon. Charles Murphy, Hon. Louis Jette, Hon. James Loughead, Hon. G. P. Graham, and many prominent people from all over Canada.

Tumult at Peace Congress.

Geneva, Switzerland, Sept. 26.—Great tumult and a display of much temper marked yesterday's session of the International Peace Congress. The proceedings became at one moment so decidedly stormy that one of the speakers was compelled to leave the platform.

Questions connected with Morocco and Tripoli occupied the attention of the congress and the criticism by Dr. Gobat, president of the International Peace Bureau, of Germany's attitude in Morocco brought the German delegates to their feet in heated protest.

PARALYSIS COMPLETELY CURED

"Fruit-a-tives" Performs Another Miracle

BRISTOL, N. B., JULY [illegible], 1911

"I had a stroke of Paralysis in March 1910, and this left me unable to walk or help myself, and the Constipation of the Bowels was terrible.

Nothing did me any good and I was wretched in every way.

I then took "Fruit-a-tives" for the Constipation and it not only cured me of this terrible trouble, but gradually this fruit medicine toned up the nerves and actually cured the Paralysis.

By the use of "Fruit-a-tives", I grew stronger and stronger until all the Paralysis and weakness left me.

I am now well again and attend my store every day. I say "Thank God for Fruit-a-tives"

ALVA PHILLIPS.

"Fruit-a-tives" not only cured the terrible Constipation, but so toned up the nervous system and the general health as to completely overcome the palsy.

Truly "Fruit-a-tives" is a wonderful medicine.

POLITICS AND THE HYDRO-ELECTRIC.

In Brantford the council has decided to submit a by-law to the people asking for authority to raise $115,000 for the purpose of introducing the Hydro-Electric system into the Telephone City. In any municipality where this question is raised the matter at once assumes the perplexity of a political issue, thanks to the Liberal press which seems unable to believe that anything good can originate with the other side.

In Brantford the fight is proceeding along the lines indicated. The Expositor says:

"Experience elsewhere does not justify the assumption that Hydro-Electric can be installed for any such figure as $115,000, and if the by-law is carried it is reasonably certain that our experience will be that of other places, and that a second by-law for a very considerable sum will have to be submitted.

"The fact that the aldermen, or rather a majority of them, do not believe that the rates charged in Brantford are materially, if at all, higher than Hydro-Electric charges, is shown by their avoidance of an arbitration which would bring all the facts out, and, if we have been paying too much, secure the benefit of a reduction for the two years the Western Counties contract has yet to run. Their cry is that we must have competition, and it is now up to the ratepayers to say whether or not they are prepared at this time to make the necessary expenditure without any guarantee that they will secure rates substantially lower than they have at present."

Nothing like a glittering generality to save a weak case. What does the Expositor mean by "elsewhere," and to what places does it allude? It is to be presumed that when the Brantford aldermen decided to ask for $115,000 they did so only after a careful estimate had been made. But evidently the Expositor is interested in the matter only as a source of supply for political capital.

Not so with the Expositor's contemporary, the Courier. That journal comes out squarely in favor of the by-law and calls upon the citizens to give it their support.

THE CONSULAR SERVICE

Hon. George E. Foster has made a remarkable record as Minister of Trade and Commerce. One close follower of Ottawa politics says he has accomplished in less than a year more than his predecessor did in fifteen years. Closer trade relations within the empire is his ideal, and already he has completed a treaty with the West Indies and is negotiating one with Australia. This week announcement was made of another step forward in cementing the empire, which will be of almost incalculable value to Canadian interests. He has concluded with Sir Edward Grey, Secretary of State in the British Cabinet, an arrangement of far-reaching importance by which the whole of the magnificent British consular service extending to every part of the globe will be at the disposal of Canada.

By this agreement the range of external business available to Canadian exporters will be greatly widened and authentic information as to the resources and development of Canada will be available at British consular offices the world over.

By the agreement the foreign office will furnish the department with copies of all trade reports from its consular offices as soon as they are published from any districts, which may be specified by Canada.

Any Canadian firms or business men will be at liberty to apply direct to any of His Majesty's consuls in any part of the world for information as to the sale of Canadian products, methods of business pursued, and the best means of getting in touch with markets.

The British consuls will be supplied with statements of Canada's commerce, resources and development, and with lists of the principal industries and sources of supply. The consuls will pay particular attention to any reports of interest to Canada.

Canadian trade commissioners will have full liberty to apply to British consuls for assistance and advice in trade matters, and special Canadian trade representatives will be given all help possible and will have all the information of the British consular offices at their disposal.

Office room in British consulates will be afforded to Canadian commercial representatives when it is possible and convenient to arrange therefor; but in such cases the consular office will assume no responsibility for the direction or work of the Canadian representatives.

Members of the Canadian Commercial selection will be eligible for selection for an entrance to the British consular service on the terms and conditions applicable to other entrants thereto, subject to the regulations of the British government in carrying on its service.

These arrangements resolve themselves into this, that Canadians can use the British consular system to obtain information about foreign countries, and that foreigners can repair to British consular offices and obtain information as to Canadian conditions and opportunities. There also is opened the avenue to the building up of a Canadian consular service.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Why should the active temperance workers of the city, when they meet to discuss a question of great public moment close the door against the reporters, those clever young men who are every day writing the history of the city?

Dr. J. A. Macdonald told Knox College Alumni that if the churches had done its full duty for the past half century, there would be no war talk to-day. The doctor, it will be recalled, left the pulpit for the sanctum some years ago, and no one has ever suspected him of a tendency to preach harmony in his new sphere.

A local pessimist has figured out that if the weather keeps on working overtime it will yet score thirty-two and one-half wet days this month.

No two men ever fought more strenuously on the floors of Parliament than Sir Charles Tupper and Sir Richard Cartwright. And now, the veteran Father of Confederation lays upon the bier of the dead, one of the most graceful tributes that the human tongue has ever uttered.

Every dollar sent to the United States to purchase an article manufactured in this country is a dollar lost and Canadian labor is defrauded of its own. If the Canadian manufacturers have a grievance along this line—and they say they have—the remedy is obvious, the tariff can be raised.

Governor Wilson and his friends rejoice because their candidate for the United States senate was nominated at the New Jersey primaries but it does not necessarily follow that the man who votes for a senator will support a presidential nominee, even though he be of the same political stripe.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Robin's Nest in a Gas Globe.

About March 27 a robin began to make her nest in a spare gas globe placed horizontally on a peg on which one may hang an overcoat in the vestry of a border parish church. She did not seem to mind the playing of the organ, which is quite near the nest, or the bright light of the incandescent burner which had to be used before and after evening service, or even the presence of minister and beadle. She laid five eggs and reared four young ones, which left the nest on May 16.—London Globe.

Training Young Cobblers.

Cobbling is recognized as a trade in the vocational schools of Buffalo. Several schools are set aside for teaching trades to young boys and girls, and the latest addition to the course is one in cobbling. A competent instructor has been engaged to teach the young men how to repair shoes. There are a number taking up the course, and it is certain that the trade will not become extinct with the young generation studying the principles of rejuvenating old shoes.—Shoe Retailer.

Controller Allan will suggest a cut of 20 per cent. in Hamilton's water rates.

An apple packing demonstration will be given at F. B. Hallman's farm near Dundee.

Winnipeg Grain Market.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 25.—The slump in the premiums on cash wheat was the feature of today's market. For some time the premium for spot has been high, owing to the demand to fill lake and ocean tonnage which was contracted ahead. The heavy drop in premiums is due to the fact that any of these charters which were not switched to Duluth have been probably well filled. Options opened 1-8c to 1-4c higher, but weakened later in sympathy with American markets, and closed 7-8c lower for all months. Oats were in fair demand, closing 1-2c to 5-8c lower. Flax was strong for both months, October closing 1c higher and November 1c higher. Receipts 489 cars inspected, 100 in sight for tomorrow.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Sept. 25.—There was a fair demand from foreign buyers for wheat, and, as early prices bid were unchanged from yesterday, sales of a number of loads of Manitoba and Duluth were made, but late cables came weaker at a decline of 3d. Some business was worked in oats for export, and there is a fair demand for old and new crop barley. Locally, oats are very strong, with a good demand, and sales of sample grades were made at 52c to 54c, ex-store. A sale of 50,000 No. 3 yellow corn was made at 80c f.o.b., Chicago, for November shipment, and other sales amounting to 40,000 were made for prompt and nearby shipment.

Foreign and local demand for flour good, and the market is active, with some millers away behindhand with orders. Demand for bran fair and shorts good. Butter and cheese rather quiet, but firm. Eggs active. Pork advanced 50c to $1, and pure lard ¼c, while dressed hogs declined 25c.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Sept. 25.—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Sept. 21 were 1700 cattle, 2750 sheep and lambs, 1775 hogs and 700 calves, while the offerings on the market this morning for sale were 1200 cattle, 700 sheep and lambs, 2050 hogs and 400 calves.

Owing to the increased supplies of common and medium cattle, an easier feeling prevailed in the market for such, and prices ruled lower, but choice steers were scarce. In fact, there were none on the market, while good stock met with a good demand. The attendance of buyers was large, and a fairly active trade was done, with sales of good steers at $6.25 to $6.50; medium at $5.25 to $5.75, and common at $4 to $5 per 100 pounds. There was considerable demand for choice butcher cows, which sold well at $5.25 to $5.50; medium at $4 to $5, and common at from the inside price down to $2.50 per 100 pounds. The quality of the bulls offered was common and brought from $2.50 to $3.50 per 100 pounds. The tone of the market for lambs was steady at the recent decline in prices, owing to the fact that the offerings were much smaller than they have been of late, and the demand good, at $5.50 to $6 per 100 pounds, while sheep were quiet and unchanged at $3.50 to $3.75 per 100 pounds. The trade in calves was active at prices ranging from $3 to $10 each, as to quality. An easier feeling prevailed in the market for hogs, and inside prices were 25c per 100 pounds lower than on Monday on account of the larger supply, but at the reduction the demand was good and sales of selected lots were made at $8.75 to $9.10 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—Cattle—Receipts, 18,000; market, steady to 15c lower; beeves, $5.25 to $11; Texas steers, $4.65 to $6.25; western steers, $6 to $9.70; stockers and feeders, $4.20 to $7.70; cows and heifers, $2.90 to $8; calves, $8.50 to $11.75.

Hogs—Receipts, 18,000; market, generally 5c up, but closed weak; light, $8.20 to $8.87½; mixed, $8.15 to $8.90; heavy, $7.95 to $8.80; rough, $7.95 to $8.15; pigs, $5 to $8; bulk of sales, $8.30 to $8.75.

Sheep—Receipts, 44,000; market, steady; native, $3.50 to $4.60; western, $3.50 to $4.50; yearlings, $4.75 to $5.50; lambs, native, $4.75 to $7; western, $5 to $7.25.

He declined to sleep ashore, took his potions, and went back on board the cutter. A lurid sunset was blotted out by the heaviest squall of the day, and Sheldon watched the whaleboat arrive in the thick of it. As the spritsail was taken in and the boat headed on to the beach, he was aware of a distinct hurt at sight of Joan at the steering oar, standing erect and swaying her strength to it as she resisted the pressure that tended to throw the craft broadside in the surf. Her Tahitians jumped out and rushed the boat high up the beach, and she led her blacks following through the gate of the compound.

"Lovely, perfectly lovely—Punkebby," she panted. "I shall buy it. I'll write to the commissioner tonight. And the site for the bungalow—I've selected it already—is wonderful. You must come over some day and advise me. You won't mind my staying here until I can get settled? Wasn't that squall beautiful! And I suppose I'm late for dinner. I'll run and get clean and be with you in a minute."

"Do you know, I'm never going to squabble with you again," he announced, when they were seated.

"Squabble!" was the retort. "It's such a sordid word. It sounds cheap and nasty. I think it's much nicer to quarrel."

"Call it what you please, but we won't do it any more, will we?" He cleared his throat nervously, for her eyes advertised the immediate beginning of hostilities. "I beg your pardon," he hurried on. "I should have spoken for myself. What I mean is that I refuse to quarrel. You have the most horrible way, without uttering a word, of making me play the fool. Why, I began with the kindliest intentions, and here I am now"—

"Making nasty remarks," she completed for him.

"It's the way you have of catching me up," he complained.

"Why I never said a word. I was simply sitting here, being utterly lured on by promises of peace on earth and all the rest of it, when suddenly you begin to call me names."

"Hardly that, I am sure."

"Well, you said I was horrible, or that I had a horrible way about me, which is the same thing. I wish my bungalow were up. I'd move tomorrow."

But her twitching lips belied her words, and the next moment the man was more uncomfortable than ever, being made so by her laughter.

"I was only teasing you. Honest Injun. And if you don't laugh I'll suspect you of being in a temper with me. That's right, laugh. But don't"—she added in alarm, "don't, if it hurts you. You look as though you had a toothache. There, there; don't say it. You know you promised not to quarrel, while I have the privilege of going on being as hateful as I please. And to begin with, there's the Flibberty Gibbet. I didn't know she was so large a cutter. But she's in disgraceful condition."

"Her skipper's bad with fever," Sheldon explained. "And he had to drop his mate off to take hold of things at Ugi—that's where I lost Oscar, my trader. And you know what sort of sailors the niggers are."

She nodded her head judicially as he asked for a second helping of tinned beef, not because he was hungry, but because he wanted to watch her slim, firm fingers. They were grown with tan and looked exceedingly boyish. Then, and without effort, the concept came to him. Yes, that was it. He had stumbled upon the clew to her tantalizing personality. The fingers, sunburned and boyish, told the story. He had tried to treat with her as a woman when she was not a woman. She was a mere girl, and a boyish girl at that, with sunburned fingers that delighted in doing what boys' fingers did, with a body and muscles that liked swimming and violent endeavor of all sorts, with a mind that was daring but that dared no farther than boys' adventures and that delighted in rifles and revolvers, Stetson hats and a sexless camaraderie with men.

Somehow, as he pondered and watched her, it seemed as if he sat in church at home listening to the small boys chanting. She reminded him of those boys, or their voices, rather. The same sexless quality was there. In the body of her she was a woman. In the mind of her she had not grown up. She had not been exposed to ripening influences of that sort. She had had no mother. Yes, her father, native servants and rough island life had constituted her training. Horses and rifles had been her toys, camp and trail her nursery. From what she had told him her seminary days had been an exile, devoted to study and to ceaseless longing for the wild riding and swimming of Hawaii. A boy's training and a boy's point of view!

Well, there was only one thing for him to do. He must meet her on her own basis of boyhood and not make the mistake of treating her as a woman. He wondered if he could love the woman she would be when her nature awoke, and he wondered if he could love her just as she was and himself wake her up. After all, whatever it was, she had come to fill quite a large place in his life, as he had discovered that afternoon while scanning the sea between the squalls. Then he remembered the accounts of Berande and the cropper that was coming and scowled.

CHAPTER X.

A MESSAGE FROM BOUCHER.

SHELDON became aware that she was speaking.

"I beg pardon," he said. "What's that you were saying?"

"You weren't listening to a word. I knew it," she chided. "I was saying that the condition of the Flibberty Gibbet was disgraceful, and that tomorrow, when you've told the skipper and not hurt his feelings, I am going to take my men out and give her an overhauling. We'll scrub her bottom, too. Why, there's whiskers on her copper four inches long. I saw it when she rolled. Don't forget, I'm going cruising on the Flibberty some day, even if I have to run away with her."

While at their coffee on the veranda Satan raised a commotion in the compound near the beach gate, and Sheldon finally rescued a mauled and frightened black and dragged him on the porch for interrogation.

The black drew a scrap of white paper from under his belt and passed it over. Sheldon scanned it hurriedly.

"It's from Boucher," he explained, "the fellow who took Packard's place. Packard was the one I told you about who was killed by his boat's crew. He says that Port Adams crowd is cutting up—fifty of them, in big canoes—and camping on his beach. They've killed fair a dozen of his pigs already and seem to be looking for trouble. And he's afraid they may connect with the fifteen runaways from Lunga."

YOUNG WIFE SAVED FROM HOSPITAL

Tells How Sick She Was And What Saved Her From An Operation.

Upper Sandusky, Ohio.—"Three years ago I was married and went to housekeeping. I was not feeling well and could hardly drag myself along. I had such tired feelings, my back ached, my sides ached, I had bladder trouble awfully bad, and I could not eat or sleep. I had headaches, too, and became almost a nervous wreck. My doctor told me to go to a hospital. I did not like that idea very well, so, when I saw your advertisement in a paper, I wrote to you for advice, and have done as you told me. I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, and now I have my health.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and such unquestionable testimony as the above proves the value of this famous remedy and should give every one confidence.

WHILE every man, whether he works for others or for himself, should carry a LIFE INSURANCE POLICY. There is especial need of this on the part of the man who is IN BUSINESS FOR HIMSELF. In the case of such a one's death the proceeds of a policy may mean not merely the usual financial protection for his dependents—They may be the means of saving a profitable business from disruption and a family from serious loss. Every enterprising business man occasionally contracts obligations which he cannot immediately pay, but which, if he retains his health and strength, he manages to cancel in course of time. Sometimes, however, death prevents the payment of business debts that were fully warranted by the outlook when they were incurred. To compel payment of these debts out of the policy-holder's regular estate might greatly embarass his family. But if the head of the firm is insured for an adequate sum, the pressing indebtedness may be met, the business saved, without embarassing the family, and either carried on successfully or sold to good advantage.

On his own account also, a business man should be eager to insure his life for as much as he can conveniently pay premiums on. The business man's credit is always improved by the fact that he has had his life well insured. A Life Insurance Policy, therefore, is a good asset and should be considered indispensable by any one who is conducting a business of his own.

Remember that the late Cyrus W. Field was said to be worth at one time $20,000,000, yet he did not leave a dollar to his family, except his Life Insurance.

Life Insurance is the one asset that never deteriorates at death.

The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada will give you the protection you need. Call, phone or write them—

PETERBORO WILL BE ON THE LINE OF THE WATERWAY COMMERCE OF CANADA

With the Completion of the Trent Canal, Which is Possible Within Three Years---Chief Engineer of Railways and Canals Inspects The Canal in Company With the Local Member.

THE BURLEIGH WATER POWER DEAL

New Swing and Bridge for Gannon's Narrows Discussed---Much Needed Bridge Also Across Pigeon Lake.

On Monday night, the Chief Engineer of Railways and Canals, arrived in Peterboro and inspected the local works under construction. On Tuesday, in company with Mr. Burnham, Mr. R. McLachlan, C. E., Superintendent McClellan and Assistant Superintendent Knox, he went up the Canal in the "Bessie Butler" and inspected the various locks and dams along the route.

At Burleigh, the flooding of the roadway, that occurred last spring, was looked into, and at Buckhorn, where the flooding was very heavy in the spring, the new dam was also inspected and the damages done in neighborhood. It is contended that the new dam at Buckhorn, does not let the water away as quickly as the old one and this contention was brought to the Chief Engineer's notice.

As one of the residents said, if it had not been for the natural stream to the east of Mr. Tom. Eastwood, which let off a large body of water the dam, and all connected with it, would have been swept out of existence.

A number of claims for damages have been made, in consequence of the reputed change of level, etc., of the dam at Buckhorn and [illegible] all depend on the dam at Buckhorn, the engineer's inspection was for determining it

In company with Mr. Burnham, the Chief Engineer, inspected the claims for damages at Buckhorn and at some other places along the route.

GANNONS NARROWS

The new swing and bridge at Gannon's narrows were discussed and also the much discussed project of a bridge across the southern end of Pigeon Lake. There can be no doubt but, if the inhabitants of the north country put their shoulder to the wheel, the Dominion Government will assist the county and the province in providing a bridge near Allen's Point, probably something like Chemong Bridge, which will be of great value in improving commerce between the north country and the south, now cut off—except when the ice bridge forms- from all communication, except travellers who go round by Buckhorn, which is of course an immense loss of distance.

COMPLETE IN THREE YEARS

In conversation with Mr. Burnham it was ascertained from one of those in authority and most likely to know that the Trent Canal will be opened from end to end within three years but this is dependent upon the completion of the contracts and it behooves the representatives along it's route, to see that the contractors do not receive too much indulgence in the way of lengthening the time for completion of their contract. Anything over three years for the full completion of the canal is looked upon as just so much wasted time. When completed, it is the determination of the Government to immediately begin to make improvements. It is recognized that while it will some day be a rival of low grade railways and the new Welland canal as a transportation system for grain it will be a most effective branch of the great Inland Waterway System, which is being so tremendously developed, especially in the upper lakes by the Canadian and American Governments. As a part of the system of the Inland Waterways, the Trent Valley Canal will be just as valuable as any other part, since it is only by the completion of the system, the internal commerce of a country can be fully developed.

We will then be in the Trent District, on the line of the Waterway Commerce of Canada, which is a most important thing.

LARGE MILLS POSSIBLE.

It will enable us in Peterborough to establish large flour mills and probably pulp mills and to bring pulp and grain here by cheap water trade for grinding purposes.

Mr. Burnham has determined to revive the agitation along the Trent district for more serious consideration by the people themselves of the Trent Valley Canal's importance as a part of the waterway system of Canada.

THE DAM AT BURLEIGH.

As an example of the improvements that will be made, take the new lock at Burleigh. The raising of the water at Burleigh which can be done with the new dam, to the extent of four feet, without incurring excessive repairing and damages will mean a vast deal to that branch of the Canal and is an example of what can be done everywhere throughout the system in making the Canal of deeper draught.

It is to be regretted that such water powers as that at Burleigh, which under these conditions, would be doubled in value, have been sold without anything but the most trifling return to the public treasury. Burleigh was sold for $50 and $200,000 made out of it by private individuals.

By reason of the great length of the lease, the new company will derive the benefits of an improved canal, the increased water power at Burleigh adding at least another $200,000 profit to this bargain, all it cost was $50.

AN INVESTIGATION.

Mr. Burnham intends to move in the House next winter, for an investigation of this transfer, since he is convinced that the permission of a transfer of such immense value, of a public franchise, for so trivial a sum, must have been corrupt, somewhere. As a noted Canadian recently observed, it is such performances as these that incline even the leaders of thought to Socialism.

If there is anybody who has a claim for damages, but has not fyled that claim, it will of course not be considered.

AT THE LIFT LOCK

A large concrete core is being put in on the east bank of the approach to the lift lock, which partly gave way and threatened serious results. It will hardly be credited that these immense earthworks were built without obviously necessary precautions.

Particular attention is called to the afternoon train for Belleville now leaving at 1.40 p.m., which will be changed to leave Peterboro at 1.30 p.m. This is an important change and should be carefully noted as this train is made up here and always leaves ON TIME 9d

THEATRICAL

Eddie Foy, that whimsical comedian of wide popularity, is starring this season in "Over the River," claimed by many to be his greatest success. The story of the play relates the predicament in which a wealthy man about town finds himself after a night of jollity. He wakes in his own home, to find chaos; while oblivious to his surroundings he has been arrested and sentenced to 30 days in prison—"over the river." The scene takes place in New York, where the prison is located on Blackwell's Island. The second act shows the interior of the penitentiary with Eddie Foy in stripes and is said to be one of the most amusing scenes ever designed for public favor. The third act shows a garden party with everyone in Mexican costume to welcome the return of the hero who has written to his trusting wife that he has been spending 30 days in Mexico.

POLICE WILL WATCH FOR SMALL BOYS

They Are Causing Trouble at the Public Library.

Several boys, who, judging from stature and age, should have been at home under the quilts, were loitering about the entrance to the Public Library last night, not in connection with any business with the institution, but for play.

Small boys have done considerable damage about the grounds at the Library and their actions have been such that a police officer has been instructed to watch the boys at this point. If further trouble or annoyance is caused they will be called to the police court. In some cases the flowers have been broken and damaged.

NEW YORK TO SEE FIRST
(OCTOBER 8TH THE DATE)
GAME IN WORLD'S SERIES

New York, Sept. 26.—The National Baseball Commission decided yesterday afternoon to hold the first game of the world's series between the Giants and the Red Sox in New York Tuesday, October 8.

The toss of a coin decided which city was to get the opening game. President McAleer of the Boston club chose heads; the coin fell tails, and the game went to New York. A second toss with similar results fixed the opening game for Tuesday, October 8. The Boston Club preferred Monday, October 7.

The Boston club will control the sale of tickets in that city. This is a victory for Ban Johnson in the American League.

The umpires selected were: National League, Klem and Rigler; American League, O'Laughlin and Evans.

In New York the sale of tickets will be handled by the National Commission. Boston has worked out a plan it was announced, whereby tickets will be delivered so far as is practicable to persons who have already made application. The applications have been filed and they will be notified to send the money. Tickets good for three games each, will be issued.

In New York with a view to defeating the speculators the only seats reserved with be a block of 6,500 in the upper grand stand. Seats in the lower grand stand and bleachers will be sold at the Polo grounds and each person purchasing a ticket must pass directly into the grounds.

BUMPUS JONES DOWN AND OUT

Batted Ball Responsible for His Present Condition.

Cincinnati, Sept. 26.—Poor old "Bumpus" Jones, the ex-National League pitcher, who was an idol on the 'Reds' team years ago, is in a helpless condition at the St. Elizabeth hospital, Dayton, Ohio. He played in this city in 1893. In 1901 he was hit in the stomach by a batted ball and has suffered from stomach trouble ever since. He is sadly in need and his friends are going to get up a benefit for him.

BASEBALL

Guelph Mercury.—That there will be a ball team in Guelph in 1913 is an assured fact. The present holders of stock in the incorporated stock company are at work selling more shares of stock to put the company on a strong financial basis, and it is expected that in 1913 the Guelph team will be as good as any in the league as the owners want to have Guelph up near the top of the pennant heap.

RUGBY

Another surprise awaited the faithful few who wandered out to the Nicholas street field to view yesterday's workout. This was the reappearance of Dick Sheehy, whom Intercollegiate critics were unanimous in declaring the fastest flying wing playing college football. The way the wily Ricard tore the senior line was a caution. Dick seems to be in perfect condition already, and will likely sustain his reputation of the past.—Ottawa Free Press.

GOLF

Below is the third round for the club championship. Games must be played on or before Saturday, 28th September:

C. F. Matthews vs. Dr. Gowan.
R. Neill vs. G. F. Bennett.

POLICE STATION NEARLY READY

The new police station may be occupied on the first floor by October 1st. Prisoners are now lodged in the cells in the new building, which is comfortably warmed by a furnace. It will be some time however, before the court room will be ready.

PEACE AND QUIETNESS IN THE COUNTY

From the remarks of county officials there appears to be very few known cases of poverty or hardship existing throughout this county. Every person seems to be fairly well fixed as far as material things count and no complaints are heard from any source. This fact is proven by the absence of any cases in Police Magistrate Edmison's court.

County Constable Cochrane is also the authority for the statement that there are no cases of breaches of the law or crime coming under his notice.

WOLVES AND BEARS NUMEROUS

The Lindsay Post's correspondent from Nogie's Creek states that alarming reports are coming in of heavy losses among cattle and horses on the ranches a few miles north of there. Wolves and bears are very numerous and are causing great destruction.

Sewing Machines.

In the forty-eight years that records have been kept more than $100,000,000 worth of sewing machines have been exported from the United States. The exports this year will be nearly $10,000,000, and the value of the domestic product is in the vicinity of $28,600,000. Every country on the face of the globe uses the machine Elias Howe gave to the world, and his gift has added untold millions of dollars to the wealth of the nations.—Argonaut.

The report of the secretary and registrar of the Province of Ontario showed that eight hundred and sixty companies were incorporated during the fiscal year.

While Manitoba had a heavy frost Tuesday night and ice nearly a quarter of an inch thick appeared on ponds yesterday morning, the day was reported an ideal one for harvesting.

The Man of Discretion Observes an Average

THE GIFT OF OMISSION—knowing what not to wear—is important.

A man of Dress Discretion, a well-dressed man, avoids the patterns and styles which are exaggerations.

The English tendency, with Semi-ready refinements, holds favour.

The Semi-ready style is the net average of what the best dressed men in Canada are wearing.

The softness and warmth of the new winter fabrics combine with the cultured designs in our Fashion attire.

Even if you value wear before style, you get it in the innate goodness of these Suits and Overcoats at $15, $18 and $20. That they are in perfect, unobtrusive, good taste cannot be urged as an objection.

Suits and Overcoats $15 and up to, $20, $25 and $30.

Naturally, we push the line which gives the most service to our customers and therefore the least trouble to us.

Semi-ready tailoring makes good our guarantee—gives us more full satisfaction to sell to you—and that is why we recommend it always to our customers.

APSLEY NEWS

Special Correspondence.

Apsley, Sept. 26.—A social gathering was held at the home of Mr. Jack Tucker on Wednesday evening last to honor Mr. and Mrs. William Steele, and previous to their departure for Toronto. When all assembled in the spacious dining room an address was read by Mrs. William Staples, and at the proper time a presentation of a well filled purse was made by Mrs. E. Tucker.

Mr. and Mrs. Steele were completely taken by surprise. Mr. Steele made a very suitable reply in behalf of himself and Mrs. Steele thanking the neighbors for the kindness they had shown them, and assuring them when making new acquaintances in their new home, the ones they were leaving would still occupy a prominent place in their memory. The address was beautifully decorated with a painting of Forget-me-Nots. The children of the Sunday school also contributed towards the purse.

The address was as follows:

Anstruther, Sept. 18th, 1912.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Steele,—We your many friends, gather together this evening to bid you farewell. As among the oldest and most respected citizens of our neighborhood, we render to you our tribute of thanks for the great interest you have shown in the welfare of us all. You have taken a lively interest in our Sunday school and in all the church work, besides sympathizing with us in our afflictions and rejoicing with us in our pleasures.

It is with feelings of deepest regret that we learn of your early removal to Toronto. In order to emphasize the sincerity of our good wishes for future success and prosperity, and the deep sense of love that we as citizens feel at your removal we ask you to accept this purse, and wish you both God-speed with the hope of many future visits and the assurance of a hearty welcome.

Signed on behalf of the citizens of the neighborhood.

After the presentation a sumptuous tea was served in the dining room and the remainder of the evening was spent in singing and music. Before parting all joined in singing "God be with you till we meet again."

WILL DAIRY EXPORTS CEASE IN FOUR YEARS

Northwest Drawing Heavily From East And Likely to Continue For Long

According to The Trade Bulletin, Montreal, Mr. R. M. Ballantyne, Managing Director of the firm of Lovell & Christmas, predicts the end of Canada's dairy export business within the next four years. He bases this prediction on the fact that for the past few years Canada's dairy exports have fallen off, and that there is every reason to believe that they will continue to do so in the near future. He states further that while Canada's population has been increasing by leaps and bounds, and its spending capacity has also been increasing, its butter and cheese production has not been increasing anywhere near in proportion. He points out further that the internal trade between the east and west is drawing from our export trade and that this will increase until there is none left for foreign trade.

In the same paper, in answer to Mr. Ballantyne, another man seeks to repudiate him by pointing out that the past is no pattern for the future. He predicts, on the contrary, that the Northwest Provinces will eventually become the great producers of butter and cheese, which will be forced upon them by mixed farming. This was increasing already. All this but tends to emphasize the desirability of extending the dairy industry in Eastern Canada.

MIXED FARMING AND FACTORIES

A Factor in the Raising of Food Supplies for Large Cities

It is worth while noting that where manufacturing has progressed most rapidly in Western Canada, there also the greatest amount of attention is being paid to mixed farming and the raising of food supplies for the growing towns and cities. For instance, in Manitoba, where the industrial expansion has been greatest, during the last ten years, food products have been supplied most abundantly. The recent census reflects a condition in Manitoba that is striking indeed. Of the net increase in population of that province during the last decade of nearly 200,000, about 105,000 people went into the towns and cities while only some 90,000 entered the rural districts. This kind of growth has been dependent largely upon an increased supply of food, and in Manitoba the idea of mixed farming is being adopted very readily. It was not an uncommon sight from the car window or in driving along the [illegible] last summer to see here and there waving fields of luxuriant corn. Root and hay crops are also being grown more extensively and in consequence the output of dairy produce, meats and poultry have become an important feature in the agricultural account of Manitoba. Last year potatoes and roots were harvested to the extent of over eight million bushels. The yield of cultivated grasses amounted to nearly 300,000,000 pounds. Dairy and creamery butter and cheese, worth a million and a half dollars, were marketed by the farmers of the province in the year. In addition to the dairy products, the farmers disposed of 91,000 turkeys, 53,000 geese and 465,000 chickens, and the number of head of horses, cattle, sheep and swine in the province was 735,000. These items in the agricultural output of Manitoba have a great deal to do with the fact that industrial activity is more pronounced in that province than in either Saskatchewan or Alberta, even though the natural facilities for manufacturing in the last named provinces are in some respects better than in Manitoba.

Home Trade of $80,000,000

Canada's home consumption of dairy produce, it is needless to say, continues to increase, but few people seem to realize the extent of this increase which cannot be less than $2,000,000 every year, including milk and all its products. This means that our home market absorbs $20,000,000 more of the dairy productions than it did ten years ago. The total home trade cannot be far from $80,000,000 a year, which means that our home market is by far the most important one for the dairy farmers.

A Hive of Industry

The present water power development in Canada is estimated by the Department of Interior at only 486,8[illegible]7 horse power. If manufacturing in Canada increases commensurately with the development of this now latent power, what a hive of industry there will be extended throughout the length and breadth of this Dominion.

Life with some fellows is simply a case of meat and drink.

NEWLY ARRIVED BARBER, CUT PRICES AND LOST HIS CARD

The barber shop of Monty Eggington is to-day without tonsorial artists, because the proprietor went outside the rules and regulations of the Barbers' Union and cut the prices.

His card and that of two barbers received a stroke of the blue pencil when a committee of the Union, visited his establishment yesterday.

Last Tuesday, by small bill board advertisement at the door of his shop on George street, Eggington, who is an Englishman and recently from the Old Country, gave a schedule of prices as drafted by himself.

He gave hair cuts at fifteen and twenty cents, while the price charged under the union schedule is twenty-five cents.

LOCAL MAN FOR ADVISORY BOARD

During the coming months of Ocparate and High School teachers, and tober and November, the Public, Se-the inspectors of the province will elect their representatives to the Advisory Council.

This council is consulted by the Provincial Government on educational affairs and it is a matter of importance that capable representatives be chosen by the different bodies of educationists.

The Public school teachers elect four representatives, and among those offering themselves as candidates for election is Mr. R. F. Downey, Principal of the Central school, Peterborough.

Mr. Downey is well fitted to represent the Public school teachers of Ontario on the Advisory Council. He was born and educated within the province, and has been engaged in Public school work since he entered the profession.

He received his early training in the public schools of Peel county and at the West Toronto Collegiate Institute. He obtained his professional training at the Ontario Normal College and a few years later secured his B.A. and B. Paed. degrees from Queen's University.

Mr. Downey's first experience in teaching was in a rural school. After gaining experience he was appointed principal of the Port Perry Model School which position he held for six years. Four years ago he was appointed principal of the Central School Peterborough, which position he still occupies.

In all the positions he has filled he has been eminently successful, and his services have been highly appreciated.

Mr. Downey's experience as a model school master and his present position as principal of a Normal Training school have kept him abreast of all educational movements and have given him an intimate knowledge of the needs of the profession.

His fitness for the position for which he is offering himself as a candidate should appeal to his fellow teachers throughout the province and win for him their hearty support.

In Mr. Downey the teachers would have a fitting representative, deeply interested in everything pertaining to the profession.

A MYSTERY

Officers Received a Call to Brock St. Residence.

A small crowd gathered on Brock street, near the rink, last night, when police officers Brown and Sills were called to investigate a case. It appeared as though a young lad had been caught at some misdeed and taken into a house. The officers remained in the house for about ten minutes and then reappeared with the youthful prisoner, who was told to go on home by Officer Brown after which the blue coat gave vent to an ovation for the benefit of the crowd, on the subject of people butting in on other people's business. All moved on at his command.

No report was made of the case at headquarters.

SURROUNDINGS NOT THE BEST FOR CHILDREN

Chambers Street Home Visited by The Truancy Officer.

Accompanied by Truancy Officer Cochrane, a reporter paid a visit to a home on Chambers street, where the officer investigated an alleged case of school truancy. Authorities reported reported that one of the boys in the family was absenting himself from school.

Mr. Cochrane also desired to ascertain whether the house was a proper and fit place for a child to dwell, and it must be said that he was unpleasantly impressed with what he beheld.

For one thing, the sense of smell was grievously offended and a thorough scouring and cleaning would have been an excellent prescription to apply to everything in the house, including the children. Of late the family has been assisted by a local charitable association connected with the church. Evidence in police court, however, where the husband has from time to time appeared, shows that he loves to quaff the flowing bowl and imbibe more than is amenable with sober living. His wife evidently does the best she can under the circumstances with what paltry sums of money she secures, so rarely supplied by her husband.

One of the children was suffering from a bad attack of whooping cough which was the excuse offered for the other child's absence from school. Mr. Cochrane served the mother with a notice, demanding that a physician's certificate be secured stating that such was the reason.

"I don't think this is a proper or fit place for the bringing up of children" was the officers comment as his eye took in the disorderly and untidy condition of the household.

The front room in the house literally swarmed with flies, and the breeze wafted in bad odors from the back yard.

A general house-cleaning campaign would go far towards alleviating the untidy condition of the house.

Ottawa, Sept. 27.—Hon. George E. Foster left last evening for England to attend the meetings of the Imperial Trade Commissions, and will be absent until Christmas.

The commission resumes its sittings on Oct. 9, and the list of subjects of inquiry, as previously published, includes a general investigation into trade conditions, a survey of the natural resources of the Dominion, their facilities for production, manufacturers, and source of supply; a general investigation into immigration and the efficiency of the agencies now employed; how present methods can be improved, etc.

To cover the ground thus mapped out, the commission will both collect statistical information and hear evidence of expert persons. New Zealand and Australia will be visited next spring, but the order of going to the other Dominions will be determined later.

WILSON WELCOMED

Democratic Candidate Warmly Received on His Tour

Fall River, Mass., Sept. 27.—Governor Woodrow Wilson found the people of Massachusetts, who greeted him yesterday, as enthusiastic and demonstrative as any he has met since he began campaigning for the Presidency.

Great crowds turned out at Springfield, Barre, and Fall River, where the governor made scheduled speeches, but along the way his reception was practically continuous.

The nominee covered a variety of topics in his speeches, including tariff, the questions affecting monopoly and Governmental assistance to farmers. He said last night he felt deeply pleased at the friendship he had struck up with the people.

It is ten times faster and less expensive than submarine cables

MORAL REFORMERS WANT AN OFFICIAL CENSOR OF PLAYS

Application Will be Made to Premier Borden—Magazine is to be Established to Fight the White Slave Traffic—Tobacco Growing Condemned

Toronto, Sept. 27.—Premier Borden is to be asked by the Dominion Moral Reform Council of Canada to have an act passed for the appointment of a Dominion board of censors to report on every play and act given at any theatre in the Dominion by any company, troupe, or association. This was recommended by Rev. Dr. T. Albert Moore, at the annual meeting of the board of temperance and moral reformers of the Methodist Church in Canada, which met at the Metropolitan Church yesterday. Delegates were present from all over Canada and Newfoundland. Rev. Dr. Carman and Rev. Dr. Chown presided alternately.

The board decided to establish a monthly magazine to fight the white slave traffic. It will be edited by Rev. Dr. Moore. The periodical will also emphasise the duties of citizenship.

In view of the great and growing needs of the work throughout the whole field, it was recommended that three field secretaries be appointed under the general secretary. One will reside in the west, one in the east and one in Ontario. Dr. Moore reported that in co-operation with other denominations, a social survey had been made in Montreal by a lady expert from the United States. Much valuable information was secured regarding the moral conditions, labor problems, public amusements and this evidence it is proposed to base further action.

A moral survey will be made in other Canadian centres also in smaller towns and as far as possible in the rural districts.

A lively discussion took place over tobacco growing in southwestern Ontario. A motion was finally adopted endorsing the action of the London conference, which urged all Methodists in the district to strive to repress the growing of tobacco and to discourage its use in every possible way.

Consul Arrested for Theft.

Duluth, Sept. 27.—Charged by the police with taking $4,000 from four estates left in his care, V. D. Nikolitch, general consul for Montenegro in the United States and Canada, was arrested here yesterday. The consul, upon being taken to jail, declared that international law prohibits his arrest by civil authorities.

In default of $1,500 bail he went to jail. Bonding companies caused his arrest. The prisoner says he has already written to Montenegro for $6,000 and that he will soon pay all obligations.

TWENTY HURT WHEN TRAIN LEFT TRACK NEAR CHATHAM

Day Coach and Dining Car Were Telescoped and All Passengers Were Severely Shaken Up—Miss Lafferty, of Chatham, May Die As Result of Her Injuries—Defective Rail the Cause.

Chatham, Sept. 27.—A score of persons were injured, one, Miss Lafferty of Chatham, fatally, when the Grand Trunk fast train No. 16, from Detroit, was derailed about five miles west of Chatham about five o'clock yesterday afternoon. The dining car and the day coach were rolled over into the ditch and telescoped, while the engine, baggage car and the two rear-end day coaches, though they left the tracks, remained on the roadbed.

Among those injured are: Mrs. Mead, Kent Bridge, Ont.; Mrs. Robert Coyle, Chatham; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Richards, Chatham; Miss S. T. Lewis, Detroit, Mich.; Miss Cox, Toronto; Miss Costello, Toronto; M. E. Gray, Brantford.

The dining-car was almost deserted, but the day coach was crowded with passengers, for the most part residents of Chatham. That the loss of life was not heavy is little short of miraculous, as it is stated by passengers that the train was traveling at the rate of about 50 miles an hour.

News of the accident reached Chatham speedily and motor cars and other vehicles were at once rushed to the scene and the work of rescue begun, the injured being hurried away to the General Hospital at Chatham. Here it was found that Miss Lafferty's injuries were fatal, she being hurt internally and paralysed. It is feared her back is broken.

Several others required attention, but while severely cut and bruised, their injuries are not considered serious. Every passenger in the two coaches was severely shaken up, although the majority were able to dispense with hospital attention, their injuries being attended to at nearby farm houses.

Engineer Overland of Toronto, who was with the train, which was in charge of Conductor Higgins, denies that the train was going at high speed and asserts that the derailment was due to a defective rail. Passengers, however, say, in their opinion, the train was going at from forty-five to fifty miles an hour, and say that the ties appeared to have been in an unsafe condition.

The accident occurred on a level stretch about two and a half miles west of the diamond, a point where several lines intersect. The spot has not been regarded as a dangerous one, there being no curve.

As soon as news of the wreck was received an auxiliary started from London and reached the scene about an hour after the accident, but despite all efforts traffic was tied up west of Chatham until a late hour last night.

The damage to the diner and day coach was considerable, while the road bed was badly torn up.

Passengers on the wrecked train were able to leave Chatham on a special train east from Chatham late last night.

EMPIRE'S DESTINY CANNOT BE SETTLED BY TELEGRAM

Canadian Manufacturers Approve of the Answer Sent by President Curry to the Grain Growers' Guide—Premier Borden Spoke at Banquet Last Night.

Ottawa, Sept. 27.—Without a dissenting voice the Canadian Manufacturers' Association yesterday endorsed the attitude of President Curry as shown in his reply to a telegram from The Grain Growers' Guide asking that the association declare for a duty on British goods equal to only half that on imports from the U. S. President Curry, in addressing the convention, said he thought the message was part of a political game. His reply was:

"The Grain Growers' Guide Winnipeg, Man.:

"The association acknowledges the receipt of the message from The Grain Growers' Guide, dealing with the two questions—first, Canada's loyalty to the Motherland; second, the question of a larger preference on British goods.

"Our association believes that all Canadians, regardless of their calling, are doing what they can to promote the feeling of loyalty and closer union between all parts of the British Empire.

"The attitude of the C. M. A. on the British preference has been set forth in resolutions and adopted after long and careful consideration of the varied interests involved. It believes that no adequate consideration of such a sweeping proposal as that embodied in your telegram, received only this morning in the closing hours of the convention, is possible.

"If any organization or organizations, representative of all productions in this, or both the middle and the farthest West, desire a conference on any matter looking to the advancement of Canada as a whole, or as an integral part of the British Empire, our association will gladly co-operate."

R. S. Gourlay of Toronto is now president of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, with C. B. Gordon of Montreal, vice-president. Vice-presidents for the provinces are: Ontario, J. W. Woods, Ottawa; Quebec, D. J. Fraser, Montreal; Manitoba, J. A. Parkhill, Winnipeg; British Columbia, A. O. Flemmerfelt, Vancouver; New Brunswick and P.E.I., S. E. Elkin, St. John, Alberta and Saskatchewan, W. Georgeson, Calgary. Nova Scotia will be chosen later.

As a fitting climax to an eminently successful convention, the C. M. A. held a banquet last night in the Chateau Laurier at which fully 500 were present, among the honored guests being Premier Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. J. D. Hazen, Hon. J. D. Reid, Hon. J. C. Doherty, Hon. A. E. Kemp, John Kirby, jr., president of the American Association of Manufacturers.

The new president, Mr. Gourlay, occupied the chair and acted as toastmaster for the one toast which was to the King.

None of the speeches was lenghty. The Premier paid some sincere compliments to the American people and the American nation and in a splendid oration urged all Canadians not to forget the importance of promoting the ideals of nationhood and character.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier made some humorous references to the tariff question and spoke in an appreciative way of the growth of Canadian industries.

Hon. Mr. Hazen advised the manufacturers to establish a Canadian Lloyds and said that the Government would do all that it possibly could to get better marine insurance rates for vessels on the St. Lawrence.

After dealing with facts and figures showing the growth of Canada in the last few years Mr. White appealed to the Canadian manufacturers to recognize the importance of higher education.

CORNER STONE OF KNOX LAID

Sir John Gibson Officiated at This Ceremony Yesterday.

Toronto, Sept. 27.—Sir John Gibson, the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, "well and truly laid" yesterday afternoon the corner-stone of what will be the sixth home of Knox College in this city before a large gathering of people interested in educational and religious work. The site of the new college building is on the west side of the campus of the University of Toronto, and between Convocation Hall and the main building of the University. The proceedings of the afternoon were presided over by Sir Mortimer Clark, former Lieutenant-Governor of the Province and chairman of the board of management of Knox College.

At half-past two o'clock the faculty, the senate and the members of the board of management of Knox College gathered in Convocation Hall, and at three o'clock marched to the new site of the college.

Rev. Dr. R. P. MacKay conducted the opening devotional exercises, assisted by Rev. Dr. John Neil and Rev. Dr. John Somerville.

Praying For Peace.

Ballyroney, Ireland, Sept. 27.—Ulstermen are praying and hoping for peace, but if that is denied to them, they are ready for war, according to the Earl of Kilmorey, while addressing a big outdoor demonstration of Irish Unionists here yesterday.

Some 20,000 people from the County of Down were present at the meeting, which was the final Unionist demonstration before Ulster day (Sept. 28).

The Earl of Kilmorey was chairman and in his speech declared his intention of refusing to submit to home rule if the act passed. A large number of Irish peers, he said, including Field Marshal Lord Roberts, and the Marquis of Dufferin, had signed a pledge not to accept a seat in either house of an Irish Legislature.

FOUND GUILTY

But Mr. St. Clair May Go Free Under Suspended Sentence

Toronto, Sept. 27.—Rev. R. B. St. Clair was found guilty yesterday morning by Judge Denton, of the charge of circulating and having in his possession indecent literature. Sentenced was suspended.

In passing the suspended sentence on Mr. St. Clair, Judge Denton stated that the ends of justice would be met if Mr. St. Clair put up a $200 cash bond to refrain from publishing like pamphlets in future. It is possible, however, that Mr. St. Clair will refuse to put up the bond and allow sentence to be passed. Mr. Reney, counsel for the defence, will appeal the case.

BAD RECORD OF TORONTO BOYS

A Worker Among Them Charges Them With Drunkeness and Robbery.

Special To The Review.

Toronto, Sept. 27— That Toronto newsboys have been known to be intoxicated while selling papers on the streets, was the assertion made last night by C. J. Atkinson, a noted worker among boys. He also stated that some members of the newsboys' profession have been in the habit of waiting at the wharves until the arrival of the last boats and in the event of any of the belated passengers being intoxicated and unattended, luring them into dark corners under pretext of selling papers and relieving them of superfluous cash.

BEST SYSTEM IN THE WORLD

Praise for Secretary Hanna's Prison Farm at Guelph.

Toronto, Sept. 27—Two State Commissions, from California and Maryland respectively, were at the Provincial Parliament buildings yesterday looking into Ontario's system of handling prison reform methods as exemplified by the prison farm in Guelph. The visitors were in consultation with Sir James Whitney and Hon. W. J. Hanna.

The State Government of California was elected on a progressive reform ticket and plans improvement on an extensive scale. Mr. N. H. Oliver is the chairman of the special commission appointed by Governor Hiram Johnson, now candidate for the Vice Presidency of the United States on the Roosevelt ticket. With the authority of the Ontario Government he and his associates have just completed an extension investigation of the work being done at Guelph.

"Ontario has spoken the last word in prison reformatory methods," said Mr. Oliver, "at least so far as we have yet met, and we have been on the work for some time. The working of the institution and the results attained are a revelation."

On the report of the commission it is the purpose of the State Government of California to consider the whole question of reorganising prison methods and construction with a view to adopting just such reformatory methods as have been successfully carried out in this Province.

NEW WAR CRY FOR WEST

A new industrial west, will no doubt prove the solution of the West's difficulties, or it will mean that instead of trying to swing the rest of Canada around to a wholly agricultural policy, the West will be as anxious as any other part of Canada to hold the true balance of production and it will remove all desire, except on the part of the insane to keep out the establishment of American industries in Western Canada by lowering the tariff. As soon as reciprocity was defeated, the Americans began building in the West.

Even Sir Wilfrid Laurier recognizes this and called his "dogs of war" off the tariff at the annual banquet, at Ottawa, of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

In an interview, published in Winnipeg, yesterday, Sir Donald declared himself in favor of an immediate and substantial cash contribution to Britain for naval defence and the establishment of two Canadian fleet units. He said in part—

Regarding my idea of what the Canadian navy should be, it is this; Canada should have two fleet units one on the Atlantic and one other on the Pacific. The one on the Atlantic should always hold itself in readiness to co-operate with the home fleet of the Empire at a moment's notice. That on the Pacific should be in instant readiness to co-operate with the Australian and Southern Pacific units generally.

"The basal work of the Canadian navy should be to defend the shores of Canada against attacks. What would happen on the Pacific Coast? These cities would be in the hands of foreigners in short order, if any of their vessels escaped the British fleets or if disaster overtook the navy of the Motherland on the high seas.

"It is high time that this country undertook to police its own shores, to protect its own coasts. What would our opinion be of Montreal if we learned that the great city had asked or even allowed Toronto, to defend its streets with police and to pay the bills? We would scoff at that city. But we fail to see that the Dominion of Canada is sponging protection for its coast cities on the Motherland just as much as one city would be on another if it allowed that city to foot its bills."

Liberty Was Brief.

Guelph, Sept. 27.—Grant and McGillivray, the two young men who escaped from the provincial farm a few days ago, and were captured at Ayr, appeared before Magistrate Saunders yesterday afternoon. Both pleaded to escaping and also to stealing goods. They were sentenced to two years, less one day, each, for the first offence, and six months for the latter.

McGillivray was to have been before the parole board on Saturday and would likely have been released in a few days.

TORONTO POLICE CAPTURE JEWELRY STORE THIEVES

Well Known Underworld Characters Are Caught in the Net and Loot Valued at $2,000 Found in Their Possession

Toronto, Sept. 28.—Mainly through the clever work done by Detective Wallace, the three men responsible for the burglarizing of Follett & Cox's jewelry store at 776 Yonge street, last Tuesday night, were arrested yesterday afternoon. Two of them, "Bubbles" Lillie and William Snow, were apprehended at 60 West Queen street, and the other man, Oliver Brown, was caught by Detectives Montgomery and Taylor in the Kirby House. The arrests took place about three o'clock in the afternoon.

Wallace and five other detectives were put on the case. It was up to the department to get these thieves, and they made good. Wallace, through a friend, heard that certain individuals were suspected. A number of names of men known by the police as denizens of the underworld in Toronto were gone through. The list was gradually brought down to about a dozen, and then, through a series of eliminations, six men were sized up as the probable perpetrators of the theft. Wallace knew that Snow used to live on North street in a house almost directly opposite the rear of the place used by Follett & Cox. As Snow had figured in other deals of a like kind in the city, suspicion naturally attached itself to him and friend. The supposition was correct, and when Wallace and three other detectives went to the house on West Queen street yesterday afternoon they found Snow and two other men there as well as Snow's wife and a man named Reginald Lovett, who were both locked up on a charge of vagrancy.

All the jewelry stolen from the store was recovered. It aggregated $2,000. The jewelry was found in the hollow leg of one of the tables, wrapped up in a lace curtain. There were 54 lockets, 54 bracelets, 12 watches, 61 rings, 45 watch chains, 63 other chains, 10 brooches, 19 stick pins, 20 ladies' guards, 21 necklets and much other jewelry.

EXPERIMENTAL FARM

One of the first problems which Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, tackled when he took office was the re-organization of the Dominion's system of experimental farms. He found the farms were in many cases run down, the barns were out of repair, the farms were not up-to-date, they were not proving of value to the agriculturalist, they were not in other words real experimental farms, where farm problems could be worked out and solved. Last winter Mr. Burrell called a conference of the superintendents of the farms throughout the Dominion. They met in Ottawa, discussed amongst themselves mutual problems and talked over with the minister ways and means of improving their work, so that the results of their investigations can be of permanent benefit to the agricultural community.

Mr. Burrell's energetic policy is already bearing fruit. The barns and properties of the Experimental Farms all over the Dominion are being improved. The superintendents are taking a keener interest in their work and they are extending their activities. Efforts also are being made to have the Experimental Farms of each district deal more effectually with local agricultural problems. For instance there has been for several years a farm at Lacombe, Alta., of very restricted size. Lacombe is in the heart of what has been and should be a fine cattle raising and breeding country. The Lacombe farm, however, on account of its small area has been unable to experiment to any extent with stock problems. The government has bought a large addition to the farm and in future the Lacombe farm will make cattle raising one of its special features.

J. F. Grisdale, superintendent of Dominion Experimental Farms is at present on a trip of inspection through the west. He will visit all the government farms and spy out the country for agricultural possibilities. Mr. Grisdale will visit Southern Manitoba where a new farm is likely to be located. The site will be selected with a view to experimenting in apple and fruit culture on the prairies. For some time on a small scale apples of a remarkably good flavor have been raised around Morden in Southern Manitoba. Strawberries, raspberries and other small fruits it is known can be raised on the prairies with proper culture. The new farm will experiment in the development of hardy species of fruit to withstand the rigors of the western climate.

Mr. Grisdale will also visit while in the west the new town of Fort George in Northern British Columbia on the line of the G.T.P. He will inspect the agricultural possibilities of the country and it is possible that an experimental farm may be established in the district. Eastern Canada will later be visited by Mr. Grisdale. Already it is understood property has been obtained for a new experimental farm in New Brunswick and an announcement will be made shortly.

THE GUIDE'S POSITION

Probably President Curry, of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association hit the nail squarely on the head when he characterized as a political move, the request made by the Grain Growers' Guide of Winnipeg for the Association to co-operate in an attempt to rescue what would mean free trade with England inside of ten years. The request is but another proof that the West is selfish and fickle, and possessed of a tendency to ask for what is unreasonable if not impossible. The man who has everything to sell, as the western wheat grower has, and who has all his supplies to buy, may perhaps, be pardoned if he ask the manufacturers of the country to cut their own throats to the end, that he may profit by the suicide. If the expressed desire of the Guide should be implemented, how could it hope ever to see manufactories developed in the constituency which it represents?

No harm has been done. The Guide has secured a vast amount of free advertising and perhaps after all that was the real object it had in view, when it evolved its latest enterprise.

HYDRO-ELECTRIC STILL GROWS

The thriving towns in the Huron peninsular have all declared in favor of the Hydro-Electric and the present indications are that their hopes will soon be realized. Officials from Clinton, Seaforth, Exeter, Hensall Zurich and Blythe, met Engineer Yates of the Commission in Goderich the other day and an estimate of the cost of power was furnished them. Mr. Yates told his audience that if the would guarantee to take 1,50 horse power, the Commission would develope the Maitland River Power Company and sell power for $17 per hp. In case the towns want the power at once, it will be furnished at the same figure by a line from Seaforth.

When the amount used reaches 2400 horse power, the price will be reduced to $12 and the prospective patrons are satisfied that this can be brought about inside of two years. In the meantime, no difficulty is anticipated in accepting the first offer because Goderich alone will use 70 horse power, and Clinton, Hensal and Exeter will more than make up the balance.

In all of these towns, the ratepayers are practically unanimous in their desire for a change. They have watched the successful operation of the Hydro-Electric in other places and are convinced that, not only is the price of power and light lower than the figures of the private interests, but the service is superior and more reliable in every respect.

There is no halting between two opinions on the part of the Huron towns.

AN UNFORTUNATE CASE

There is in this city of churches and charity a case of harrowing destitution as revealed by the truant officer who in the line of duty found a mother struggling to care for a rising generation upon whose helpless heads the sins of a dissolute father have already been visited. There is sickness in the family and the oldest boy has been kept from school for that reason as given by the mother, but it is probable that in any event the boy has not the proper equipment to mingle with children of his own age without being subject to the sneers and ostracism of the most inconsiderate and socially exclusive element of humanity—the school children of the present day.

The official served a notice and with that his duty appears to end, but it seems to us that this should not close the case. The unfortunate mother should be aided in her struggle to raise her family and the children should be relieved from all danger of suffering. Charity may be cold but it is certainly several degrees higher in temperature than the prosaic acts of a truant officer who uncovers an unfortunate condition without the power, or, perhaps, the inclination to provide a remedy.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Roosevelt is known as "Teddy" Woodrow Wilson has been called "Woody," but as yet no one has had the hardihood to refer to the President as "Taffy," says the Ottawa Journal. Why he has been called that ever since he tried to placate the South by taking a rabid Southern Democrat into his cabinet as Secretary of War.

Here's another victory for the Hydro-Electric. It has been decided that in Toronto the Commission is exempt from the payment of a business tax.

Perhaps these early frosts are really blessings in disguise. They will not only purify the atmosphere but will check the growth of the city's crop of weeds.

Rev. R. B. St. Clair who was charged with circulating impure literature because he wrote a pamphlet against a salacious show held in a Toronto theatre has been found guilty, but goes free under suspended sentence. The censoring of plays will as usual be assigned to a police officer, who from the very nature of his occupation cannot be suspected of a super critical taste in such matters and who will escape all such trouble as that which befell the clergyman seeing that the officer makes his report by word of mouth. an unfortunate case

BETTER FARMING TRAIN FOR WEST

C.P.R. Will Run Another Special for Farmers' Benefit.

Following on the excellent work which has been accomplished by the Canadian Pacific Railway through its Better Farming Specials, which have traversed not only the lines in the West, but throughout the province of Quebec and New Brunswick arrangements are now being made for a special train fully equipped to cover the Western section of Canada, for the purpose of educating the people to cultivate mixed farming. The country is suffering through a scarcity of mixed farming not only in the west but throughout the eastern provinces, and the time is now arriving when something will have to be done to encourage the industry. Wheat farmers little realise the importance of mixed farming and the fact that there is a huge market for home produce of this kind. The "Mixed Farming Special" is scheduled to commence its journey on October 28 and will continue throughout the month of November. The Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture for Alberta, is making the arrangements and has received every possible assistance from the railway company. The equipment of the C.P.R. train will consist of two car loads of pure bred stock, two passengers coaches fitted for lecture rooms, one baggage car for displays of grains, grasses, weeds and dairy produce, a car load of poultry, one sleeper, one diner and one box car. Schools will be held for three hours at all stopping places beginning at nine o'clock in the morning and two o'clock in the afternoon. Arrangements will be made in advance at all points, and no time will be wasted. The following officials will accompany the train: Professor W. J. Elliot, of the Department of Natural Resources, C. E. Lewis, Provincial Superintendent of Fairs and Institutes; E. A. Craig Superintendent of Demonstration Farms; and other provincial official. The train will be made up in Calgary and there will be on board special lecturers, attention being particularly directed to the breeding of livestock and the raising of poultry dairying, hog raising and vegetable growing. One of the interesting collections on the special will be the noxious weeds in different stages of growth. "I intend to have every section-foreman and every section man on our road," said one of the prominent railway officials, "see that display of noxious weeds, in order that our right of way may be kept clean, and I have no doubt that the farmers will need an introduction to these weeds quite as much as the railwaymen. The lecture alone should attract the farmers to the train."

Schools will be held at Cochrane, Langdon, Irvine, Bow Island, Bassano, Walsh, Taber, Stirling, Raymond, McGrath, Cardston, Carmangay, Okotoks, High River, Cowley, Pincher Creek, Crossfield, Disbury, Vulcan, Red Deer, Bowden, Coronation, Chator, Stettler, Alix, Ponoka, Wetaskiwin, Provost, Hardisty, Killam, Daysland, Leduc and Camrose.

DATES OF FALL FAIRS

THE MARKET

Latest Quotations in Grain Dairy Products, Live Stock Etc

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

Liverpool wheat closed ⅛d lower. Corn ¼d to ⅜d lower.

Winnipeg Grain Market.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 26.—There was little new on the grain market today. Options opened fractionally under the previous close, and the trading was very moderate. Cash demand was confined almost entirely to spot wheat and all grades were wanted, while wheat in other positions was a very slow seller. Export enquiry was light and all bids were reported out of line. The close showed a decline for the day of ¼c to ⅜c.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Sept. 26.—Business in all lines of grain over the cable was dull, the demand from foreign buyers being limited owing to the continued weakness in the Winnipeg wheat market, and the further decline in cash price of 3/4c to 1c. The local market for oats remains strong on account of the scarcity of supplies and the continued good demand. Flour is fairly active and steady under a good demand for local account, but the export trade was quieter. Millfeed is firm. Butter is quieter, but prices rule steady. There was more enquiry for cheese, but the volume of business doing is small. Demand for eggs good. Provisions fairly active.

HAPPY THOUGHT

There is One Most Important Thing About a Stove

And that is this,—What heat value will it develop from the fuel you put into it?

Mind you, heat in the firebox does not count for anything. The heat must be in the oven or at the holes—where you need it for cooking.

So, when we say that from every ounce of fuel you put into a HAPPY THOUGHT you get the full return in heat value, we mean that you get something more than you get from other stoves.

A small fire in a HAPPY THOUGHT is equivalent to a big fire in a less efficient stove. It does more work. It saves you the difference in fuel.

That is the kind of saving that it pays you to invest in. A good stove is not a cheap article. It should be carefully selected. It should be chosen chiefly on this one point of greatest importance.

That is why a Quarter Million Canadian women use the HAPPY THOUGHT every day.

Adventure

A Romance of The South Seas

BY JACK LONDON

"In which case?" she queried.

"In which case Billy Pape will be compelled to send Boucher's successor. It's Pape's station, you know. I wish I knew what to do. I don't like to leave you here alone."

"Take me along, then."

He smiled and shook his head.

"Then you'd better take my men along," she advised. "They're good shots, and they're not afraid of anything—except Utami, and he's afraid of ghosts."

The big bell was rung, and fifty black boys carried the whaleboat down to the water. The regular boat's crew manned her, and Matauare and three other Tahitians, belted with cartridges and armed with rifles, sat in the stern sheets, where Sheldon stood at the steering oar.

"My, I wish I could go with you," Joan said wistfully as the boat shoved off.

"I'm as good as a man," she urged.

"You really are needed here," he replied. "There's that Lunga crowd; they might reach the coast right here and, with both of us absent, rush the plantation. Goodby. We'll get back in the morning some time. It's only twelve miles."

When Joan started to return to the house she was compelled to pass among the boat carriers, and one of them stepped up to her. In the darkness she could not make him out.

"What name?" she asked sharply. "What name belong you?"

"Me Aroa," he said.

She remembered him as one of the two sick boys she had nursed in the hospital. The other one had died.

"Me take 'm plenty fella medicine too much," Aroa was saying.

"Well, and you all right now," she answered.

"Me want 'm tobacco, plenty fella tobacco; me want 'm calico, me want 'm porpoise teeth; me want 'm one fella belt."

She looked at him humorously, expecting to see a smile, or at least a grin, on his face. The rest of the boys had crowded up at his back in a solid wall. Some one of them giggled, but the remainder regarded her in morose and sullen silence.

"Well?" she asked. "What for you want plenty fella things?"

"Me take 'm medicine," quoth Aroa. "You pay me."

"You go along quarters," she said, starting to turn on her heel to enter the gate.

"You pay me," said the boy.

"Aroa, you all the same one big fool. I no pay you. Now you go."

But the black was unmoved. She felt that he was regarding her almost insolently as he repeated:

"I take 'm medicine. You pay me. You pay me now."

Then it was that she lost her temper and cuffed his ears so soundly as to drive him back among his fellows. But they did not break up. Another boy stepped forward.

"Me Gogoomy," he said. "Bawo brother belong me."

Bawo, she remembered, was the sick boy who had died.

"Go on," she commanded.

"Bawo take 'm medicine. Bawo finish. Bawo my brother. You pay me. Father belong me one big fella chief along Port Adams. You pay me."

Joan laughed.

"Gogoomy, you just the same as Aroa, one big fool. My word, who pay me for medicine?"

She dismissed the matter by passing through the gate and closing it. But Gogoomy pressed up against it and said impudently:

"Father belong me one big fella chief. You no bang 'm head belong me. My word, you fright too much."

"Me fright?" she demanded, while anger tingled all through her.

"Too much fright bang 'm head belong me," Gogoomy said proudly.

And then she reached for him across the gate and got him. It was a sweeping, broad handed slap, so heavy that he staggered sideways and nearly fell. He sprang for the gate as if to force it open, while the crowd surged forward against the fence. Joan thought rapidly. Her revolver was hanging on the wall of her grass house. Yet one cry would bring her sailors, and she knew she was safe. So she did not cry for help. Instead, she whistled for Satan, at the same time calling him by name. She knew he was shut up in the living room, but the blacks did not wait to see. They fled with wild yells through the darkness, followed reluctantly by Gogoomy, while she entered the bungalow, laughing at first, but finally vexed to the verge of tears by what had taken place. She had sat up a whole night with the boy who had died, and yet his brother demanded to be paid for his life.

"Ugh! The ungrateful beast!" she muttered, while she debated whether or not she would confess the incident to Sheldon.

• • • • • • •

"And so it was all settled easily enough," Sheldon was saying. He was on the veranda, drinking coffee. The whaleboat was being carried into its shed. "Boucher was a bit timid at first to carry off the situation with a strong hand, but he did very well once we got started. We made a play at holding a court, and Telepasse, the old scoundrel, accepted the findings. He's a Port Adams chief, a filthy beggar. We fined him ten times the value of the pigs and made him move on with his mob. Oh, they're a sweet lot, I must say, at least sixty of them, in five big canoes, and out for trouble. They've got a dozen Sniders that ought to be confiscated."

"Why didn't you?" Joan asked.

"And have a row on my hands with the commissioner? He's terribly touchy about his black wards, as he calls them. Well, we started them along their way, though they went in on the beach to kai-kai several miles back. They ought to pass here some time today."

Two hours later the canoes arrived. No one saw them come. The house boys were busy in the kitchen at their own breakfast. The plantation hands were similarly occupied in their quarters. Satan lay sound asleep on his back under the billard table, in his sleep brushing at the flies that pestered him. Joan was rummaging in the storeroom, and Sheldon was taking his siesta in a hammock on the veranda. He awoke gently. In some occult, subtle way a warning that all was not well had penetrated his sleep and roused him. Without moving he glanced down and saw the ground beneath covered with armed savages. They were the same ones he had parted with that morning, though he noted an accession in numbers. There were men he had not seen before.

He slipped from the hammock and with deliberate slowness sauntered to the railing, where he yawned sleepily and looked down on them. It came to him curiously that it was the destiny ever to stand on this high place looking down on unending hordes of black trouble that required control, bullying and cajolery. But while he glanced carelessly over them he was keenly taking stock. The new men were all armed with modern rifles. Ah, he had thought so. There were fifteen of them, undoubtedly the Lunga runaways. In addition a dozen old Sniders were in the hands of the original crowd. These were the very same men who had killed his trader, Oscar, at Ugi.

"What name you walk about this place?" he demanded.

Pulpwood Experts are Instances of Enormous Loss That Has Accrued to Canadian Industry

The Department of the Interior has issued this report on pulpwood:

"If the pulpwood exported in 1911 had been reduced to pulp in Canada it would have supplied 66 mills of the average size of those in Canada. Thus one hundred and twenty mills instead of fifty-four would have been operating in Canada, employing Canadian labor and advancing Canadian industry. The provincial laws affecting the export of pulpwood within the exporting provinces changed considerably in 1911. In 1909, pulpwood from private lands in Ontario and from all lands in Quebec and New Brunswick could be shipped to points outside of Canada. In that year, however, the province of Quebec issued more restrictive regulations, which came into force on the 1st of September, 1910, prohibiting the export of unmanufactured wood cut on Crown lands within the province; and in 1911 New Brunswick passed legislation to the same effect, coming into force on the first day of October of that year, too late to affect the 1911 export trade.

Legislation Needed

"The effect of the Quebec legislation was noticeable last year. The export of raw pulpwood from that province was decreased by 142,864 cords, or 18.3 per cent. Its domestic consumption increased by 47,671 cords, or nearly 14 per cent., and three new mills were started in addition to several others under construction. In the other provinces taken together, the export of raw pulpwood increased by 47,662 cords, or 29 per cent.; the domestic consumption was increased by 26,130 cords, or 10.2 per cent.; and one mill less reported. It is evident that this legislation is already having the desired effect in stimulating the growth of the industry. It would also seem to have been effective in stimulating the export of pulpwood from other provinces, and from private lands in the province of Quebec.

"All the provinces are fully alive to the importance of preventing the export of this valuable raw material. So far as it is in their power, they have taken steps to prevent it from being carried off to build up the industries of another country, yet more than half the pulpwood cut in Canada is still carried over the border to supply the pulpmills of the United States. Nearly all of this wood is cut from privately owned land, over which the provinces have no jurisdiction. Only the federal authority, by the imposition of a prohibitive export tax, could stop this export.

Loss to Canada

It is interesting to note to what extent provincial industry would have been increased if the pulpwood exported to the United States had been converted into wood-pulp on Canadian soil. The 636,136 cords exported from Quebec would have supplied material for a year to forty-five pulp-mills of the average size operating in Quebec. In Ontario, six mills of the average size could have been kept running with the pulp logs exported from that province. The 122,698 cords shipped from the ports of New Brunswick would have supplied ten mills of the average size, if the high production of 1909 be taken as the normal capacity of the mills of the province. More than twice the number of mills operating in the Dominion might now be at work if Canadians had been farseeing enough to manufacture their own raw products.

LOCAL MARKETS HELPS FARMERS

Extension of Industries Provides a Market for Produce

A despatch to the Toronto Globe from St. John, N.B., says: "An encouraging feature of the outlook for farmers in the Maritime Provinces is the growth of the towns, which provide a growing market for produce. While there is no phenomenal growth, it is steady. Take for example, the town of Amherst. The Board of Trade met recently to discuss the housing problem. It was stated that from 100 to 150 men working in Amherst factories lived elsewhere, because of a lack of houses in the town, and President Curry of the car works stated that the population of Amherst would be increased by 1,000 this year if houses could be provided. The increase would be almost wholly due to enlargement of the number of industries requiring skilled workmen. In Sydney a new nail-mill is nearing completion, which will give employment to about 800 hands, and other industries in that town are also growing. Other towns in Nova Scotia are showing substantial growth, and this all means a better local market for the farmer."

WHILE every man, whether he works for others or for himself, should carry a LIFE INSURANCE POLICY. There is especial need of this on the part of the man who is IN BUSINESS FOR HIMSELF. In the case of such a one's death the proceeds of a policy may mean not merely the usual financial protection for his dependents—They may be the means of saving a profitable business from disruption and a family from serious loss. Every enterprising business man occasionally contracts obligations which he cannot immediately pay, but which, if he retains his health and strength, he manages to cancel in course of time. Sometimes, however, death prevents the payment of business debts that were fully warranted by the outlook when they were incurred. To compel payment of these debts out of the policy-holder's regular estate might greatly embarass his family. But if the head of the firm is insured for an adequate sum, the pressing indebtedness may be met, the business saved, without embarassing the family, and either carried on successfully or sold to good advantage.

On his own account also, a business man should be eager to insure his life for as much as he can conveniently pay premiums on. The business man's credit is always improved by the fact that he has had his life well insured. A Life Insurance Policy, therefore, is a good asset and should be considered indispensable by any one who is conducting a business of his own.

Remember that the late Cyrus W. Field was said to be worth at one time $20,000,000, yet he did not leave a dollar to his family, except his Life Insurance.

Life Insurance is the one asset that never deteriorates at death.

The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada will give you the protection you need. Call, phone or write them—

Visitors From Many Places Swelled the Attendance.

Mr. J. Lockie Wilson, Toronto, superintendent of fairs in Ontario, addressed the members and opened the Verulam fair, which was held at Bobcaygeon on Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 24 and 25. The fair was a grand success, though the attendance on the first day was small. Wednesday, regardless of a threatening sky, which was overcast with dark clouds, the people from north and south Verulam poured in and were joined by contingents from Peterborough, Lindsay, Reaboro, Manvera, Mariposa and other southern points, who came by boat and train to join with Bobcaygeon friends and view their natural products, fine arts and goods of home manufacture.

CHICKS WERE HATCHED IN THE GOOD OLD FASHIONED WAY

And Didn't Lose Any Time in Producing the Goods.

Mr. J. J. McCrae, the milk vendor is quite sure that he has chickens that have set up a record for early laying that takes precedence over the one claimed by Mr. G. W. Mulligan for his chickens about a week ago. There is only one day separating the respective periods however but one fact that seems to make Mr. McCrae's record more creditable is that his birds were not hatched by the incubator plan as were those belonging to Mr. Mulligan.

The former had six chicks hatched on April 2nd, and they were laying August 20th. They may have lain before that date, remarked Mr. McCrae, and the eggs not discovered. Mr. Mulligan's record was four months and nineteen days, and Mr. McCrae's four months and eighteen.

ANOTHER JUMP IN PRICES OF COAL NEXT MONTH

Will go up 10 or 15 Cents One Dealer Said To-day.

The price of coal will, in all probability make a jump higher by the first of October and doubtless go higher as the season goes on. The cause is the shortage brought about by the strikes, which although over, the mines are not working on full shift and consequently are behind in their output.

Most of the dealers are from eighty to a hundred tons behind in their orders and in some cases have a hard time in getting any at all.

The situation in Toronto is slightly better than here on account of the large supply which the dealers have on hand.

One dealer here informed a Review reporter that the price paid by him had been increased 45c. per ton in the last month, although he had only raised his prices 20c. He said that on the 1st of October the prices would go up about ten or fifteen cents. The present prices range mostly as the following:

Egg and Stove—$7.80.
Nut coal—$8.05.
Pea coal—$7.00.

SCHEME FOR SOLVING SERVANT GIRL PROBLEM

Mr. A. N. Collings, representing Collings & Company, Limited, of London, England, was in the city yesterday, and in conversation with a Review representative, outlined the scheme of his company for the supplying of domestic help for this country.

His is a well established company and one that is under bond of $5,000 to the Government.

All domestics received by the company must forward four references, and these, with a photo, are in turn sent to the applicant for help.

The company asks that the applicant remit the amount of the fare or, if not all, half the amount. In turn the company guarantees that the girl will remain in service one year. Should the full year not be served the applicant is refunded the full amount paid.

The company uses discretion and care in the selection of girls only those who comply with the strict rules being being considered. Male help on the same terms are sent by the company. Any other information will be supplied by Mr. F. W. Miller, Water street, who is local agent.

Mr. Collings left the city this morning to visit Smith's Falls, Ottawa and Montreal. He sails on the Royal George next week.

Special meeting of the Women's Auxiliry of the Peterboro Health Association will be held in the Council Chambers Monday Afternoon, Sept. 30th at three o'clock. All those who assisted in any way at the Peterboro Summer Fair, are cordially invited to attend.

MEETING IN KNOX CHURCH

The committee representing the different churches of Peterborough, who have been appointed to make preparations for the coming visit of Toronto's hundred men, will meet in Knox church at 8 o'clock to-night.

"THE NEW BARMAID"

What a Barmaid Really is

To American ears the word "barmaid" has an unfamiliar sound, because it is not the custom for girls to serve here in bars and taprooms. But in England it is but seldom one sees any man other than the proprietor attending to the thirsty souls demanding refreshment.

For this reason, perhaps, a few words on the subject would not be out of place, considering that the Grand theatre management are offering us a new, up-to-date, musical comedy direct from London as next week's attraction, viz., "The New Barmaid," from the Avenue Theatre, London, W. For the Friday and Saturday evening and matinee performance on Saturday, Manager Turner has assisted the eminent English comedian. Alexander Loftus, and an all-English company of over forty people.

Barmaids in England are members of society, just as waitresses, nurses, and other ministrants to mere man's needs, and English people assert that the presence of a young lady behind the bar tends to "purify the atmosphere." That is as it may be, it only concerns Messrs. Loftus and Lubbock to present as they promise a true picture of English Club life, for even in some of the swellest Clubs we find fair Hebes behind the bars.

Alexander Loftus is supported by an exceptionally strong "All-English" cast every member of which he has brought over from London with him and "The New Barmaid" is described as a clean, wholesome, genuinely humorous musical comedy of the best type, full of fun and life and gaiety. Cast includes Misses Edna Mollon, Lillie Leslie, Phyllis Curroe, Claire Townsheand, Kate Lane, Beatrice Park, etc.; Messrs. Vincent Erne, R. N. Cory, Arthur Geary, Jas. Wilson, Stephen Stephens, Arthur Loman Richard Freeman, Reginald Thomas, Travers Thorpe, and Alexander Loftus himself in his original part of "Bertie White," supported by a chorus of twenty pretty English girls and an augmented orchestra under direction of Basil Horsfall.

The prices for this excellent attraction are 25, 35, 50, 75 cents and $1, on Friday and Saturday evenings, with 25, 35 and entire lower floor at 50 cents for the matinee to-morrow afternoon.

COLLAR BONE FRACTURED IN WRESTLING

Gerald Conroy, of 272 Hunter street east, had his collar bone fractured while engaged in a friendly wrestling match at his home last night with Pete Spratt, the Lindsay hockey player, now living in Peterborough. He was conveyed to St. Joseph's hospital where Dr. McNulty attended to his injury.

Needless to say, Mr. Spratt regrets the accident very much.

HARVEST FESTIVAL

Rev. Canon Davidson Preached at Young's Point.

The harvest festival service of St. Aidan's Anglican Church, Young's Point, was held last night. The church was beautifully decorated with sheaves of wheat and vegetables and presented a pleasing sight. Canon Davidson of St. John's Church, preached an appropriate sermon to a large congregation which gathered to give thanks to God for the safe harvest. People from the surrounding country as well as the village came in such numbers that the church was crowded to the doors.

TWO FIREMEN TO WRITE RULES

Are Qualifying for Positions as Engineers on the G.T.R.

The traffic along the Midland branch of the G.T.R. is steadily increasing, as the towns along it's route become more prosperous and grow larger, as is evidenced by the numerous double headers which are seen passing through the city daily. With the additional trains, which have to be put on, new train crews are of course needed. Every day new men are being promoted to supply the demand. Only this morning Fireman Fishburn, of the Lakefield train, and Fireman Shank, of the shunter, left for Lindsay to "write the rules" in order to qualify as engineers, which are occurrences not infrequent.

PETITION ASKS FOR PARDON OF THOS. McNULTY

His Wife and Two Children Are The Chief Sufferers.

A petition is now in circulation in Orillia and surrounding district praying for the release of Thos. McNulty, who two years ago was sentenced to life imprisonment in connection with the killing of an infant by Mary Dolan, says the Orillia Packet. It was the opinion of many that the sentence of life imprisonment was altogether too severe and it is now felt that McNulty has served a term that will teach him the enormity of his crime. The petition, however, is circulated chiefly for the benefit of Mrs. McNulty, and her two innocent children, who are the real sufferers in the case, having to depend entirely upon the efforts of Mrs. McNulty for their living and for education and future of the children. Mrs. McNulty has put up a brave fight against big odds, and has, so far, succeeded in keeping herself and children fairly comfortable, but we are informed her health is failing under the strain and the release of her husband would be a blessing for both herself and the children. The petition, which it is expected will be largely signed, will be forwarded to the Minister of Justice at Ottawa asking for the prisoner's pardon and immediate release.

A NIGHT IN THE CELLS

Brought Bitter Reflections to Man Who Erred.

A night spent in the cells, with naught for company save his gloomy and remorseful reflections often serves to make a man, charged with an offence thoroughly ashamed and repentent. It must have been so this morning when a highly respectable young man from a prominent Otonabee family was brought before Magistrate Dumble to answer a charge of disorderly conduct. It was his first appearance in court, even Chief Thompson remarking that the young man was personally known to him as a hard worker and of industrious, sober habits. He was also a married man.

That the youth keenly felt his disgrace was shown when he broke down, under the Magistrate's stern but kindly appeal to him to use his reason and refrain in future from conduct such as caused his appearance in a police court.

The Magistrate's references to the respectability of his family and their honored name seemed to awaken a tender spot in the mind of the young fellow.

"You can go" said His Worship.

The young fellow was arrested last night for using vile language.

LUNG FEVER KILLS THE EEL

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 27 — The famous pacer "The Eel" died here last night after several days sickness, from an attack of lung fever. "The Eel" was owned by F. W. Entriken of Tavistock, Ont., and had a record of 2.00 1-4. Driver McEwen brought the horse here from Detroit where he raced in the Grand Circuit program. In his last race at Detroit, "The Earl" beat him in two straight heats.

OTTAWA COLLEGE HAS 16 YEAR OLD WONDER FOR THE BACK LINE

Rev. Father Stanton, coach of the Ottawa College football squad, will spring a sensation this season in "Shorty" Higgins, a sixteen-year-old youth now working out on the back line. In addition to being the youngest player that ever broke out in senior football in Canada, Higgins is the smallest, weighing but 116 pounds. Father Stanton is relying on his speed, hands and head to offset any deficiency in beef and will start the youngster out in the game against Hamilton Tigers Saturday.

Higgins comes from New Haven, Conn., the home of Yale University,

NEW YORK GIANTS, WINNERS OF NATIONAL LEAGUE PENNANT, WHO ARE CONFIDENT OF WINNING CHAMPIONSHIP HONORS IN WORLD'S SERIES AGAINST BOSTON RED SOX

THE GIANTS.

WORLD'S SERIES NOTHING NEW TO THE GIANTS AND THE SEASONING WILL HELP THEM AGAINST BOSTON

(By Christy Mathewson.)

The National League race is practically over now, and the nervous New York and American public is casting its eyes expectantly toward the next big baseball event, which is the world's series. With the Giants' final spurt, which gave them their present commanding lead in the race, the burning interest has evaporated, and all discussion centres on the world's series. Therefore I [illegible] as well get in with the [illegible].

GIANTS HAVE IMPROVED.

It strikes me that the Giants have a very much better chance in the world's series this year than they had last year—not that Boston is a poorer team than the Athletics were, because I fully realise the Red Sox' strength, but for other reasons, mostly to be found in the improvement of the New York club.

In the first place the Giants last year were a lot of young fellows and for all, except for Ames and myself, it was the first world's series. The very idea of this carried a certain importance with it that astonished some of the players. It all looked so big. Thousands of dollars might hang on whether a certain man delivered a hit in the pinch. It was a young team facing a hard test.

CLUB IS SEASONED.

Now the club has been seasoned by another summer's campaigning, and the big series is nothing new. The players have all been through it and know what to expect. I have been told that the first time a soldier goes under fire he is of little use, but on the second occasion he minds it no more than plunging into a cold bath on a hot day. It is the same, in a lesser degree in a world's series.

Then I think that the club has improved in mechanical perfection too; that it is a better ball team than it was when it entered the big battles last fall. The New York club was worn out from endless worry induced by a driving finish in the National League when it entered the important series for the world's title last year.

NORWOOD HAS HOCKEY CLUB

The Team Would Enter Junior League—Officers Elected.

The younger players of Norwood are already making plans for the coming winter, and held a meeting this week to appoint officers and discuss the prospects. Although a large number of players have left the town during the last few years, yet there is plenty of promising young material and with the aid of the old members still at home to coach them, the boys purpose developing it and keeping up the village's reputation as a hockey town. They will plan for a game a week if possible, and are making preparations for equipping themselves with suits, etc. The name decided upon is "The Pets." The secretary will communicate with other nearby places, with the view of forming a junior league.

The officers are:

President—Rev. P. J. Kelly.
Vice-Pres.—C. W. Waters.
Sec.-Treas.—L. C. Pattrick.
Manager—George P. Sylvain.
Captain—Keith Waters.
Committee—A. Searight, L. C. Pattrick and George P. Sylvain.

FOOTBALL

The members of the Nomads football team are asked to meet at Orme's Studio to-morrow afternoon at 1.30 o'clock, when a group photo will be taken.

The married men and those not so blessed, will come together for a football match at the Exhibition Grounds to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, the teams to be:—Married Men—Calladine, Rew, Evans, Gribble, Braun, Padgett, Sharman, Monk, French, J. Williams and Moraity.

Single Men—Hawthorne, Gamble, Robertson, Laird, Pearson, Curtis, Hotston, Edwards, Davie and Bills.

CANADIAN LEAGUE MEETING OCT. 4TH

The meeting of the Canadian Baseball League has been changed to Friday, October 4, to accommodate the Ottawa delegates. Frank Shaughnessy, who is coaching the McGill football team plays Varsity on Saturday, October 5, and will take his team to Toronto Friday morning and run over to Tigertown for the meeting.

The make-up of the league circuit for 1913 will be discussed, though it is hardly likely there will be any change, since the Berlin people have made such a stand to hang on their franchise. If Toronto is to have a farm team, and the circuit remain at eight clubs, Guelph seems the most likely town to be sidetracked.

VIRTUE WAS BLIND AND STRAYED AWAY

Story of the Play to be Presented at the Grand Opera House October 10.

Mr. Kenneth McGuffey, press agent for "The Blindness of Virtue" company was in the city yesterday in the interests of the play which will be given at the Grand Opera House here on the evening of October 10th.

"The Blindness of Virtue" is regarded as one of the best productions of the day. It is a story with a moral, a play with a message. Its author is Mr. Cosmo Hamilton, one of the editorial writers on the staff of the London Times and editor-in-chief of "The World's Work."

Mr. Hamilton, with the company arrived in Montreal on the Megantic Saturday night and the author lectured on the play in that city yesterday before the Local Council of Women, a circumstance which denotes the interest that is taken in the story.

There are eight characters in the cast and the play ran for one year in the Little Theatre in London. Its first appearance on this side of the Atlantic will be in Montreal Monday night. Peterborough's theater-goers are promised a rare treat when it is given here.

The plot is interesting and the moral lesson is healthy. The story, which recalls Dickens' pathetic recital of the downfall of "Little Emily" in David Copperfield, is that, once upon a time there lived a girl whose name was Mary Ann. She was the daughter of the owner of a large barge which plied between London and the villages along the Thames. Mary Ann was a beautiful girl and was admired by the people of the several villages where her father's barge would stop for freight. The barge was tied up every Saturday night, and the three, mother, father and daughter, would go to church twice every Sunday, for they were good people and Mary Ann was taught to tread a righteous path.

Now Mary Ann had her dreams. They were full of the dashing heroes and beautiful maidens of her novels, and when the day came that one of these dashing heroes seemed to step from the pages of her choicest book and held up the lure of London town with its lights and music and the promise of bright, fresh hopes, Mary Ann cast all behind her and went away.

In one of the villages where Mary Ann's father's barge lingered there lived a curate who also had a beautiful daughter, loved as was her father, by the whole community. This daughter, Effie, had been carefully educated, safe from contact with the outside world, and in the course of events gave her heart to Archie, another youth from London Town.

Now the curate was so loved by his parishioners and was such a broad-minded big-hearted man that when Mary Ann, her house of cards tumbled down, the tinsel gone, her romance dead, crept back to the village, the broken-hearted mother led her to the curate for advice.

In the quiet of the curate's study she sobbed out her story, crying that she had not realized the harm—that she didn't know—that she had never been told.

A great light dawned upon the curate. It was not Mary Ann's fault that she had been led away. It was not Mary Ann's fault that life had dealt her so severe a blow and that the future looked very, very black for the girl who answered the lure of London Town and returned to the village on the Thames.

And as the curate thought and pondered, his own daughter danced by in the sunlight outside of the study window, happy in her youth, exalted in her love, and the curate started from his reverie, a prey to his own doubts.

Straight-way in haste, he sent for his wife and demanded that forthwith she instruct Effie as to those impulses which enter seriously into the lives of all girls, but the mother's mother had never instructed her and no doubt the mother's mother's mother would have stood aghast at such a proceeding and the curate's wife rebelled.

Then there arose an incident which set all the curate's doubts into the fury of action; denunciation arose to his lips and there was bitterness in his heart. The big-mindedness which sent Mary Ann away with her prayer of salvation was singularly missing, until it was shown to the curate that his doubts were without real foundation.

Then there came from the curate's heart a great prayer for the mothers who avert life's real issues; for the fathers who delude themselves and for the unutterable piteousness of the blindness of virtue.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

WILLIAM BELL DEAD.

Founder of Piano Company Killed by Train at Guelph.

Guelph, Sept. 27.—Grand Trunk section men yesterday morning found the body of William Bell, badly mutilated, on the tracks about two miles east of the city. Identification was made by papers found in his pocket.

Mr. Bell was the founder of the Bell Piano & Organ Co. of Guelph, and was eighty years of age. He had left home yesterday afternoon about 2.30. His family were under the impression when he did not return that he had gone on to Toronto. Just how he met his death will probably never be known. Coroner Owen decided an inquest unnecessary.

Mr. Bell was prominently identified with the activities of Guelph and several other places. He established the Bell Piano Works in 1865. He had been president of the Guelph Junction Railway, and was vice-president of the Manufacturers' Life Insurance Co. when Sir John A. Macdonald was its president. He had also been president of the Traders Bank of Canada. He leaves a widow, one son, W. J. Bell, Guelph, and a daughter, Mrs. (Dr.) W. B. Kennedy, of Guelph.

Uncle Sam's Job.

Senator Swanson of Virginia says that undeserving men often receive government jobs.

Their attitude is like that of old Uncle Sam, who has been seen for several days patiently sitting on the bank of the Rappahannock river, near the dam, holding his shotgun in his hand.

Finally he attracted the attention of a passerby, who asked:

"Well, Uncle Sam, are you looking for something to do?"

"No, sah," answered Sam. "I's gittin' paid fo' what I's doin'."

"Indeed!" said the other. "And what may that be?"

"Shootin' de muskrats dat am underminin' de dam," answered Sam.

"Why, there goes one now!" exclaimed the stranger excitedly. "Why don't you shoot?"

"S'pose I wants t' lose ma job, sah?" answered Sam complacently.—Philadelphia Evening Post.

ORANGE CORNERS

Special Correspondence

Orange Corners, Sept. 27—The annual Harvest Thanksgiving service will be held in St. John's Church on Sunday next at half past ten in the morning. The Rev. J. Foster of Trinity College, Toronto, will take charge of the service. The Ladies' Guild, will decorate the church for the occasion.

The many friends of Mr. Arthur Jackson, will be pleased to know he is able to be around again, after being confined to the house for the past week or more, suffering from an attack of blood poisoning.

A large number from our corner attended the Lindsay Fair last Saturday, there being in the neighborhood of sixty taking the train at Bests' station. The majority think it was the best fair of the season.

We are pleased to see that Mr. Frank Jackson returned from the west last Saturday. He has spent the last six months in Regina, Carberry and other places. He was in Regina at the time of the cyclone and tells many interesting details, concerning the destruction of buildings and the loss of lives.

MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER GIVEN

The Youngstown Vindicator says—Miss Emma Obenauf, Delason avenue, was favored with a miscellaneous shower at a surprise assembly in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Obenauf in Evergreen avenue, Monday evening, associates in St. Luke's Lutheran choir, arranging the enjoyable affair. Gifts pretty and useful were included in the collection. Musical numbers and games were included in the entertainment offered and a prettily appointed luncheon was served. The guests included; Mrs. A. E. Albrigth, Mrs. Lydia James, the Misses Effie Roller, Ada Garwood, Emma Buchler, Olive Beard, Ada Osborn, Minnie Kelner, Martha and Ada Miller, Elmira Leedy, Mrs. Obenauf and Miss Obenauf.

The wedding of Miss Obenauf and Thomas Dawson of Peterboro, Canada, will be an event of the immediate future. After their marriage the couple will live in Peterborough where Mr. Dawson's business interests centre. Miss Obenauf is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Obenauf, Delason avenue grocer.

A Wonderful Discovery

An eminent scientist, the other day, gave his opinion that the most wonderful discovery of recent years was the discovery of Zam-Buk. Just think! As soon as a single thin layer of Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or a sore, such injury is insured against blood poison! Not one species of microbe has been found that Zam-Buk does not kill!

Then again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a sore, or a cut, or to skin disease, it stops the smarting. That is why children are such friends of Zam-Buk. They care nothing for the science of the thing. All they know is that Zam-Buk stops their pain. Mothers should never forget this.

Again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a wound, or to a diseased part, the cells beneath the skin's surface are so stimulated that new healthy tissue is quickly formed. This forming a fresh healthy tissue from below is Zam-Buk's secret of healing. The tissue thus formed is worked up to the surface and literally casts off the diseased tissue above it. This is why Zam-Buk cures are permanent.

Only the other day, Mr. Marsh of 101 Delorimier Ave., Montreal, called upon the Zam-Buk Co., and told them that for over twenty-five years he had been a martyr to eczema. His hands were at one time so covered with sores that he had to sleep in gloves. Four years ago Zam-Buk was introduced to him, and in a few months it cured him. To-day—over three years after his cure of a disease he had for twenty-five years—he is still cured, and has had no trace of any return of the eczema!

All druggists sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box, or we will send free trial box if you send this advertisement and a 1c stamp (to pay return postage) Address Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

HYDRO-ELECTRIC ESCAPES TAXES

Chairman Drayton Hands Down Opinion in Toronto.

Toronto, Sept. 27.—The Toronto Hydro-Electric Commission is not to pay a business tax.

Chairman Drayton and W. F. Ardagh agreed yesterday that the Hydro property should be exempt, Mr. W. A. Smith dissenting.

Chairman Drayton's judgment read as follows:

"Such commissioners are simply the servants of the municipality. It follows that any land occupied by them is so occupied by the city as the city's agent, and as such should be exempt."

Chairman Drayton added a rider, giving it as his opinion that as a matter of bookkeeping an account should be kept of the amount that would be paid in taxes if the business assessment were to stand. This said the chairman was necessary to show whether a civic enterprise was giving a profit or proving a losing venture.

DAMAGES OF $2,700 GIVEN

He Asked $5,000

TO BELMONT FARMER BY C.P.R.

Damages of about $2,700.00 have been awarded to Mr. Alex Leeson, a Belmont farmer, by the C.P.R. in settlement of his $5,000 claim for injuries sustained to his arm and shoulder about one year ago.

Mr. Leeson was walking from the C.P.R. station at Blairton into the village at night, when he fell into a deep excavation made by the C.P.R., beside the track leading to the village. There being no light or guard at the place to indicate its proximity, Mr. Leeson was unable to distinguish it. He claimed his injuries consisted of a dislocated shoulder and internal injuries, asking $5,000 damages from the company.

The case was to have been heard by Justice Clute at the recent Fall Assises, but the above satisfactory settlement resulted in it not being taken into the courts.

Mr. S. T. Medd of the firm of Hall, Medd and Davidson, was plaintiff's counsel.

EDITOR DINGMAN FOR THE SENATE

Toronto Star Recommends Appointment of Stratford Newspaperman.

The Toronto Star knows when the Queen City has enough. It calls attention to the fact that Toronto now has six senators, and says that is sufficient. It argues that at least some of the eight senatorial seats now vacant should be given to men west of the provincial capital, and then adds:

The suggestion has been made that Editor W. S. Dingman, of the Stratford Herald should be made the recipient of one of these appointments. The press of the province, irrespective of politics, have endorsed the suggestion. His services to his party will doubtless be considered by the Government, but more important than that, from a public viewpoint, is his undoubted fitness for the duties of office. He would fill the position with dignity, ability, public spirit, and a familiarity with Parliamentary procedure acquired in his younger days as a civil servant at Ottawa.

While the ultimate choice of route for the Pacific Great Eastern, from North Vancouver to the Grand Trunk Pacific main line in the heart of British Columbia has not yet been officially announced it is now generally understood that it will run in a general way along the shore of Howe Sound and the Squamish Valley, through the rich Pemberton Meadows, on the way to Lillooet and the further route up the Fraser River, and will in this district open up an agricultural country than which there is probably nothing finer in the province.

BUYS AN INTEREST IN THE REVIEW

Next week Mr. Fred O. Mills, of Hamilton, will join the Review, having purchased an interest in the business and will take up the business management of the paper and advertising, devoting his time to that department.

Mr. Mills is one of the best and most progressive among the newspaper men of Hamilton, and has for the last three years been advertising manager of the Hamilton Herald, and very successful and able in that line. In addition he has had good experience in newspaper work as reporter and city editor and is well skilled in the making of a newspaper. MORE SPACE AT CUSTOMS HOUSE

An Addition to be Made at Cost of $10,000 or More.

An addition is to be made to the Customs House, at the western end of the present building, which will provide additional floor space of 1200 feet. The northern wall will be made use of.

This will relieve the present lack of room and general convenience for the public. The improvements will cost about $10,000, and possibly a little more.

The rapid expansion of revenue by more than twelve millions of dollars in Canada over the corresponding period of last year, necessitates an increase of the staff in the chief centres.

To discuss road

The City Council will meet the councils of the townships adjoining Peterborough to-morrow afternoon at two o'clock to talk over the matter of repairing the boundary roads. The meeting, so far as known will be held in the City Hall committee room.

WILL ATTACK PARTY THAT IS IN POWER

Miss Wylie Tells What the Suffragettes Propose to do in Canada--Will Use Desperate Means if Peaceful Methods Fail--Prefers Borden to Asquith as Statesman.

Montreal, Sept. 28.—Miss Barbara Wylie, the English Suffragette, who arrived from England yesterday, has arrived in this city. In an interview she said:

"We have been promised by the many Canadian women that they are ready to join us in our fight for woman suffrage.

"There are many English women residents in Canada also willing to help us. We are of the opinion that the people of Canada are too sensible to make it necessary for us to adopt the militant methods, which are practically forced upon us by the treachery and extreme stupidity of the Asquith Government. We are resolved to gain our point, and we will continue the fight until it is won, in Canada as in the United Kingdom, even though we have to make ourselves a nuisance and have to resort to force."

Miss Wylie, the missionary sent out by the parent organization in Great Britain to organize the militant suffragettes in Canada, delivered this ultimatum when she arrived at Quebec. The evangelist does not look like an aggressive suffragette, being intellectual and frail in appearance. She confesses, however, that she has been in jail twice for her aggressive behavior.

The suffragette says she will remain in Montreal for a few days and make arrangements for the beginning of her educational work in Canada. After that she will go on to Toronto. Miss Wylie will also interview the Prime Minister in Ottawa.

"In his previous talk with us," she said, "Mr. Borden went as far as a politician could go. Anyway, he is better than Mr. Asquith. He did meet us and did not decline to meet us again."

Miss Wylie further said that it was the intention of the suffragettes to employ every constitutional method here at the outset, but if these met with no success, then more desperate measures would be employed.

They would carry out the advice of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, who advised them that if they wanted to gain their end they must make a nuisance of themselves.

The suffragette said that politics must inevitably be improved by the influence of women in them.

"It is our policy always to attack the party in power," said Miss Wylie, "but if we get no satisfaction from Mr. Borden, then we shall make overtures to the Opposition."

The question of votes for women in Canada can be considered when the Redistribution Bill comes up at Ottawa.

ORANGE FLAG UNFURLED AT THE BELFAST MEETING

Sir Edward Carson Is the Central Figure In a Demonstration In Ulster Hall, Where Many Leading Unionists Rouse Ulstermen to a Frenzy of Enthusiasm — Assembly Is Orderly.

Belfast, Sept. 28.—The singing of the National Anthem by an audience of three thousand persons comprising everybody representative of Belfast's great industrial mercantile, civil and religious community last night brought to a close a great anti-home rule meeting in Ulster Hall amid a fervor which was not equalled even by the anti-home rule convention of 1892. The meeting renewed the adoption of the resolution passed at that convention protesting against home rule Parliament for Ireland.

The supreme dramatic moment of the memorable gathering last night was the unfurling and presentation to Sir Edward Carson, the chief propagandist against home rule, of the flag carried by King William at the battle of the Boyne. The flag was greeted with frenzied cheering.

No new pronouncement of Unionist policy was made at the meeting. The Ulster watchword is "We will not have home rule," but none of the various speakers nor the letters of the influential Unionist leaders which were read in their absence attempted to reveal the plan of resistance, if such a plan exists, should King George sign the home rule measure. In comparison with the demonstrations held elsewhere during the past week the absence of talk of armed resistance was noticeable. Also there was less of a display of the military spirit in Belfast yesterday.

The Weekly Outlook last night made the startling announcement that one-third of the officers in the British army are Irishmen, that over 50 per cent. of them are Unionist Protestants, and that they are now considering how to resign their commissions in order to lead Ulster in arms against home rule.

A vast crowd had congregated about Ulster Hall hours before the time of the commencement of the meeting. Proprietors of neighboring warehouses took precautions against possible trouble by barricading their windows.

In the absence of the Duke of Abercorn, who was unable to attend, Lord Londonderry presided. Among those on the platform were Sir Edward Carson, the Marquis of Salisbury, Baron Willoughby de Broke, Lord Charles Beresford, the Earls of Kilmorey, Clanwilliam, Erne and Leitrim, and Frederick E. Smith and many other Unionist members of Parliament.

Lord Londonderry, in opening the proceedings, said the determination of Unionists of Ulster to oppose home rule never had been more significantly shown than in the campaign which was just closing. Those that signed the covenant law, he declared, would abide by it at all hazards.

"Premier Asquith and John Redmond (loud hooting) will learn from it," continued Lord Londonderry, "that Ulster is not bluffing. The covenant will be something that they cannot ignore."

The Lord Mayor of Belfast, after the reading of the letters, moved a resolution denouncing home rule.

There was a dramatic scene when Sir Edward Carson rose to speak. The entire audience stood and cheered him.

Then the stalwart Col. Wallace, representing the Orangemen, advanced slowly to the platform and unfurled, waved solemnly and presented to Sir Edward Carson the flag which was carried to the front by King William at the battle of the Boyne. In making the presentation, Col. Wallace delivered a stirring little speech, concluding with, "This flag will be borne before Carson at the signing of the covenant to-morrow."

The audience here broke into a storm of delirious cheering and hat waving, which lasted several minutes. Sir Edward Carson, holding the flag aloft, replied to Col. Wallace:

"I accept this flag as a token of victory for civil and religious liberty. I hand it back to you and ask you to keep it as a sacred trust until we have killed the conspiracy that confronts us."

Capt. James Craig, member of Parliament of the County Down, then presented Sir Edward with a silver casket containing the scroll of the covenant and a silver pen, with which Sir Edward will sign it to-day. Having expressed his thanks for this gift, Sir Edward proceeded with his speech, which was a statement of Ulster's defiance.

Sir Edward then left the hall to address the overflow meeting outside.

Bodyguard For Carson.

Belfast, Sept. 28.—The authorities say that they do not anticipate any disorder in connection with the demonstration on Ulster Day, but they have taken the precaution of ordering the troops in the city to be confined to barracks in readiness should their services be required.

Sir Edward Carson during his progress to and from Ulster Hall to-day will be escorted by a bodyguard of 100 selected men from the Unionist clubs.

The entire city is gaily decorated, and from thousands of houses in the residential districts Union Jacks are flying. An appeal has been made to the Ulster men to make a unique display of the national flag, and this has given occasion for an unprecedented show of bunting.

Long In Toronto.

Toronto, Sept. 28.—Three thousand deep-throated voices veritably shook the walls of Massey Hall last night when they moved with one accord a resolution against the adoption of home rule in Ireland. The speaker was Hon. Walter Hume Long, the British Unionist Parliamentarian.

Thousands more lined the streets outside and re-echoed the cheers that emanated from within. Orange Young Britons' bands paraded the streets playing the "Protestant Boys" with might and main, followed by Orange lodges, members of which had arrived too late for admission to the assembly.

"Ulster bars the way because home rule demands the loss of liberty to herself and children," Mr. Long concluded. "Ulster is in deadly earnest and will never give way. Honor forbids, and reason makes it impossible."

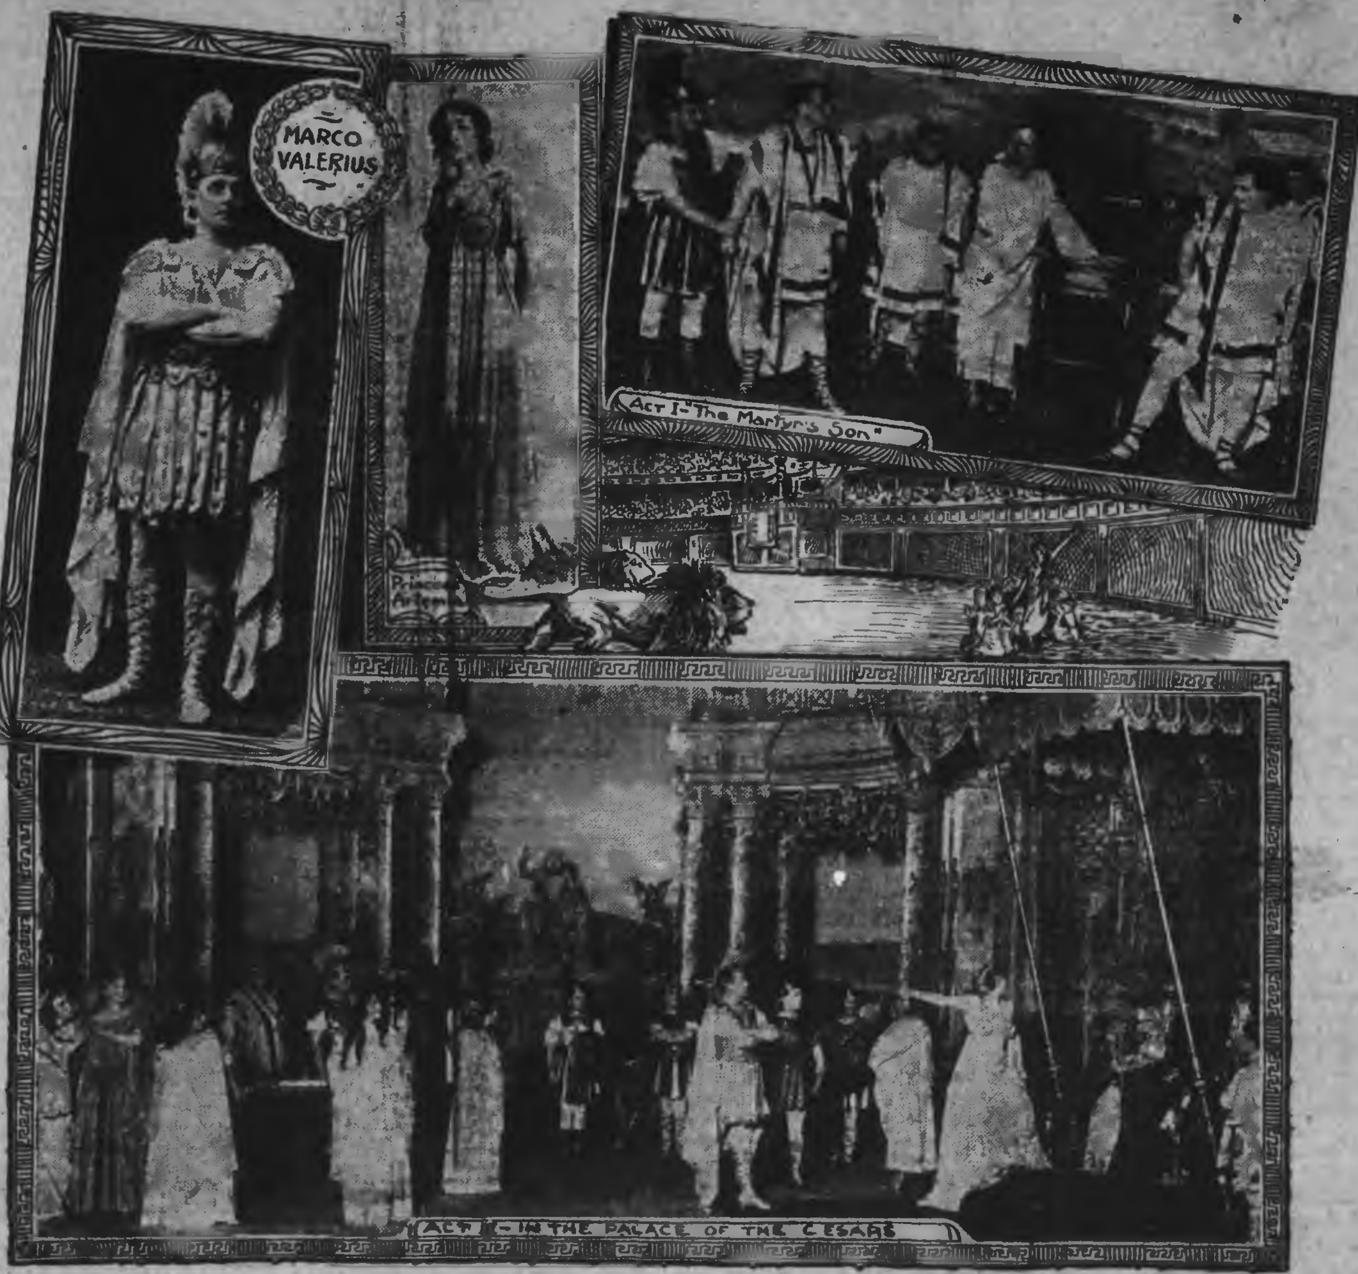
At the close of Mr. Long's speech, Col. Scott moved a resolution of protest, which was seconded by Hon. Tom Crawford, M.P.P.

Rebels Rob American Contractor.

Jaurez, Mexico, Sept. 28.—Rebels raided the camp of William Orr, a contractor employed by the Mexican Northwestern Railway, and forced the American to give over his payroll, amounting to about $14,000, equipment valued at $12,000 and about $10,000 in commissary supplies. Reports of the raid which occurred Wednesday, were received here yesterday. One report says the American contractor was injured by the rebels.

Orr's camp is situated at Cumbre, in the Casas Grandes district, south of Pearson. Federal troops guarding the camp were removed a few days before the rebel raid, Orr reports.

"THE LIGHT ETERNAL," A POWERFUL ROMANCE OF EARLY ROME, TO BE SEEN HERE IN A SHORT TIME



In "The Light Eternal," the stirring spectacular drama of early Rome, which comes to the Grand on Friday and Saturday, Oct. 4, 5 with matinee Saturday, Martin V. Merle, the author, has hit upon a happy blend of unhappy love and religious persecution, resultant in one of those rare dramas, or almost melodramas, that appeal alike to every class and condition of people. Avowed theatre goers revel in its intense drama while churchmen find much to commend in its religious fervor. When Wilson Barret wrote "The Sign of the Cross," he paved the way for other dramatists in whom lurked a desire to portray early Christian martyrdoms—and followers he has had in plenty; though it has remained for the author of "The Light Eternal" to outdo Barret at his best. This play combines intense human interest with the beautiful and subtile sentiment of the Christian religion; the best thoughts of a brilliant playwright with the clever conceptions of a master producer; the players have caught the spirit of the theme, and every person in the cast harks back to the strife of paganism and the glories of a new faith with a sincerity and conviction that engulfs the audience in the intricate meshes of the play. Added to the evident sincerity and unquestioned dramatic worth there is in "The Light Eternal," a glitter and splendor of production possible only in presentations of that period.

THREE YEAR OLD BOY MET DEATH BY STRANGULATION

Johnnie Page of Havelock, Was Playing With a Swing When the Part He Was Stepping on Slipt and His Neck Was Caught in the Ropes.

Special To The Review.

Havelock, Sept. 28.—Johnnie, the three year old son of Mr. Geo. Page, a C.P.R. brakeman, of this town, was strangled to death while playing with a rope swing in the woodshed of the home.

The little lad was endeavoring to get on to the swing, using an overturned pail, but the pail slipped from under him and his head was caught in the rope.

The movement of the little fellow caused the swing to turn around, and the two ropes becoming crossed, he was strangled.

He was found a few minutes later, but life was extinct.

THE RED MILL

MONDAY AND TUESDAY

The Red Mill is showing another special feature on Monday and Tuesday in 2,000 feet "A Celebrated Case," which will, no doubt, crowd the place at every performance. The management would ask as many ladies and children as possible to attend the matinee, as night performances will be crowded. 2d

Key Saved His Life.

London, Sept. 28.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Charles Handyside, Montreal, who is staying in London with his wife and daughter, narrowly escaped death in a Tottenham Court road melee yesterday morning when an Armenian named Titus shot five people, one of them fatally. Handyside said:

"I was standing near Tottenham Court road waiting for my wife and daughter from the dressmakers. Suddenly I saw a tall man with something in his hand rushed towards me. As I raised my shoulder slightly the man paused for a second, faced me and then firing the revolver, darted off again. Three hours afterwards when I got back to my hotel, I remembered I had the key in my pocket. I took out the key and then saw that there was a great hole in it. I felt the lining of my overcoat and there found a bullet right at the bottom of the coat. The bullet entered my overcoat just below the heart and if Providence had not caused me to have the key with me I should have been killed. I am going to keep the key and bullet as a souvenir."

WANT FREE TRADE.

Grain Growers Look For Close Link With Britain.

Winnipeg, Sept. 28—The Grain-grower's Guide has issued the following statement in reply to the offer of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association for a conference with the farmers on closer trade with Great Britain:

"Western grain-growers have repeatedly declared for an increased British preference, and eventually free trade with the Motherland. If the Canadian Manufacturers' Association is prepared to assist the grain-growers towards this end, there is no doubt but that the grain-growers will be glad of the assistance of the manufacturers, as they realize the manufacturers have great influence in tariff-making. Freer trade with the Motherland would reduce the cost of living to every Canadian, and bind closer the greatest overseas Dominion with Great Britain. Every loyal Canadian will be glad to know that the Manufacturers' Association is not opposed to lower taxes on British imports. If the association is prepared for a conference with the producers to assist in securing free trade with Great Britain in ten years it will be a welcome message to every western grain-grower."

Not Serious Enough.

Ottawa, Sept. 28.—A number of the manufacturers who were present on Thursday morning when the appeal of the Western Grain-Growers for co-operation in promoting practical Imperial unity by increase in the British preference was greeted with derisive laughter, and rather humorously disposed of, have since expressed the opinion that the association made a tactical mistake in not dealing with the question a little more seriously.

MORAL REFORMERS OBJECT TO PARADES OF INDIANS

Calgary's Exhibition of Red Men During the Stampede Will Be Subject of a Memorial to Borden Government—Three New Field Secretaries Are Apointed By the Methodist Branch of the League.

Toronto, Sept. 28.—Three new secretaries were appointed by the Methodist branch of temperance and moral reform. A great educational campaign is to be held throughout the Dominion and Newfoundland, which is included in the Methodist general conference. The campaign will not be immediately directed towards seeking changes in the laws, beyond seeking the appointment of the board of censors for theatres as announced yesterday.

Rev. Dr. Moore was authorized to confer with the Governments of the respective provinces to ask them to have an investigation by a commission to report on the advisability of making it compulsory for medical certificates of freedom from contagious disease necessary before marriage licenses are issued.

The new secretaries will be: Rev. J. H. Hazelwood, Toronto, for Ontario; Rev. J. Garbutt, Cobourg, for the western provinces; Rev. W. J. Smith, Hamilton, for the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland.

It was agreed to co-operate with the Presbyterian board in establishing rescue homes for girls.

A resolution commending N. W. Rowell's "banish the bar" policy was adopted.

A protest will be sent to Ottawa against Indians being granted leave to take part in parades in their war paint at fairs, and expressing regret that this took place during the visit of the Duke of Connaught at Calgary.

The Dominion Government will be asked to make the law respecting seduction by certain employers general, so that it would include restaurant keepers. This was on account of allegations respecting the employment of white waitresses in Chinese restaurants.

The moral reform magazine to be issued by the branch, is to be started in January.

A resolution commending the Women's National Council's efforts to protect feeble-minded girls was adopted.

Hon. Sam Hughes will be asked to stop the serving of liquors at the officers' and sergeants' messes in barracks and armories, as well as at annual camps.

The question of international peace was discussed, a resolution being adopted condemning "jingoism" in the form of talk of war between England and Germany, and declaring in favor of the principle of arbitration of all matters of dispute between nations.

Another C.P.R. Rumor.

Toronto, Sept. 28.—An interesting rumor was circulated in Toronto financial circles yesterday on C.P.R. The rumor stated that the Cabinet had decided to grant the application for the increased capital asked for by the railway, but that in order to placate public sentiment the new stock was to be offered at $200 a share to present shareholders. With a 10 per cent. dividend, it is argued, that investors would on this arrangement only get 5 per cent. on their money and that this was a reasonable return. The rumor also said that the authority to increase the capital would be announced from Ottawa prior to the meeting of the C.P.R. shareholders next week. C.P.R. stock was exceptionally strong yesterday, selling up to 281-1-8. This was accepted as the result of inside information of the Government's intention.

Found Girl's Body In Well.

Winnipeg, Sept. 28.—The death on Monday of Miss A. Aelias, at a Mennonite Village near Gretna, was reported yesterday to the Attorney-General's Department by Bishop Zacharias. The bishop went to conduct the funeral service, when he discovered that the girl's body had been taken from a well, and refused to proceed with the service as satisfactory explanations were not forthcoming. An inquest has been ordered.

Woodstock Manufacturers Must Pay.

Woodstock, Sept. 28.—The City Council at its session last evening dealt with the question of assessment for the manufacturers of this city. The report of the finance committee fixing the assessment rate of the manufacturers on a forty-two per cent. basis was adopted. The basis is higher than the manufacturers desired, but the settlement will mean about $5,000 increase in the yearly taxes.

REDMOND HOPEFUL

Trouble In Ulster Will Not Prevent Passing of Home Rule Bill

Special To The Review

New York, Sept. 28—William Redmond, brother of John Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalists, who arrived here from attending an Irish home rule meeting in Philadelphia, will address a meeting here to-morrow night, and return to Ireland Monday. He declared that it is absurd to think that the trouble in Ulster will have any effect on home rule. Talk of civil war in Ireland because of the Ulster disorders, he characterizes as mere bosh. Nothing but the defeat of the Liberal Government can prevent the bill's passage and he doesn't think such a contigency is possible.

TEN YEARS FOR CONSPIRACY

Heavy Sentences Imposed on Korean Prisoners.

Special to the Review.

Seoul Korea, Sept. 28.—Heavy sentences were imposed to-day on many of the 123 Korean prisoners who were charged with conspiring against the life of Governor General Count Terauchi. Baron Yun Chi Ho, formerly a cabinet minister, and several others of the more prominent accused, were sent to prison for ten years, while various terms of punishment were inflicted on all other prisoners except nine, who were released.

Governor General Count Terauchi leaves Tokio to-night for Korea to sume his duties.

ALL IS QUIET IN ULSTER TO-DAY

Special To The Review.

Belfast, Sept. 28.—Ulster to-day Orangemen's culminating day of protest against Home Rule opened with an absolute calmness which rendered Unionists and Home Rulers alike nervous as to what might happen. People of Ireland, even those responsible for to-day signature of formidabe "League and Covenant," had looked forward to the day's happenings with a great deal of misgiving.

Blame Defective Rail.

Chatham, Sept. 28.—All of the injured in the Grand Trunk wreck are reported as improving, and it is expected there will be no fatalities. Mrs. J. E. Richards of this city is more seriously injured than at first reported. As far as can be made out, the accident was caused by a defective rail, the spreading of which caused the train to leave the track. The sudden applying of the emergency brakes caused two of the cars to tumble into the ditch.

Negro Shoots Another.

Toronto, Sept. 28.—An attempt at murder was made last night at about 10 o'clock at the Negro Club on West Adelaide street, opposite the fire hall, when Virgil Cobb, in an altercation with another negro by the name of Brady, pulled a revolver and fired at him. The bullet entered Brady's right leg, just above the knee. He was taken to St. Michael's Hospital, where it was said he would recover. Cobb got away safely and is still at large.

SCALES NOT ACCURATE

Cheese Commissioner Pringle Makes Startling Statement.

Chairman of Special Board of Enquiry Says That of a Large Number of Cheese Factories Visited In Eastern Ontario Not One Had Correct Scales—Immediate Action Will Be Taken.

Ottawa, Sept. 28.—The report which the commission appointed by Hon. Martin Burrell, to investigate the shortage of cheese weights at the port of Montreal, will make to the Department of Agriculture, will contain some startling information relative to the industry in Eastern Ontario.

R. A. Pringle, K.C., chairman of the commission, states that Commissioner Macdonnell and J. D. Lemieux had visited many of the factories in Eastern Ontario and Western Quebec, and found the scales at all of these factories, without a single exception, out of order, and not returning accurate weights. This, it is believed, will, to a great extent, explain the discrepancies found in the weights at Montreal, and the cuts in weights so frequently complained of by cheese makers and salesmen.

Although Messrs. Macdonnell and Lemieux visited a great many factories, the number is only a small proportion of the total number in Ontario, or even Quebec. It is believed that the inaccurate scales must be very numerous, and that the situation calls for immediate action.

"PILLS LIKE A FYLE"

So Harsh and Drastic are Many Pills as to Seriously Injure Health.

In a letter written from his home in Valencia, Mr. Marsh Selwyn does service to thousands by drawing attention to the injuries inflicted upon delicate people by drastic purgative pills.

"For a long time I suffered from constipation. This condition compelled the use of pills. Like many another, I made the unwise choice of using pills that were like lightning in their activity. I began to be filled with intestinal disturbances, constant rumblings, gas in the bowels and diarrhoea. I grew pale and emaciated. Then the doctor told me drastic irritating pills had caused catarrh of the bowels, an almost incurable disease. Explaining my situation to a friend, he advised a trial of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I speedily experienced the healing and curative effect they exert on the stomach, liver and bowels. The intestines, freed from irritating drugs, rapidly regained natural tone, the bowels acted as if nature and not Dr. Hamilton's Pills were at work. I know it will be of value to thousands to know that a pill as mild and curative as Dr. Hamilton's is available to the ailing."

For bowel disorders, sick headache, constipation, liver and stomach derangement, there is no pill so invariably sure to cure as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Refuse a substitute. Sold in 25c boxes, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

HYDRO-ELECTRIC IN BRANTFORD.

The Brantford Expositor in its anxiety to score a point against the Hydro-Electric essays to take a fall out of the Toronto World which paper is recognised as the leading supporter of the Commission. The World in its local columns the other day recorded the fact that the Toronto City Council had passed a resolution calling upon the Commissioners to submit information showing just what the system costs the city.

The Expositor declares that this very natural and business like request is an indication that the people of Toronto are dissatisfied with the Commission and are desirous of a change.

"It is evidently easier," says the Expositor, "to get into the Hydro-Electric mesh than it is to get out of it, and the experience of Toronto is only that of practically every other municipality which has gone into the concern. To make things worse, the municipalities which pay the shot are given no representation on the Commission, and consequently know nothing about what is going on inside the closely-tiled door."

Random assertion is not argument and there is nothing in the situation in Toronto to justify the conclusion arrived at by the Expositor, or in any way to justify the inference that the people are dissatisfied. If they are, then dissatisfaction has never been voiced either on the platform or in the press.

The Expositor seems determined to oppose the Hydro-Electric at all hazards, and is making frenzied appeals to the ratepayers to vote against the by-law to raise $115,000 to equip the Telephone City with a municipal plant when that question is voted on October 25th.

C. B. Heyd, a prominent resident of Brantford, is an active opponent of the Hydro-Electric. In a letter to the Courier he accuses the aldermen of an attempt to secure a snap verdict by holding a special election instead of leaving the matter over until the city officers are chosen next January. Mr. Heyd says that the election next month will cost thousands of dollars, but the Courier calls this bluff by reminding its correspondent who is surely possessed of better knowledge of such matters than his letter would indicate, that the actual cost of the special election will not exceed $500. Furthermore the mayor and most of the aldermen were elected last January because they pledged themselves to submit the question to the people before the close of the year.

The above is a specimen of the arguments that are used against the Hydro-Electric in Brantford. The Courier continues to give the proposed by-law vigorous support. It has all the facts in the case properly marshalled and so far has everything to the good in the argument.

NEW MARKET FOR SHOES

It seems that since the Chinese overthrew their ancient monarchy and established a Republic, they are becoming versed in the way of modern civilization along other lines than that of borrowing money at a high rate of interests to equip an army and otherwise add to their standing as a world power. A local shoe dealer tells us that they have discarded the straw and wooden footwear with which the Celestial has been associated for ages, and have taken to the leather boot of civilisation. This is one reason, the scarcity of hides being another, why the Occidental with a hard winter staring him in the face finds the price of shoes climbing steadily upward. The new market in China is having its effect on the boot trade of the world. Leather goods may come high, but the Celestial, be he soldier or civilian, must have them in preference to the ancient variety which hobbled him in his every movement.

With straw shoes and wooden sandals and queues discarded, the Chinese are becoming democratic for fair.

IT'S DIFFERENT NOW

Years ago a Canadian statesman who has long since gone to his reward—a rich one if mortals are recompensed for the good they do on earth—told a deputation of manufacturers who waited upon him to ask for further protection along certain lines that they reminded him of a flock of porkers feasting on acorns at the foot of an oak tree. They gorged themselves with the fruits showered upon them from above without ever dreaming of looking up to see whence came the supply or to return thanks for the blessings which they enjoyed. If the illustration was apt, the hint conveyed was certainly practical and was probably not lost upon the deputation.

To-day everything is different. We must be nearing the industrial millenium. The Canadian manufacturers have with remarkably unanimity declared they are satisfied with their supply of acorns and have not been slow to acknowledge the source of their temporal blessings.

THE RAILWAY RATES

The Canadian manufacturers are satisfied with the tariff so far as it applies to their interest. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has fortunately headed off any comment that the Liberal press might be tempted to make to the effect that the manufacturers have every reason to be grateful for the measure of protection given them by saying at the Ottawa banquet the other night that his hosts had received nothing but their due.

The manufacturers have, according to themselves, only one cause to find fault with the industrial situation as it confronts them to-day, and that is the rates charged by the railways for carrying their products. They say it costs as much to reach the markets of the far West as it does to reach Australia, and very naturally under these conditions they ask for relief.

It is to be regretted that after a home market has been developed the good work should be destroyed to any extent by the action of the railways and a wall built up against the manufacturers of the East or any other section of the Dominion. Fortunately for everyone interested in this matter there is a remedy in sight and the Dominion Railway Board can be relied upon to afford the manufacturers the relief they ask.

With characteristic good taste Sir Wilfrid Laurier declined to discuss the tariff in detail at the banquet a purely social function, but he gave utterance to one significant remark. He said that if any changes are made in the fiscal policy they should be made at stated periods, and that no tinkering should be allowed. Without stability of tariff there can be no stability of business.

It is to be hoped that this statesmanlike assertion will not be ignored by the Globe and other Liberal papers that seem to find so much satisfaction in keeping the industrial condition of the country in a turmoil by a constant agitation for a reduction of the tariff on different articles of trade.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Once more the Liberal press exploited a fake dispatch on the navy question, this time Premier Roblin being the victim, and followed it up with flaming editorials. The Manitoba premier has repudiated the statements credited to him, and another structure tumbles about Liberal ears.

Since Hon. Walter Long made that speech before the National Club in Toronto a small army of the misguided who voted for Reciprocity last year have sought to hide themselves under the barn.

The Toronto Star has forgotten for a time its avowed policy of opposition to war scares and armaments and has suddenly developed a war-like spirit. It argues that the battles of the past have had a more important effect upon the welfare of the world than the good that has been accomplished by anything so trifling as a general election in which the people declared for a united empire.

DOCTORS COULD NOT HELP MY KIDNEYS

"Fruit-a-tives" Cured Me

MR. GEO. W. BARKLEY

CHESTERVILLE, ONT., JAN. 29th, 1911

"For over twenty years, I have been troubled with Kidney Disease and the doctors told me they could do me no good. They said my case was incurable and I would suffer all my life. I doctored with different medical men and tried many advertised remedies, but there was none that suited my case. Nearly a year ago, I tried "Fruit-a-tives". I have been using them nearly all the time since, and am glad to say that I am cured. I have no trouble now with my Kidneys and I give "Fruit-a-tives" the credit of doing what the doctors said was impossible. I am seventy-six years old and am in first class health."

by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular, free

Latest trading left provisions varying from 5c off to an advance of 2½c.

Liverpool closed: Wheat, ⅛d to ¼d lower; corn, ¼d to ⅜d lower; cash corn, 1½d to 2d lower; oats, ¼d lower.

Winnipeg Grain Market.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 27.—Trading was active in futures, altho during the later hours business fell flat. Prices were lower at the opening ⅛c to ⅛c, and declined a further ⅛c to ⅜c, October leading. The weakness in values was due to lower Liverpool cables, weak American markets and heavy hedging sales. A reaction developed and the closing figures were unchanged to ⅛c to ⅜c lower.

Cash demand was good for all grades, and prices erratic, with offerings on a more liberal scale. Export enquiry was moderately active, altho no new business was located, as bids were out of line. Oats opened unchanged for all months, but weakened later.

There were in sight for inspection this morning 600 cars.

Cash grain: Wheat—No. 1 northern, 89c; No. 2 do., 88c; No. 3 do., 85½c; No. 4, 80c; No. 5, 78½c; No. 6, 69½c; No. 1 rejected seeds, 88c; No. 2 do., 82c; No. 3 do., 79½c; No. 1 tough, 88c; No. 2 do., 82c; No. 3 do., 79½c; No. 1 red winter, 89c; No. 1 do., 86½c; No. 3 do., 81½c; No. 4 do., 79c.

Flax—No. 1, $1.58; condemned, $1.30.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Sept. 27.—Cables on Manitoba spring wheat were weaker at a decline of 3d to 6d. The demand was fair, and sales of about 150,000 bushels were made by exporters, who had some cheap ocean freights, but the prices, based on todays asking freight rates, were away out of line. There was also some business done in oats for export. For the first time in many years a cargo of 100,000 bushels of American No. 3 clipped white has been bought, duty paid, and sold for local consumption at much lower prices than Canadian grades can be bought, but the quality is much inferior. Flour fairly active and steady. Millfeed in good demand. Butter steady under improved demand. Cheese quiet and easier. Eggs firm. Demand for provisions fair.

Corn—American No. 2 yellow, 84c to 85c.

Oats—Canadian western, No. 2, 54c to 55c; extra No. 1 feed, 54c to 54½c.

Adventure

A Romance of The South Seas

BY JACK LONDON

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith
Copyright, 1911, by the Macmillan Company

At the same time he stole a glance seaward to where the Flibbetty Gibbet reflected herself in the glassy calm of the sea. Not a soul was visible under her awnings, and he saw the whaleboat was missing from alongside. The Tahitians had evidently gone shooting fish up the Balesuna. He was all alone in his high place above this trouble, while his world slumbered peacefully under the breathless tropic noon.

Nobody replied, and he repeated his demand, more of mastery in his voice this time and a hint of growing anger.

The throng moved uneasily, like a herd of cattle, at the sound of his voice. But not one spoke. Directly beneath him he caught sight of the muzzle of a rifle, barely projecting between two black bodies, that was slowly elevating toward him. It was held at the hip by a man in the second row.

"What name you?" Sheldon suddenly shouted, pointing directly at the man who held the gun.

Sheldon still held the whip hand, and he intended to keep it.

"Clear out, all you fella boys!" he ordered. "Clear out and walk along salt water. Savvee!"

"Me talk," spoke up a fat and filthy savage, whose hairy chest was caked with the unwashed dirt of years.

"Oh, is that you, Telepasse?" the white man queried genially. "You tell 'm boys clear out, and you stop and talk along me."

"Him good fella boy," was the reply. "Him stop along."

"Well, what do you want?" Sheldon asked, striving to hide under assumed carelessness the weakness of concession.

"That fella boy belong along me." The old chief pointed out Gogoomy, whom Sheldon recognised.

"White Mary belong you too much no good," Telepasse went on. "Bang 'm head belong Gogoomy. Gogoomy, all the same chief. Bime by me finish, Gogoomy big fella chief. White Mary bang 'm head. No good. You pay me plenty tobacco, plenty powder, plenty calico."

"You old scoundrel," was Sheldon's comment. An hour before he had been chuckling over Joan's recital of the episode, and here, an hour later, was Telepasse himself come to collect damages.

"Gogoomy," Sheldon ordered, "what name you walk about here? You get along quarters plenty quick."

"Me stop," was the defiant answer.

"White Mary belong you bang 'm head," old Telepasse began again. "My word, plenty big fella trouble you no pay."

"You talk along boys," Sheldon said, with increasing irritation. "You tell 'm get to h— along beach. Then I talk with you."

Sheldon felt a slight vibration of the veranda and knew that Joan had come out and was standing by his side. But he did not dare glance at her. There were too many rifles down below there, and rifles had a way of going off from the hip.

Again the veranda vibrated with her moving weight, and he knew that Joan had gone into the house. A minute later she was back beside him. He had never seen her smoke, and it struck him as peculiar that she should be smoking now. Then he guessed the reason. With a quick glance he noted the hand at her side and in it the familiar paper wrapped dynamite. He noted also the end of fuse, split properly, into which had been inserted the head of a wax match.

"Telepasse, you old reprobate, tell 'm boys clear out along beach. My word, I no gammon along you."

"Me no gammon," said the chief. "Me want 'm pay white Mary bang 'm head belong Gogoomy."

"I'll come down there and bang 'm head belong you," Sheldon replied, leaning toward the railing as if about to leap over.

An angry murmur arose, and the blacks surged restlessly. The muzzles of many guns were rising from the hips. Joan was pressing the lighted end of the cigarette to the fuse. A Snider went off with the roar of a bomb gun, and Sheldon heard a pane of window glass crash behind him. At the same moment Joan flung the dynamite, the fuse hissing and splattering, into the thick of the blacks. They scattered back in too great haste to do any more shooting. Satan, aroused by the one shot, was snarling and panting to be let out. Joan heard and ran to let him out, and thereat the tragedy was averted and the comedy began.

Rifles and spears were dropped or flung aside in a wild scramble for the protection of the cocoanut palms. Satan multiplied himself. Never had he been free to tear and rend such a quantity of black flesh before, and he bit and snapped and rushed the flying legs till the last pair were above his head.

"I fancy you need a lesson or two in inserting fuses," Sheldon remarked dryly.

Joan's eyes were scornful.

"There was no detonator on it," she said. "Besides, the detonator is yet unmanufactured that will explode that charge. It's only a bottle of chlorodyne."

CHAPTER XI.

MR. MORGAN AND MR. RAFF.

SHE put her fingers into her mouth, and Sheldon winced as he saw her blow, like a boy, a sharp, imperious whistle, the call she always used for her sailors and that always made him wince.

"They're gone up the Balesuna, shooting fish," he explained. "But there comes Oleson with his boat's crew. He's an old warhorse when he gets started. See him banging the boys. They don't pull fast enough for him."

"And now what's to be done?" she asked. "You've treed your game, but you can't keep it treed."

"No, but I can teach them a lesson." Sheldon walked over to the big bell.

"It is all right," he replied to her gesture of protest. "My boys are practically all bushmen, while these chaps are salt water men, and there's no love lost between them. You watch the fun."

He rang a general call, and by the time the 200 laborers trooped into the compound Satan was once more penned in the living room, complaining to high heaven at his abominable treatment. The plantation hands were dancing war dances around the base of every tree and filling the air with abuse and vituperation of their hereditary enemies. The skipper of the Flibberty Gibbet arrived in the thick of it, in the first throes of oncoming fever, staggering as he walked and shivering so severely that he could scarcely hold the rifle he carried. His face was ghastly blue, his teeth clicked and chattered, and the violent sunshine through which he walked could not warm him.

"I'll s-s-it down and k-k-keep a guard on 'em," he chattered. "D-d-dash it all, I always g-get f-fever when there's any excitement. W-w-wh-what are you going to do?"

"Gather up the guns first of all."

Under Sheldon's direction the house boys and gang bosses collected the scattered arms and piled them in a heap on the veranda. The modern rifles, stolen from Lunga, Sheldon set aside, the Sniders he smashed into fragments, the pile of spears, clubs and tomahawks he presented to Joan.

Down on the beach he built a bonfire out of the contents of the canoes, his blacks smashing, breaking and looting everything they laid hands on. The canoes themselves, splintered and broken, filled with sand and coral bowlders, were towed out to ten fathoms of water and sunk.

"Ten fathoms will be deep enough for them to work in," Sheldon said as they walked back to the compound.

Here a saturnalia had broken loose. The war songs and dances were more unrestrained, and from abuse the plantation blacks had turned to pelting their helpless foes with pieces of wood, handfuls of pebbles and chunks of coral rock. And the seventy-five lusty cannibals clung stoically to their tree perches, enduring the rain of missiles and snarling down promises of vengeance.

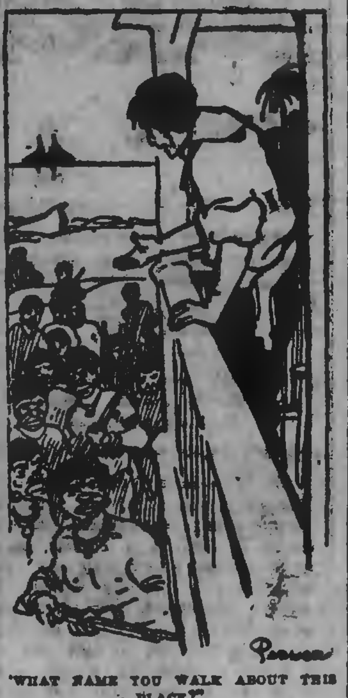
"There'll be wars for forty years on Malaita on account of this," Sheldon laughed. "But I fancy old Telepasse will never again attempt to rush a plantation.

"Eh, you old scoundrel," he added, turning to the old chief, who sat gibbering in impotent rage at the foot of the steps. "Now head belong you bang 'm too. Come on, Miss Lackland, bang 'm just once. It will be the crowning indignity."

"Ugh, he's too dirty. I'd rather give him a bath. Here you, Adamu Adam, give this devil a wash. Soap and water! Fill that washtub. Oneli, run and fetch 'm scrub brush."

The Tahitians, back from their fishing and grinning at the Bedlam of the compound, entered into the joke.

"Tambo! Tambo!" shrieked the cannibals from the trees, appalled at so awful a desecration, as they saw their chief tumbled into the tub and the sacred dirt rubbed and soused from his body.



"WHAT NAME YOU WALK ABOUT THIS PLACE?"

WOMAN'S MOST SUCCESSFUL MEDICINE

Known All Over The World—Known Only For The Good It Has Done.

We know of no other medicine which has been so successful in relieving the suffering of women, or received so many genuine testimonials, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Fox Creek, N. B.—"I have always had pains in the abdomen and a weakness there and often after meals a soreness in my stomach. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me much good. I am stronger, digestion is better and I can work with ambition. I have encouraged many mothers of families to take it as it is the best remedy in the world. You can publish this in the papers."—Mrs. WILLIAM S. BOURQUE, Fox Creek, N. B.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing hundreds of thousands of letters from women seeking health, in which many openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, many of whom state that it has saved them from surgical operations.

WHILE every man, whether he works for others or for himself, should carry a LIFE INSURANCE POLICY. There is especial need of this on the part of the man who is IN BUSINESS FOR HIMSELF. In the case of such a one's death the proceeds of a policy may mean not merely the usual financial protection for his dependents—they may be the means of saving a profitable business from disruption and a family from serious loss. Every enterprising business man occasionally contracts obligations which he cannot immediately pay, but which, if he retains his health and strength, he manages to cancel in course of time. Sometimes, however, death prevents the payment of business debts that were fully warranted by the outlook when they were incurred. To compel payment of these debts out of the policy-holder's regular estate might greatly embarass his family. But if the head of the firm is insured for an adequate sum, the pressing indebtedness may be met, the business saved, without embarassing the family, and either carried on successfully or sold to good advantage.

On his own account also, a business man should be eager to insure his life for as much as he can conveniently pay premiums on. The business man's credit is always improved by the fact that he has had his life well insured. A Life Insurance Policy, therefore, is a good asset and should be considered indispensable by any one who is conducting a business of his own.

Remember that the late Cyrus W. Field was said to be worth at one time $20,000,000, yet he did not leave a dollar to his family, except his Life Insurance.

Life Insurance is the one asset that never deteriorates at death.

The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada will give you the protection you need. Call, phone or write them—

OTHELLO AND THE HANDKERCHIEF

The following little story was related by a New Yorker, who was in the city yesterday on business.

In a certain darky settlement, an amateur performance of Shakespeare's "Othello" was being given by the ebony colored troupe.

In one part of the play, Othello is supposed to be accusing his wife of an unfaithful act. She is charged by her husband, of parting with a gift, in this case a handkerchief, given her by Othello.

Othello speaks—

"Wha' am dat hankerchief," wha' am dat handkerchief," he shrieks at his shrinking wife.

The colored wife fails to answer and the indignant darkey impersonator repeats his question.

This finally got on the nerves of one woolly pated old nigger in the audience, who could restrain himself no longer.

"What am de matter wid you, Niggah," he cried. "Wipe yuh nose on yuh sleebe, and let de play go on."

LAKEFIELD MAN'S INJURIES FROM FALL PROVED FATAL

The death took place at Brandon, Man., on Monday last of Mr. David Sanderson, at the age of 55 years. He was a brother of Mr. Wellington Sanderson of Peterboro.

The circumstances surrounding the death of deceased are particularly sad Mr. Sanderson left Lakefield for Brandon, Man., about the latter part of August and had only been working at his trade as a carpenter two days when the scaffold on which he was standing gave way and he was thrown to the ground, a distance of about fifteen feet, lighting in some timber. The injuries sustained were of a very serious nature, and despite all that could be done, the unfortunate man passed away on Monday evening just three weeks after the accident. The late Mr. Sanderson was well known in this part of the country and was greatly respected by all. His wife predeceased him about six months ago. There is left to mourn his loss, three daughters and two brothers and a sister. The daughters are Mrs. W. L. Hurl, Brandon, Man., Ethel and Ena, and the brothers and sister. Thomas, of Michigan, Wellington, of Peterboro, and Mrs. Thomas Northey of Burleigh. The remains were brought from Brandon and were interred in the Lakefield cemetery Friday afternoon. The funeral took place from the residence of Mr. J. W. Ridpath at 2.30 o'clock.

WILL REVIVE THE CATTLE BUSINESS

More Government Aid Given the Canadian Farmer.

The new government is taking a particular interest in agriculture. One of the first acts passed last session, despite the opposition of the Liberals, was a bill to encourage agriculture by giving subsidies to each province. Half a million dollars was voted for the purpose, and agreements have now be signed with all the provincial governments, Liberal and Conservative alike, apportioning the subsidies according to population.

The local governments have taken hold of the scheme with enthusiasm and the system of cooperation between the federal and provincial governments, is regarded as an admirable one. To further extend the system of co-operation, C. C. James, former deputy minister of agriculture for Ontario, and regarded as one of the greatest agricultural experts in the Dominion, is at present working out a scheme which will be laid before Hon. Martin Burrell very shortly.

Hon. Martin Burrell has been devoting his attention to the declining sheep industry, and as a result of his efforts there are already signs of a revival, particularly in the Maritime Provinces and British Columbia. The cattle industry of the west is another industry which has been threatening to almost disappear in recent years. Formerly, Western Canada shipped great numbers of cattle to England; to-day the export trade has dropped to nothing, while there are not even enough cattle raised in the prairie provinces to supply the home market. Recently, a conference was held in Winnipeg which was attended by representatives of the railways, stock associations, packers, etc. The government also lent its advice and assistance, and a serious effort will be made by the government to restore this declining industry, so that it will not only supply the home market, but again be on on an exporting basis.

The first step has been the appointment by Hon. Robert Rogers of a commission to investigate the whole question of the grazing leases in Western Canada, and to determine what lands can be set aside as suitable only for grazing purposes. One reason for the disappearance in recent years of western cattle from the market, has been the unsatisfactory condition of the grazing leases. Ranchers could never tell when they might be crowded out by homesteaders and settlers. The new commission will examine as to what lands are unsuitable for agriculture These will be set aside for stock purposes and more permanency will be given the leases. This move has been demanded for some time and it is believed will go a long way towards reviving the live stock industry in the west.

WEDDING BELLS

MORROW — REYNOLDS

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday evening, Sept. 25th, at the home of Mr. Archibald Reynolds, Springville, when his youngest daughter, Miss Mildred Maud, was married to Mr. Lorne J. Morrow, of Peterborough, son of Mr. James Morrow of North Monaghan.

Only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties were present, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Dr Marsh, pastor of Springville Presbyterian Church

At eight p.m., to the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss Elizabeth Morrow, sister of the groom, the bridal party took their place, under an arch of pink and white dalias. The bride, attired in pale blue satin with lace trimmings and tulle veil, carried a beautiful bouquet of cream roses. Her only attendant was her little niece, Miss Ethel Reynolds, who wore a dainty frock of white silk and carried a basket of pink and white asters.

PRICE OF HIDES GOES HIGHER

Footwear of All Kinds Will Cost More in Consequence.

"The prices of hides have gone up 30 per cent. and will go up 25 per cent more and stay there," was the remark of a local shoe dealer to a Review reporter to-day. The cause of the increase was, in his opinion, the passing out of the large cattle ranches of the Canadian west, and the great plains of Texas, which are being rapidly converted into farms. Again the supply from the Argentine, in South America, is exhausted, all of it being sent to England. Many of the rivers there which used to supply the large herds of cattle have dried up, causing thousands of cattle to die from want of water. The situation was felt in England before it was here, and as a result boots are dearer there now in proportion. Many of the large dealers in boots in Canada have kept their wares at the usual prices hoping that the cost would go down again. Thereby they carried on an immense business at a very small margin but now they have had to submit, and consequently prices have risen very quickly. It is almost certain that boots will be fifty cents higher next spring, and there is no outlook of them ever going down again. Another cause is the number of peoples, such as the Chinese, who at one time wore straw shoes, rapidly becoming civilized, and of course wearing leather shoes. This is causing millions of shoes to be in demand, for these people who cannot supply the manufacturer with leather, as nothing of that kind is produced in China.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

To the Editor of the Review,

Sir.—Will you allow me space for a few words in connection with our lecture. I find in a certain locality that cards announcing our lecture, which I carefully nailed to posts on the street, have been torn down! Why this should be done is a mystery to me. If this degraded piece of humanity would come to the lecture he would not hear an unkind word against any other form of Christianity, or of Materia Medica. It is true that Christian Science teaches that the "Only crowned head is immortal sovereignty. Its only priest is the spiritualized man." —Science and Health, page 141. Its object is to make all believers "kings and priests unto God."

If it is me this poor specimen of humanity has the spite at, he can find me at 450 Aylmer street. He will find me a son of my father, who was born in the County Armagh, Ireland who always declared his motto to be "Derry Walls and no surrender." I shall only be pleased to hear the complaint and try and make matters right in a manly, honest way.

Sincerely yours,
R. J. TODD.

Special meeting of the Women's Auxiliry of the Peterboro Health Association will be held in the Council Chambers Monday Afternoon, Sept. 30th at three o'clock. All those who assisted in any way at the Peterboro Summer Fair, are cordially invited to attend.

No Gas
No Dust
Supplies home with pure warm air.
Fused joints cannot leak.

Heating a Home Properly is Something More Than Raising the Temperature. The air must be pure as well as warm. The health of your family demands it. An odor of gas is not only unpleasant but is a menace to the health. Fine coal dust floating in the air is just as bad.

¶ The HECLA Furnace is absolutely gas and dust proof. The Joints, which in other Furnaces are made with bolts and cement, are fused in the HECLA. This process welds the cast-iron and steel into a solid one-piece construction.

¶ Expansion and contraction cannot spread the fused joint. Even after 20 years of service, the joints in the HECLA will be found perfectly tight. The fumes from the fire cannot find an opening. The air in the living rooms is always pure and healthful.

HECLA FURNACE

For Coal and Wood

Ribbed Fire-Pot

Saves one ton in Seven

This healthful heating costs less than ordinary warm air heating. The fire-pot of the HECLA is steel ribbed to radiate the heat rapidly. This, by actual test, makes a saving of 13⅓%, or one ton of coal in seven.

Do you want to give more thought to the heating of your home?

LOTS OF SMOKE BUT LITTLE FIRE

Fire Department Had Run to the Street Car Barns.

The fire department responded to a call sent in by telephone at 7.52 o'clock last night, and later from box 21 to a small fire in the car barns. The cause at present seems to be unknown although it is thought that some electrical apparatus became overheated and set fire to the woodwork of one of the cars. The blaze was easily extinguished with the aid of a few chemicals.

The damage is about $150 with full insurance.

BUSINESS OF MR. T. H. ADAMS

As announced earlier in the season, Mr. Harry Adams will retire from the business field of Peterboro in order to take up his new line of business. The final step in the settlement of Mr. Adams' business was taken a few days ago, when Mr. Percy Reid purchased the business so successfully conducted by Mr. Adams, and who will shortly announce his policy, as he takes possession, October 1st.

Mr. Adams takes this opportunity to thank his many patrons for their loyal patronage and to bespeak a continuance of the same for his successor, Mr. Reid, who is a well known local business man with a host of friends.

The store will be closed from Tuesday to Saturday morning, when Mr. Reid will open the doors for a mammoth clearing sale preparatory to the introduction of his new lines and a remodelled business.

SAYS HE DID NOT SAY TO GRASS WITH THE BY-LAW

Magistrate Dumble Dismisses the Case of Alleged Breach of Traffic By-Law.

Mr. Arthur Head, who was charged with a breach of the city traffic by-law, this morning in police court, swore that he did not say "To grass with the by-law," to P. C. Reed who arrested him. He also affirmed upon his oath that the officer did not ask his name until after they had taken him to the police station.

Considerable evidence was taken, the Magistrate finally letting the case drop. He condemned Mr. Head's actions, telling him that though he was convinced that he committed a breach of the by-law through ignorance, he should have been more civil to the police officer.

Mr. G. W. Hatton appeared for Mr. Head.

After devotional exercises, conducted by Rev. Mr. Webb, the Misses McKee rendered a pleasing instrumental duet. Miss Steinhoff gave several charming selections.

A most inspirational address was given by Miss Drummond, secretary of the Y. W. C. A. work in Toronto. Miss Drummond's personality fairly radiated from her as she spoke of the work in which she is so well informed. Mrs. Grey, the secretary outlined briefly the work of the coming season in the educational classes

A vocal solo by Miss Quartermaine was very much enjoyed by all and after a violin selection by Miss Palmer, a social hour was spent in the parlors.

Soccer, lately introduced to the Collegiate Institute boys, has proven very popular every afternoon, after o'clock, quite a few gather to play the game, which, although played a lot in England, is not played extensively in Canada. Judging from its popularity in England and from the way the boys take to it here, the game will be played almost as much as rugby, as time goes on.

Fight On In Galt.

Galt, Sept. 28.—A hot local option campaign is now on. The present is the third year under the act, and the antis are putting up a vigorous fight for repeal. A statutory requisition to go before the council has been in circulation several weeks, and is said to be complete and ready for presentation. If the new list be not ready for January, 200 residents, the majority being antis, will be disfranchised.

Supporters of the act, who claim it has been rigidly enforced and a complete success, express strong faith that it will be sustained. On the other hand, opponents claim the proximity of the wet zone north and south nullifies the effects of prohibition in Galt. The result here will be a test of the working of the act under adverse conditions. Therefore the fight will be strenuous, and the opposition forces are stronger and better led than before.

Two Yardmen Killed.

Barrie, Sept. 28.—A double tragedy occurred in the yards here yesterday morning when James Chippington and W. J. Early were squeezed to death on the tracks close to the doors of Supt. Lynch's divisional office.

The men were yardmen and were chaining a drawhead of a freight car, when a grain train backed into them, squeezing them both to death on the spot.

The other yardmen claim they were unaware that the dead men were in the vicinity as they had failed to protect themselves.

Both were married with families, Chippington being the bandmaster of the Allandale Band.

Life Term For Ferguson.

Detroit, Sept. 28.—The first murder trial in Michigan in recent years that has involved the possibility of capital punishment for the accused, resulted yesterday in life imprisonment at Fort Leavenworth, Kas., when a jury in the U. S. District Court found W. A. Ferguson guilty of killing Canadian Immigration Inspector H. C. Eerbert on July 25, on a ferryboat plying between Detroit and Windsor, Ont. The jury recommended life imprisonment.

Ferguson shot down the inspector a few moments after he had been refused admission into Canada because of physical defects. He blamed the inspector for causing his return to Detroit.

Man Caught Not the One.

Seattle, Wn., Sept. 28.—The man arrested in St. Louis, according to detectives directing the search here, is not Al. Addison, alias Albert Anderson, the last of the trio believed to have committed the actual robbery of the New Westminster Bank.

Addison was Charles Dean's partner in a bowling alley in Tacoma, and also in the ownership of a swift gasoline launch, in which the thieves are supposed to have escaped from New Westminster.

It was the theory of detectives here that the actual robbery was done by John McNamara, Charles Dean and Addison. The two former are in prison awaiting trial. Addison has never been found. All the other arrests in various parts of the country in connection with the robbery are said to have been of men accused of handling stolen bills.

Grain Movement Late.

Ottawa, Sept. 28.—Late as was last year's western wheat crop in moving, this year's is even slower, according to official figures which are received at the Trade and Commerce Department. On Sept. 22, 1911, there were at the terminal elevator 3,396,353 bushels of wheat and 3,037,901 bushels of oats, or a total of 6,434,254 bushels. This year on Sept. 20 there was only about half this amount at the terminals. There were 2,257,287 bushels of wheat and 1,367,482 bushels of oats, a total of 3,625,319 bushels.

Montreal Cars Kill Two.

Montreal, Sept. 28.—Two deaths resulted yesterday from street railway accidents. Fred. Tuckwell of the firm of Tuckwell Bros., automobile tire repairers, was struck by a car on the crossing of Melville avenue and St. Catherine street and fatally injured.

Four-year-old Hazen Glendenning, whose parents reside at 158 Queen street, was knocked down by a car on the crossing of Vinet and St. James streets and died a short time afterward.

Mr. Tuckwell died at the Western Hospital last evening.

NUMBERS IN A PARADE.

Easy to Estimate Them According to United States Army Rules.

It is remarkable how the average civilian overestimates the number of persons in a parade. Take, for example, the recent suffragist parade in New York. It was said that there were 15,000 women in line, and some enthusiasts put it even at 20,000. But it is easy to estimate such numbers approximately. Here is the rule as laid down in the "Field Service Regulations" of the United States army:

"The strength of a body of troops may be estimated from the length of time it takes to pass a given point. Assuming that infantry in column of fours occupies half a yard per man, cavalry one yard per trooper and artillery in single column per gun or caisson, a given point would be passed in one minute by about 175 infantry, 116 cavalry at a walk, 200 cavalry at a trot and five guns or caissons."

Allowing for spacing between companies, battalions and regiments, all of which is according to mathematical rule, it takes a regiment of 1,000 men divided into battalions just ten minutes to pass, or at the rate of 6,000 an hour. And this supposes no breaks in the line.

These rules, it must be remembered, are for trained soldiers used to a long step and to keeping up without straggling. No civilians, even militant suffragettes, ever have kept up or could keep up this pace, and in the women's parade many of the organizations walked in column of twos. This parade took an hour and a half to pass.—New York World.

SOCIETY AS SHE SEES IT.

Hetty Green's Caustic Comments on Present Day Conditions.

Mrs. Hetty Green, New York's woman financier, has never grown accustomed to modern manners.

"Girls and young matrons in my young day," said Mrs. Green recently, "enjoyed balls and parties where gentle folk mingled. Nowadays such affairs are but scrambles for men who have made fortunes in stock gambling in order to parade their bejeweled wives and daughters before each other.

"Some of them wear so few clothes that it makes me blush. I went to the opera once. I saw one woman there whose frock was cut so low I could count the joints in her backbone. I am almost tempted to say I could count her ribs.

"I don't know what society is coming to. The men are about as well mannered as the average horse jockey, while the women are mannish and hoydenish and altogether the reverse of what their grandmothers should have desired them to be.

"These days, too, women are forever gadding about instead of remaining at home and making things comfortable and attractive for their husbands and children. There's no home life."—Ohio Journal.

"Color Hearing."

Some persons associate particular colors with particular sounds. In a recent presentation of this subject to the French Academy of Sciences it was pointed out that there are two forms of this phenomenon. In one case the person has a sensation as if a transparent colored film, like a rainbow, appeared before his eyes when certain vowel or musical sounds strike his ears. In the other case letters or written words, representing the sounds heard, appear in colored tints. The tints are very definite and characteristic and do not vary with lapse of time, but two persons seldom associate the same colors with the same sounds.—New York Sun.

Winnipeg, Sept. 28.—Hon. Robert Rogers arrived here yesterday morning from Montreal to assist the Conservative candidate in Macdonald bye-election, and expresses his entire satisfaction with Alex. Morrison as the party nominee.

Bye-Election In Richelieu.

Ottawa, Sept. 28.—The federal bye-election in the County of Richelieu, it is expected, will be held shortly. A. D. Morgan, Montreal, who was the Conservative candidate last election will again run. J. P. Cardin was elected a year ago, but was unseated. His majority was large, and as the seat is traditionally Liberal, it is considered doubtful whether the Conservatives will win.

THE SAVIOR'S TEACHINGS
BROOKLYN TABERNACLE
INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDIES

TEACHING BY PARABLES ONLY.

—Matt. 13:34, 35.—Sept. 29.—

Text: "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life."—John 6:63.

BIBLE STUDENTS and Bible scholars have generally expressed surprise that the Great Teacher spoke always to the people in symbolic language, "dark sayings," the meaning of which they rarely understood. Another Scripture informs us that the reason was that the true invitation was not intended for the multitudes, but merely for the consecrated.

Those who accepted the Lord as the Savior, and took upon themselves the required vow of faithfulness in walking in His footsteps unto death were granted special enlightenment: "To you it is given to know the mystery of the Kingdom of Heaven, but to outsiders these things are spoken in parables; that they might not see and understand."

"The words that I speak unto you."

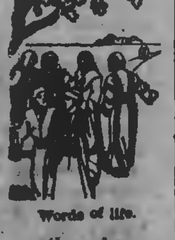
The entire matter is clarified when we recognize the difference between the salvation of the world to the human nature, during Messiah's reign of a thousand years, and the salvation provided for the Elect, called during this Age.

It has been claimed that the doctrines of Christianity can be better gleaned from the writings of the Apostles than from the sayings of Jesus. There is considerable truth in this claim, and the reason is manifest: Jesus' words were addressed mainly to the multitudes, and when He addressed the disciples He could not discuss even with them deep, spiritual truths, because they had not been begotten of the Holy Spirit, and therefore could not understand spiritual things. Jesus himself declared, "I have many things to tell you, but ye cannot bear them now."

"After Ye Were Illuminated."

St. Paul gives the key in one of his Epistles, saying, "After ye were illuminated, ye endured a great fight of afflictions." (Heb. 10:32.) The illumination received was the begetting of the Holy Spirit.

This has been true of all the members of the Body of Christ throughout this Age. Each one presenting his body a living sacrifice has been accepted by the great Advocate, and presented as a part of His own Offering; and then the offerer has been begotten of the Holy Spirit to be a New Creature in Christ.



Words of life.

It is to these New Creatures that the statement is made, "All things are yours, for ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's." To these the Bible has promised, "He will show you things to come." These are to be guided into all Truth as it become due. For these the Word of God is a Storehouse, from which "things both new and old" are produced under the Spirit's guidance, as they become "meat in due season."

Even New Creatures must make progress in their appreciation of spiritual things. The Apostle urges such: "As new born babes desire the sincere milk of the Word, that ye might grow thereby." And the growth is necessary if they would attain joint-heirship in the Kingdom; hence the Apostle urges that each seek not to continue a babe, but to become a man, and to use the "strong meat" of Divine Truth. Thus he is sanctified, developed as a New Creature, filled with the Spirit, and "thoroughly furnished unto every good work," by knowledge of the Word of God.

Now our text: "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." Here our Lord endeavored to impress His dear disciples with the thought that they should not take His words too literally, but look for the deeper meaning. And, they were to remember that they could not get that deep meaning until after the Master's ascension; as He said, "It is expedient for you that I go away; for if I go not away the Holy Spirit will not come unto you; but if I go away I will send Him unto you."

The Master's words were "words of life" in that they conveyed the great Message of the terms upon which we may have everlasting life and become His joint-heirs. Although the Apostles explain the philosophy of the Divine Plan in great detail, more than did Jesus, yet in His saying we find the very essence of the Gospel. Nowhere are the terms of discipleship more carefully laid down than in Jesus' words, because the disciples could understand the meaning of self-denial, cross-bearing, and walking in His step, even if they could not understand the philosophy of justification, sanctification, election and Divine foreknowledge.

From Jesus' words more clearly than from any others we get the thought of the "water of life," and how it is now in His followers a "spring" of truth, grace and everlasting life. Nowhere else do we more clearly get the statement that the Father hath life in Himself, and hath granted unto the Son life in Himself, and that He might share this life with His disciples—with whomsoever He would. Thus, as St. Paul says, the words of this salvation began to be spoken by our Lord. He brought "life" and "immortality" to light, both the general reward of everlasting life to be given to the world, and the special reward to be granted to the Church.

The Tie That Bound.

Archeologists have discovered the palace of Jezebel, who, it will be remembered, was an ancient dame of uncertain temper, mostly bad. In the palace the grubbers found more than 5,000 cooking utensils, which might go to show that despite her violent outbreaks the ancient dame was a good cook and a provident housekeeper.

And this suggests a Lincoln story.

When the great emancipator was practicing law in Indianapolis a client came to him and wanted to know if something couldn't be done to protect him from his wife. He said she locked him out nights, threw dishes at him and battered him up with a club. She scolded him day and night and consistently and continuously made life miserable for him.

"Have you thought of getting a divorce?" inquired Lincoln.

"No, no, I don't want a divorce. Why, I wouldn't leave th' old woman for anything."

"You wouldn't! After all that abuse? And why not?"

"Because, squire, that old woman of mine can make the best flapjacks in Sangamon county!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

GUARD THEIR HEALTH!
Children Who Grow Very Fast Need Careful Watching.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills would make her healthy and happy.

Next to infancy, the years between ten or twelve and eighteen are the most critical in life, especially for the boys and girls who grew too fast. Rapid growth and the physical changes that are taking place render them particularly liable to weakness and disorders of the digestive system, kidneys or lungs that very frequently, when allowed to run on, condemn them to a lifetime of suffering.

It is most important that at this period of life those organs which carry off the body's waste and impurities—the bowels, the kidneys and the skin—should be kept active and vigorous.

Nothing will do this more effectively than that good old-fashioned remedy, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills. It acts directly on each of these organs, enabling them to do their work properly, and thus keeps the whole system pure and healthy.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are still made from precisely the same formula as when our grandparents used them, for nothing better has ever been devised.

In order to hasten the development of Northern Ontario, through which the National Transcontinental Railway will run, the Ontario Government has leased the Abitibi pulp limit to Messrs. Shirley Ogilvie and F. H. Anson, of Montreal, who will start immediately upon the construction of a pulp mill to cost $500,000, with a daily output of not less than 100 tons. This will not only mean a great deal to settlers in a convenient market for their pulp wood, but will open up two more townships, one in Cochrane agency and the other in the Matheson district. The promoters of the undertaking have agreed to co-operate with the Provincial authorities in encouraging colonization as also to spend $50,000 in clearing the bush, erecting buildings and otherwise preparing the way for settlement in the neighborhood of Iroquois Falls, the work to be done on such lands as may be selected by the Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, which will remain the property of the Crown.

Besides erecting a pulp mill the lessees are to construct and operate at such times as the Government direct, a paper mill with a capacity of at least 100 tons of paper a day; 75 tons to be turned out daily. A stock company with a subscribed capital stock of $1,500,000, is to be formed to develop the limit.

The Order Not Complete.

A story comes from a town where firms advertise to sell fish direct to small purchasers. The glowing advertisements asked for the sending of half a dollar with a list of the varieties of fish preferred. One letter read:

"I want two salmon, a dozen whiting, a dozen fresh herrings, some flounders, and, if you have them, you can add a lobster."

The next day the lady received a letter which ran:

"Dear Madam—Please send another dime, and we will forward the fisherman."—Dallas News.

A Lion at the Piano.

"When seals were taught to do tricks in balancing and to twirl flaming torches and ordinary barnyard cocks crowed a duet at the command of a trainer we thought the highest point in that commercially valuable line of education had been reached," says a writer in a Berlin paper. "But a new 'first place' has been created for a grass green cockatoo. This educated member of the parrot family rides a tiny bicycle at command and seems to enjoy the sport. He does many tricks for which professional riders receive applause. The same 'collection of animal wonders' contains a monster lion, which is shown in a cage provided with a grand piano. A woman trainer enters, seats herself at the instrument and strikes a chord, at which the lion leaps upon the piano and glares at the pianist. Then she plays, and the lion roars in time with the music. What next?"

Pony Saved Lauder.

Wearing his kilts, Mr. Harry Lauder, the comedian, played a novel part on the sands at Blackpool, England, recently. His concern for dumb animals, especially pit ponies, is well known, and when he was invited by the mayor of Blackpool to distribute the prizes in a competition for donkeys, Mr. Lauder eagerly responded. Having fixed medals to the winning donkeys' bridles, the comedian mounted a sandhill and indulged in interesting and amusing "patter."

He related some of his experiences as a pit boy. He told how, when going through a drift in a coal mine, his pit pony suddenly stopped. "Immediately I struck him with the whip." Mr. Lauder proceeded: "He turned round to the side of the little tub I was sitting in, and I am not exaggerating when I tell you that about 100,000 tons of stone fell. Had it not been for the cuteness of the hearing of that pony we should both have been buried alive. I owe my life to that Shetland pony. Instead of licking my pony because he didn't go on, when I saw what happened I jumped out of the tub and put my arm round his neck and kissed him."

Mersey's Clever Son.

Throughout the Titanic inquiry Lord Mersey has received valuable assistance from his son, Captain the Hon. Clive Bigham, who acted as secretary to the commission. Captain Bigham is well qualified for his work, for he served in a similar capacity to the Motor Commission, when he was warmly complimented by Lord Selby for his reports on the motor laws of foreign countries.

Captain Bigham has enjoyed both a military and a diplomatic career. He was in the Grenadier Guards for several years, and then acted as special correspondent for The Times with the Ottoman Army during the Græco-Turkish War. He served as A.D.C. and Intelligence Officer to the Admiral of the Fleet, Sir E. H. Seymour, in the First Pekin Expedition, when his knowledge of the East stood him in good stead.

They Lock Their Cars.

Car seals are not in use on British railroads, as in Canada. The usual custom is to bolt and lock the doors. In the case of very valuable freight or bullion, additional protection is afforded by one or more officials traveling inside the car.

The "PANDORA" Range Solves Cooking and Baking Problems--More Reasons Why

The superiority of the "PANDORA" Oven to that of any other range you can buy has been convincingly proven in a former advertisement. The swelling tide of orders from our agents testifies to that, yet there are many more features—some of them exclusively McClary's—which add to the excellence of the "PANDORA" range.

Illustration No. 1 shows the semi-steel linings of the "PANDORA" Fire-box. These linings are manufactured by a special process. As you see there are five pieces—a front-piece, two ends and two at the back—and fitted into Fire-box without bolts or cement. The surfaces of these linings are smooth — they have great fire-resisting power and are already famous for durability and simplicity.

Illustration No. 2 shows the grates used in "PANDORA" range and the ease with which they are removed—being made with three bars they are heavier and stronger than the two-bar grate—the teeth are shorter—crush clinkers easier and are less liable to break. Anybody can remove the "PANDORA" semi-steel grates — the operation is simplicity itself. A boy can take out coal grates and insert wood by simply sliding them in and out on their independent grate frame.

The baking power of an Oven depends largely on Fire-box—it must be built in exact proportion to oven. The Fire-box of the "PANDORA" is deep and wide but not out of proportion—there is a wide surface at top of fire so that it radiates more heat and cooking can be done much quicker over front pot-holes without forcing fire—another apparent reason for our fuel economy claim.

TIMELY WORDS OF COUNSEL IN THE INTEREST OF PETERBOROUGH BOYS

Written by Mr. Nash Boy's Work Secretary, Y.M.C.A.

The Boy and the Church — The church or the saloon; which institution will get your boy? A grist mill cannot make flour without a continual supply of wheat, neither can the saloon or the church long continue their operations without enlisting boys to fill the vacancies filled by the men who are constantly dropping out of their ranks. The saloon offers many alluring attractions, and if the church is going to be successful in the competition for boys, her attractions must be greater than those of the saloon.

It is encouraging to see the boys in the regular church services and to see that the ministers are taking the boy into account in the preparation of their sermons. But every adult member of the congregation is also more or less responsible for the presence of the future men. If the boys are greeted kindly by all and made to feel that they are really wanted, they will very probably attend regularly. It speaks loudly for the future success of the church when father and mother and sons and daughters sitting side by side in their regular pew is a weekly occurrence.

The Sunday school is a part of the church and is the medium through which the church performs some of her most important work. Just as the prayer meeting is the heart of the church and reveals her life, so the Sunday school is the right arm of the church and reveals her strength. To keep the boy in the Sunday school and thus save him to the church may be a difficult task, but it can be done. One hour out of every one hundred and sixty-eight is a comparatively small portion of a boy's life and it is this small fraction of time that is given to the Sunday school. This makes it imperative that the Sunday school should rally all her forces and concentrate all her powers upon the work in hand. In order to do this it is necessary to secure a sufficient number of efficient teachers who realise the importance of their responsibility and the greatness of their privilege and this implies the maintenance of a progressive Teacher Training Class. Every Christian adult who has the welfare of the boy at heart should identify himself with such a class and offer his services as a Sunday school teacher.

The duty of the church towards the boy is such as might well cause the angels to tremble and yet this stupendous responsibility has been placed upon the shoulders of men. Much good work has already been done, but it still remains to be seen how nearly we can measure up to our highest privilege.

MOST POPULAR COMEDY OF THE OPERA SEASON

The "Spring Maid" at the Grand Next Thursday.

The New York music publishers, who have the American rights for the music of "The Spring Maid" operetta, that plays at the Grand Opera House on Thursday, Oct. 3rd, declare that they have sold more copies of "Day Dreams," "Two Little Love Bees," and "Fountain Fay," three of the song hits of the piece, than they have ever sold of any hits of other musical plays published by them. In fact the sale of this charming music has broken all records since "The Merry Widow" waltz was the rage.

J. H. Goldworthy, who plays Prince Aladar in "The Spring Maid," is a regular "My Word" Englishman and before coming to this country was one of the big musical comedy favorites in London. Immediately on his arrival in America to appear in "The Spring Maid" he wishes to conceal the fact that he came from Great Britain. Accordingly, he cultivated Americanisms with all his might and main. He acquired a slang vocabulary at once and did his best as he thought, to disguise his English dialect. Approaching Miss Luneska one day after a few weeks in the company, Mr. Goldworthy said.

"I say, Miss Luneska, don't you think I'm doing a bit good betting shut of my bloomin' dialect?"

"Yes indeed," asserted the prima donna, concealing a smile.

"I fawncy I can bally well fool 'em now and then. Eh, what!"

"I should say you might."

"Haw, haw! Do you think so, now really?"

"I say you might, but I don't know how."

The seat sale for "The Spring Maid," opens on Tuesday, and as there is likely to be a big rush, it is advisable that all who wish to secure good reservation be on hand at nine o'clock.

GRADUATES AT ST. JOSEPH'S

The graduating exercises of St. Joseph's Hospital were held Thursday night, Rev. Father McColl presiding. The nurses who graduated were Miss Margaret McEachen and Sister M. Cleophas. On the presentation of the medals and diplomas to the graduates, congratulatory addresses were made by members of the staff and an enjoyable social hour was spent.

ANOTHER NAVAL GUESS PUNCTURED

Premier Roblin Repudiates That Dreadnought Interview.

Winnipeg, Sept. 28—Premier Roblin denies the report in a Montreal paper that he stated in his Macdonald speech Wednesday night he knew Borden has pledged himself to a contribution of one or two Dreadnoughts to the British navy. What he said was, according to a verbatim report in the Winnipeg Telegram—

"Liberals and Conservatives join in the request and the hope and the expectation that Hon. Mr. Borden will provide funds for at least one, if not two Dreadnoughts, to be constructed at the earliest possible date, and placed at the disposal of the Britsih Admiralty."

The Free Press, in its report of the meeting, quotes Roblin as saying that Borden had practically pledged Canada to give either one or two Dreadnoughts and this pledge would have to be fulfilled.

WORK AND WORRY WEAKEN WOMEN

New Health and Strength Obtained by the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

It is useless to tell a hard-working woman to take life easily and not to worry. Every woman at the head of a home; every girl in offices, shops, and factories is subject to more or less worry. These cannot be avoided. But it is is the duty of every woman and every girl to save her strength as much as possible and to build up her system to meet any unusual demands. Her future health depends upon it. To guard against a breakdown in health, the blood must be kept rich, red and pure. Nothing can keep the blood in this condition so well as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They strengthen the nerves, restore the appetite, bring the glow of health to pallid cheeks, and renewed energy to listless people. Women cannot always rest when they should, but they can keep their strength and keep disease away by the occasional use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Or if a breakdown has come unexpectedly they can obtain new health through this same medicine. Mrs. M. Thomas, River street, Toronto, says— "For several years I was almost a constant invalid, unable to do my housework and spending much of my time in bed. My nerves seemed worn out and I was so run down that all my friends thought I was in a hopeless decline. I was as pale as a corpse. I was so bloodless that if I cut my finger it would not bleed; my limbs were swollen far beyond their usual size. At the least exertion my heart would palpitate violently, and I frequently had fainting spells. I was under treatment by good doctors, but it did me no good. Then one day my husband brought home some Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I began taking them. They seemed to go to the root of the trouble, and in the course of a few weeks, the improvement they were making was quite plain. Gradually as I continued taking the Pills the swelling of my limbs disappeared; the weak spells came less and less frequently; my appetite greatly improved, and finally I was completely cured and able to do my housework with ease. Later my daughter Elma seemed to be troubled with anaemia, and we gave her the Pills with the same good results."

Why suffer in any way when you can begin curing yourself to-day with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THEATRICAL

'THE NEW BARMAID'

A taste of English musical comedy was afforded local theatre-goers last evening, when the New Barmaid Company sang, danced and played their way into immense popularity with a fair sized audience. Everything is English, costumes, scenery, and especially the accent. The company is efficient, and the burden of entertaining is done by several accomplished and equally versatile members of the cast. A little allowance must be made for the various differences which distinguished the performance from American musical comedy, but the New Barmaid Company lose nothing by the comparison. The brand of humor given in generous quantities is of the side-splitting and really funny class. English wit and humor if anything, on a par, and even superior to the American interpretation of the same, and the Barmaid comedians are masters of the art of good clean comedy at the right moment. The reputation that the English have received for a lack of the sense of humor also went by the board after last evening's performance. The fun never lags, and the story of the plot and its working out is clean and wholesome at all times, and provides bushels of laughter.

Miss Edne Mollon in the role of a lady journalist acquitted herself extraordinarily well, and was a decidedly popular performer. Her dancing is graceful, expressive and clever, and received repeated ovations.

NO BLOOD SHED ON ULSTER'S BIG DAY

Huge Demonstration Held by Opponents of Home Rule and Thousands Signed the Covenant—Nationalists Witnessed the Ceremonies, But Made No Display of Hostilities

Belfast, Sept. 30.—As proof of their determination never to submit to the domination of an Irish Parliament, thousands of Ulsterites—Unionists and Orangemen — devoted Saturday to signing the covenant of resistance to home rule. But, notwitstanding the anxiety and dread as to what might happen, Ulster Day passed off without any serious disturbance.

In expectation of rioting a large force of troops were quartered in the city, but their services were not needed. Only one demonstration of factional feeling occurred, which threatened for a brief space to become serious. After a football match between Protestant and Catholic teams at Celtic Park, as the crowds were returning home, several green flags were waved. The appearance of these emblems of Nationalism started several fierce fights, but the police stopped the conflicts before anybody was badly hurt.

Religious services preceded the signing of the covenant and services of a similar nature were held in many of the churches and chapels throughout the counties of Ulster. Undoubtedly the arrangements which had been made whereby the signing of the document was treated as a solemn religious obligation, exercised a restraining influence on the bellicose Orangemen, while the humorous view taken of the ceremony by the Natonalists tended to diminish their feelings of hostility.

The aspect of the city, however, throughout the day was decidedly martial. The air resounded with the tramp of well-drilled civilians going and coming from the City Hall, where the covenant was signed. Meanwhile bands of all descriptions played patriotic airs. From noon until late at night the signatures were attached at the rate of 500 per minute and a half, a large number of desks having been arranged for the convenience of the public and to facilitate this work.

Sir Edward Carson, who has announced his willingness to stand at the forefront of the battle until victory is won—however fought out—was the dominant figure of the day. After a dinner given in honor of the occasion, he received a congratulatory address from the English Protestant associations. Then, accompanied by the members of the Ulster committee and the English Unionist members of the House of Commons who have been prominent in this campaign, started for the Donegal Quay to take the steamer for Liverpool, where he will attend a big anti-home rule demonstration to-day.

From the Ulster Club to the quay side Sir Edward and his party were escorted by a torchlight procession through immense throngs cheering enthusiastically. As the steamer made its way down the Lough every eminence on shore was illuminated by beacon fires.

Montmorency—Hon. Mr. Taschereau, $119 per annum.

THREE MEN KILLED IN AEROPLANE

All Were Army Officers Experimenting with the Machines

Washington, Sept. 30.—Lieut. Lewis C. Rockwell, U.S.A., and Sergt. F. S Scott, of the Signal Corps, both attached to the army aviation corps, are dead as a result of an accident to an army aeroplane on Saturday. The machine, while in the air, fell about fifty feet, killing Sergt. Scott almost instantly. Lieut. Rockwell was so badly injured that he died a few hours later at the Walter Reid Hospital.

Biplane Overturned.

Hempstead, N.Y., Sept. 30.—John L. Longstaff, a former English army officer, was killed Saturday evening while flying in a Farman biplane with his mechanician, Pierre Chavellier. Seventy feet in the air a wire connecting the control of the biplane became jammed and the machine instantly overturned, striking the ground with such force that it was buried two feet.

Longstaff fractured his skull, and received serious internal injuries from which he died a short time later. Chavellier is seriously, but not mortally injured. He will probably lose his left eye.

Longstaff held a pilot license from the Royal Aero Club of England. He had been flying as a scout with the insurgent army in Mexico until recently. He had planned to take up a passenger, and was tuning up the machine. Longstaff was 35 years of age.

ONLY ONE TENDER

For Ships for the West Indies' Service Have Been Received

Ottawa, Sept. 30.—The tenders for the ships for the West Indies' service, which are supposed to be opened to-morrow, will probably be a disappointment to the Minister of Trade and Commerce, for it is understood that only one serious tender has been received by the department. As a matter of fact the complicated tenders asked for have given British shipping men the impression that the Government is simply fishing for information and, as a consequence, no tender is from the British Isles.

To-day British shipbuilding is so very prosperous, ships paying for themselves in two years, that builders are not attracted by any uncertain Government venture, hence the total absence of tender from over the water.

RESIDENTS PETITION

Ask for Electrification of Galt and Elmira Branch of G.T.R.

Galt, Sept. 30.—In conversation with Supt. Gillies of the Grand Trunk Railway, it was learned he had received a petition containing the names of 1,200 residents of this county, asking for the electrification of the Galt and Elmira branch. The superintendent is giving the subject consideration, and expects shortly to go into the matters thoroughly.

The superintendent in charge of this district does not consider the obstacles in the way of electrification insurmountable. That there would be a saving in the cost of motive power the Grand Trunk official readily conceded. He was impressed by the character of the petition presented.

REDMOND SAYS HALF ULSTER IS IN FAVOR OF HOME RULE

Says the Demonstration by the Unionists Last Saturday Was No More Dargerous Than a Flashlight—Big Meeting in New York.

New York, Sept. 30—"The Ulsterites' demonstration against home rule at Belfast Saturday is no more dangerous than this flashlight," exclaimed Wm. H. Redmond, the Nationalist member of Parliament, when his speech at a large mass meeting in Carnegie Hall Saturday night was interrupted by the photographers' work.

"Half of Ulster is as ardently for home rule as any part of Ireland," he continued. "Half of Ulster belongs to the ancient faith and many Protestants in recent years have been marching side by side with Catholics in the battle for Irish liberty."

The speaker got a great ovation. The meeting had been arranged by a committee of prominent citizens, including Superem Court Justice Keogh, W. Bourke Cockran, Alton B. Parker and Herman Ridder. A letter was read from Cardinal Farley expressing his warm sympathy with the cause.

Turkey's Latest Offer.

Ouchy, Switzerland, Sept. 30.—The Turco-Italian peace negotiations have probably entered their final phase with the arrival here of Rechad Pasha bearing Turkey's latest proposals. If these are acceptable to Italy, as is hoped, Rechad Pasha will assume direction of the official negotiations and arrange the precise wording of the peace treaty.

The Italian ambassador to France, Tomasso Tittoni, is expected to join the Italian delegates. The drawing up of the final protocol, even if the new Turkish proposals are satisfactory, is likely to be somewhat delayed, as the Turkish Government is anxous to have the elections over before concluding peace; otherwise the Young Turks would have a trump card. Consequenlty it is not expected that a peace treaty will be signed before Oct. 15.

ENTIRE FAMILY PERISHED WHEN CANOE UPSET NEAR OMEMEE ON SATURDAY

William McCaffrey, of Toronto, His Mother, Wife and Two Children Drowned in Pigeon Creek—Boy Had Caught a 14-pound Lunge and This Caused the Fatality—All the Bodies Recovered.

Toronto, Sept. 30.—Five persons lost their lives Saturday afternoon, when a 16-foot canoe capsized in Pigeon Creek, near Omemee, Ont. An entire family was wiped out—William J. McCaffrey, his wife, son and daughter of 16 South Drive, Rosedale, Toronto, and his mother, Mrs. Charles McCaffrey of Omemee. No one witnessed what must have been a terrible struggle for life. An overturned canoe, gradually sinking, found in the middle of the creek, where the water was about 10 feet deep, revealed the truth. A few hours later the body of William McCaffrey was located and a fishing line, which was wound about his wrist, was being jerked by a 14-pound lunge, showing that the direct cause of the fatality was the "strike" of the fish on the troll, which evidently excited the canoeists. All the bodies were recovered Sunday after they had been grappled for for many hours by a number of villagers. The bodies of Mrs. McCaffrey and her daughter were tangled in the line.

The following is the death toll:

William J. McCaffrey, aged 39 years, assistant manager of the supply department of the Canadian General Electric Co., whose home is 16 South Drive, Rosedale.

Mrs. Charles McCaffrey, his mother, aged about 65 years, of Omemee, near Peterboro, Ont.

Mrs. William McCaffrey, his wife, aged 38 years.

Maxine McCaffrey, his daughter, aged 13 years.

Howard McCaffrey, his son, aged 8 years.

Early Sunday morning a number of friends went up the creek to search for the bodies. After some hours of work the remains of the two women were found, and then the little boy, Howard, and then William McCaffrey. Later in the morning the body of Maxine, the little girl, was discovered. The five bodies were taken back to the homestead, from which the funeral will take place on Tuesday afternoon to the village cemetery.

For twenty years William J. McCaffrey had been employed by the Canadian General Electric Co., and the vacancy he leaves is the assistant general managership of the supply department. Every year he had spent his vacation with his family at the old homestead, where his father and mother live. This was in Omemee, a village with about 500 inhabitants, situated on Pigeon Creek, a small and peaceful watercourse, which runs for about six or so miles northward into Sturgeon Lake. Omemee is on the line of the Grand Trunk Railway, about half-way between Lindsay and Peterboro, and is considered an ideal camping spot for holidayers. This year Mr. McCaffery did not enjoy a vacation, but on Friday night he decided to take his family for their annual visit to his native town. They intended to stay for just the week-end, but, if the fishing was good, would extend the visit until Tuesday night.

The news of the drowning was received in Toronto at 1.30 Sunday morning by long-distance telephone. Miss Salter, a half-sister of Mrs. William McCaffrey, a nurse at the Hospital for Sick Children, College street, was in attendance upon her mother who is dying at 16 South Drive. No information was given the sick woman then, it being feared that the shock would result in her death. However, upon the advice of a physician, she was told last night, and although broken down, will survive the severe blow.

Mr. McCaffrey was prominent in many circles in Toronto. He had a long connection with the Board of Trade. He was a warden of St. Peter's Anglican Church, Carlton and Bleecker streets, and had held other offices in the church for a number of years. He was a great cricket enthusiast. He was also a member of the Orange order.

Hit by Motor Truck, May Die.

St. Catharines, Sept. 30.—The eight-year-old son of George McNeil, barber, living on Church street, is in the General Hospital, in a semi-unconscious condition, suffering from a fracture of the leg and concussion of the brain as a result of being run over by an auto truck owned by the Rea Ambulance Co., at the corner of Church street and Helliwell's lane, a short distance from his home. He was taken to the hospital, and is still in a critical condition.

OLD LADDER BROKE DOWN AND THREE MEN WERE HURT

Accident at a Fire in Toronto Last Night Due to Faulty Equipmens of the Department—Injured Men Were Taken to the Hospital

Toronto, Sept. 30.—Three firemen are in St. Michael's Hospital suffering from injuries and two others are also more or less badly bruised as a result of a fire which did $20,000 damage at the old Myott building, 120-126 Bay street late last night. The accident occurred when a line of hose was being hoisted to the second storey and the ladder to which the men were clinging broke into several pieces.

Pool was reaching to catch the frame of the window on the second storey. He called to the three men below to run up the hose. But the strain was too much for the old ladder and it broke as the men neared the top.

With the exception of Pool, they all fell to the pavement 35 feet below. The other man grasped the top of the ladder. As the piece struck the ground Pool dropped off and was only slightly bruised.

Joyce was picked up and received medical attention at once. He was then taken, with Taylor and Knott, to the hospital. The latter has a badly strained side, while Taylor injured his head and one arm. Joyce received the most serious injuries. He is badly bruised and is suffering from shock. All will recover.

W. M. Phillips, who drives the chief's car, was standing at the bottom of the ladder and all the men fell on him before he could regain his feet after the first comrade alighted on him. It is probably due to this man that the injuries to the others were not more serious, as he broke their fall.

Mayor Geary was at the scene of the fire shortly after the accident inquiring as to the condition of the men.

The blaze broke out on the second floor near the elevator shaft at 9.25. A passerby noticed it and turned in an alarm. Although the firemen were soon on the scene the flames had a good start.

Chief Thompson stated that the ladder was a very old one and was not of the truss style. In any case it should have held four men under ordinary conditions. Another fireman said that it had been used for the past fifteen years.

LIVER LAZINESS

Those Who Lack Energy and are Unsuccessful Should Read This Closely.

"I am only thirty years old, yet for almost two years I have felt more like seventy-five. I have found it difficult to sleep at night and in the morning feel so depressed and heavy that effort was difficult. My hands were always clammy and perspiration on slight effort would break out all over me. It was not unnatural that I should begin to brood over the chance that I should soon be unfit to do my work, and this dread made my sleepless nights perfect misery. After repeated trials of medicine and mixtures Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me the first gleam of hope. From the very first I could see they were different in action from other pills. They didn't gripe and acted as naturally as if nature and not the pills were cleansing my clogged up system. My spirits rose, I felt much better, the sluggish action of the system gave way to normal activity. Dizziness and headaches ceased, appetite, good color, and ambition to work returned and have remained. I am like a new man and I thank Dr. Hamilton's Pills for it all."

A CENSOR OF PLAYS

Rev. R. B. St. Clair, moral reformer, by choice and by profession, attended a theatrical performance in Toronto and was shocked by some of the salacious features of the play. The official censor, a police officer of long experience, saw nothing amiss but sat through the performance, his season's pass in his pocket, and enjoyed himself with the rest of the audience. Mr. St. Clair, in what he considered the interests of public morality, issued a pamphlet describing the play and was promptly arrested for circulating obscene literature and using His Majesty's mails for that purpose. He was found guilty but was released on suspended sentence.

It was not shown that the reverend gentleman had exaggerated his accounts of the features which he considered objectionable but still the official censor held that the play was all right. It was here that the official censorship in Toronto the Good was shown up in all its peculiarity and elasticity. On the first night anything could be offered by the management. The house on such occasions was crowded. Everything went. The official censor never entered a protest, never made an effort to stop the performance until the curtain dropped on the last act. Then he conferred with the management and suggested, perhaps, that certain features be eliminated. All this after the harm was done. Some parts may have been cut out and in its somewhat chastened form the play was permitted to run to the end.

A police officer from the very nature of his daily occupation cannot be expected to possess that mental culture, that sense of discrimination which we would naturally look for in a censor of public theatrical performances. That sense is certain to become blunted by his constant contact with the underworld. He sees too much of what is coarse to be able readily to discern that which is fit and proper in the way of public entertainment. The censorship of plays in Toronto as disclosed by the recent court proceedings is a joke. Even according to the testimony submitted if a newspaper had taken the matter up the reporter who exposed the exhibition would have rendered himself liable to the same charge as that upon which Mr. St. Clair was arrested, photographed, finger printed and finally convicted.

In the interests of public morals the films used at the picture shows are submitted to rigid censorship. Why should not the same course be adopted with regard to theatrical performances? The Methodist branch of the moral reformers have decided to memorialize Premier Borden for the appointment of a government censor of all plays. If their request is granted a great deal of what is offensive to good taste and what is calculated to corrupt the morals of the rising generation will disappear from the boards of the cheap theaters in the larger cities of the country. Such an appointment would relieve the police from a duty which in the case of Toronto, it would seem has been indifferently performed.

WILSON ON RECIPROCITY

Governor Wilson may be a theorist, a political idealist, but he is practical enough to recognize the superiority of economic and social conditions in this country as compared with those in the nation in which he is struggling for the office of chief magistrate. He has on several notable occasions upheld the institutions of Canada as worthy of imitation.

At New Haven the other day, speaking on Reciprocity, he said that the arguments against the Pact used in Canada before the last general election were unanswerable. He could not blame the people of this country for refusing to merge their interests with those of the United States when the latter country is so far behind its neighbor in everything that tends to make a nation healthy and prosperous.

Candidate Wilson may not make many friends among his own people by this latest declaration but it will tend to further boost his reputation as a man who has the courage of his convictions and who is not afraid to say just what he thinks. If the improbable happens and Mr. Wilson is elected president, Canada can congratulate itself on having for so influential a neighbor, a man who recognizes her importance as a nation and who will take her institutions as a model when he would improve the conditions of his own people.

MISS WYLIE'S PROGRAM

Miss Barbara Wylie, the English suffragette, who is at large in Canada is certainly frank and shows a happy disregard for anything in the nature of consequences. In fact she has forearmed the peace officers of the country by bravely forewarning them that if peaceful and constitutional methods fail to secure the franchise for women, then desperate measures will be resorted to.

The militant Miss Wylie, in a new country as she is, has a good deal to learn. She will find that riots are suppressed and mobs broken up by the Canadian police with a vigor and promptness that is perhaps unknown in England. If Miss Wylie ever finds it necessary to inaugurate a window smashing, hat crushing campaign in this country she may find herself at a loss to secure recruits and followers. The women of Canada are not subject as a rule to hysteria. It may be that the climate of the country is not conducive to that form of mania. At all events Canadian women are first of all law-abiding and are too sensible even to dream that any advance can be made in the cause by the employment of such methods as have resulted in the imprisonment of so many of their misguided sisters in England.

Thanks to her outspoken declaration, we all know just what to expect from Miss Wylie. We are justified in assuming that she is not above diverting the hatchet from its original purpose, smashing a window or demolishing the silk hat and other articles of attire of some unfortunate statesman. But if she does branch out into any such actions she may learn by bitter experience that while it is easy to find the way into a Canadian penal institution, it is a matter of some difficulty to find the way out again until the penalty has been paid in full.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Toronto World opened its leading editorial article last Saturday with another blast at the Review for this paper's attitude on the C.P.R. melon cutting, so called. The Review has no apology to offer for presenting both sides of a great public question, or for its assertion that it is unfair to assume, that the proposed increase of stock is to be regarded as a "melon" to be divided among the stockholders and is not to be devoted, as the company claims to the improvement and extension of the system.

If Mr. Arthur Hood really did say to a policeman, "to grass with your ordinance," he gave utterance to what must be regarded as the mildest form of profanity on record.

If Miss Barbara Wylie does interview Premier Whitney, she will encounter a statesman who cannot be influenced by threats of violence.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

A bright little publication is the latest edition of the Grand Trunk folder "Tourist Sleeping Cars between East and West," which has just been received from the press. Both by the aid of clear description and of striking illustrations there is brought home to the public how it is possible to travel second class today in a comfort—almost a luxury—of which the first class passenger, only a few years back had no conception. The tourist sleeping cars which is the raison d'etre of the publication are operated on the G. T. R.'s fast limited between Montreal and Chicago, which leaves the former place every Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 10.30 in the evening. Within the covers of this folder can be found in convenient form all the information that a prospective tourist traveller would be likely to require with regard to rates and accomodation.

A FAMOUS HOTEL CLOSED.

The Arlington, in Washington, Long a Political Headquarters.

The Arlington, Washington's most famous hotel, has closed its doors forever. The old structure is to be torn down, and a $5,000,000 hostelry will take its place.

For more than forty years the Arlington has entertained its scores of great men. For more than half that period it was the diplomatic headquarters of the capital, and until it closed it was the abiding place of the most noted people regardless of the new palatial hotels.

On the site of the main section of the present house formerly stood three stately mansions, writes the Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun. One was occupied by William L. Marcy, secretary of war under President Polk; another by Lewis Cass, secretary of state under Buchanan, and in the third dwelt Reverdy Johnson, the brilliant Marylander who was attorney general and minister to England. Next door is the old home of Charles Sumner and Senator Pomeroy. Close by is the old British legation. Here lived Sir Bulwer Lytton and his son, Lord Lytton, and here he wrote his celebrated poem "Lucile."

Between 1870 and President McKinley's time practically every president went from the Arlington to be inaugurated. The late Speaker Thomas B. Reed died at this hotel, as did Senator Mark Hanna; a former secretary of state, Walter Q. Gresham, and a former postmaster general, Henry C. Payne. Senator Root lived at the Arlington for years, as did Senator Aldrich.

For many years the Arlington was the center of diplomatic interest. Li Hung Chang stayed there with his suite of 300 Chinese valets, cooks and other attendants. During the Russo-Japanese war Prince Fushimi of Japan had a whole annex of the Arlington for the conference.

J. Pierpont Morgan never went anywhere else in Washington, and James J. Hill and Andrew Carnegie preferred the Arlington.

Joan, who had gone into the bungalow, tossed down a strip of white calico, in which old Telepasse was promptly wrapped, and he stood forth, resplendent and purified, withal he still spat and struggled from the soapsuds with which Noa Noah had gargled his throat.

The house boys were directed to fetch handcuffs, and, one by one, the Lunga runaways were hauled down out of their trees and made fast. Sheldon formed them in pairs and ran a steel chain through the links of the irons. Gogoomy was given a lecture for his seditious conduct and locked up for the afternoon. Then Sheldon rewarded the plantation hands with an afternoon's holiday, and when they had withdrawn from the compound permitted the Port Adams men to descend from the trees. And all afternoon he and Joan loafed in the cool of the veranda and watched them diving down and emptying their sunken canoes of the sand and rocks. It was twilight when they embarked and paddled away with a few broken paddles. A breeze had sprung up, and the Flibberty Gibbet had already sailed for Lunga to return the runaways.

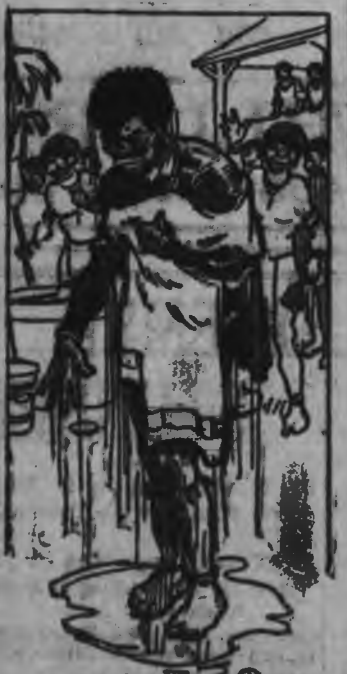
Sheldon was back in the plantation superintending the building of a bridge when the schooner Malakula ran in close and dropped anchor. Joan watched the taking in of sail and the swinging out of the boat with a sailor's interest, and herself met the two men who came ashore.

They seemed awkward and constrained in her presence, and she caught first one and then the other looking at her with secret curiosity. She felt that they were weighing her, appraising her, and for the first time the anomalous position she occupied on Berande came sharply home to her. On the other hand, they puzzled her.

The elder one, Morgan, was a huge man, bronzed and mustached, with a deep bass voice and an almost guttural speech, and the other, Raff, was slight and effeminate, with nervous hands and watery washed out gray eyes.

She watched Sheldon closely when he arrived and divined that he was not particularly delighted to see them. But see them he must, and so pressing was the need that he led the two men into the stuffy office. Later in the afternoon she asked Lalaperu where they had gone.

"My word," quoth Lalaperu, "plenty walk about, plenty look 'm. Look 'm tree; look 'm ground belong tree; look 'm all fella bridge; look 'm copra house; look 'm grass land; look 'm river; look 'm whaleboat—my word, plenty big fella look 'm too much."



HE STOOD FORTH RESPLENDENT AND PURIFIED.

"What fella man them two fella?" she queried.

"Big fella master along white man," was the extent of his description.

But Joan decided that they were men of importance in the Solomons and that their examination of the plantation and of its accounts was of sinister significance.

At dinner no word was dropped that gave a hint of their errand. The conversation was on general topics, but Joan could not help noticing the troubled, absent expression that occasionally came into Sheldon's eyes. After coffee she left them, and at midnight, from across the compound, she could hear the low murmur of their voices and see glowing the fiery ends of their cigars. Up early herself, she found they had already departed on another tramp over the plantation.

"What you think?" she asked Viburi.

"Sheldon master he go along finish short time little bit," was the answer.

"What do you think?" she asked Orsiri.

"Sheldon master big fella walk about along Sydney. Yes, me t'ink so. He finish along Berande."

"What name?" she asked lightly when Sheldon sat down to dinner.

He looked at her and smiled, but it was a very wan and wistful smile.

"My word," she went on. "One big fella talk. Sun he go down—talk-talk; sun he come up—talk-talk; all the time talk-talk. What name that fella talk-talk?"

"Oh, nothing much." He shrugged his shoulders. "They were trying to buy Berande, that was all."

"Don't let us fence about it," she urged. "Let it be straight talk between us. You're in trouble. I'm not a fool. Tell me. Besides, I may be able to help, to—to suggest something."

In the pause that followed he seemed to debate, not so much whether he would tell her, as how to begin to tell her.

"I'm American, you see," she persisted, "and our American heritage is a large parcel of business sense. I don't like it myself, but I know I've got it—at least more than you have. Let us talk it over and find a way out. How much do you owe?"

"A thousand pounds and a few trifles over—small bills, you know. Then, too, thirty of the boys finish their time next week and their balances will average £10 each. But what is the need of bothering your head with it? Really, you know"—

"What is Berande worth—right now?"

"Whatever Morgan and Raff are willing to pay for it." A glance at her hurt expression decided him. "Hughie and I have sunk £8,000 in it and our time. It is a good property and worth more than that. But it has three years to run before its returns begin to come in. That is why Hughie and I engaged in trading and recruiting. The Jessie and our stations came very near to paying the running expenses of Berande."

"And Morgan and Raff offered you what?"

"A thousand pounds clear after paying all bills."

"The thieves!" she cried. "How much do you need to carry on Berande for three years?" Joan hurried on.

"Two hundred boys at £6 a year means £3,600—that's the main item."

"My, how cheap labor does mount up! Thirty-six hundred pounds, etc., etc., just for a lot of cannibals! Yet the place is good security. You could go down to Sydney and raise the money."

He shook his head.

"You can't get them to look at plantations down there. They've been taken in too often. But I do hate to give the place up—more for Hughie's sake, I swear, than my own. He was bound up in it. We were running slowly behind, but with the Jessie we hoped to muddle through in some fashion."

"You were muddlers, the pair of you, without doubt. But you needn't sell to Morgan and Raff. I shall go down to Sydney on the next steamer, and I'll come back in a secondhand schooner. I should be able to buy one for $5,000 or $6,000"—

He held up his hand in protest, but she waived it aside.

"I may manage to freight a cargo back as well. At any rate, the schooner will take over the Jessie's business. I'm going to become a partner in Berande to the extent of my bag of sovereigns—I've got over fifteen hundred of them, you know. We'll draw up an agreement right now—that is, with your permission, and I know you won't refuse it."

He looked at her with good natured amusement.

"You know I sailed here all the way from Tahiti in order to become a planter," she insisted. "You know what my plans were. Now I've changed them, that's all. I'd rather be a part owner of Berande and get my returns in three years than break ground on Pari-Sulay and wait seven years."

"And this—er—this schooner"— Sheldon changed his mind and stopped.

"Yes, go on."

"You won't be angry?" he queried.

"No, not this is business. Go on."

"You—er—you would run her yourself? Be the captain, in short, and go recruiting on Malaita?"

"Certainly. We would save the cost of a skipper. Under an agreement you would be credited with a manager's salary and I with a captain's. It's quite simple. Besides, if you won't let me be your partner I shall buy Pari-Sulay, get a much smaller vessel and run her myself. So what is the difference?"

"The difference? Why, all the difference in the world. In the case of Pari-Sulay you would be on an independent venture. You could turn cannibal for all I could interfere in the matter. But on Berande you would be my partner, and then I would be responsible. And of course I couldn't permit you, as my partner, to be skipper of a recruiter. I tell you, the thing is what I would not permit any sister or wife of mine"—

"But I'm not going to be your wife, thank goodness—only your partner."

"Besides, it's all ridiculous," he held on steadily. "Think of the situation. A man and a woman, both young, partners on an isolated plantation. Why, the only practical way out would be that I'd have to marry you"—

Woman's World

A Possible Chatelaine of the White House.

MRS. WOODROW WILSON AND DAUGHTERS.

Standing next to Mrs. Wilson, wife of the Democratic nominee for president, is her eldest daughter, Margaret. Immediately behind her sister is Miss Jessie, and at one side stands Miss Eleanor Wilson.]

If in the course of human events Woodrow Wilson, governor of New Jersey, should be duly elected president of the United States and inaugurated into office on March 4, 1913, social life at the White House would be in capable hands. The mistress of the White House would be a woman who is talented, sympathetic and always charming, and with her would be three daughters, each of whom has a definite vocation in life and peculiar fitness for doing at least one thing remarkably well. The eldest, Miss Margaret Woodrow Wilson, is twenty-six years old, while Miss Jessie Woodrow Wilson is only a year younger, making her three years older than Miss Eleanor Randolph Wilson, who was born twenty-two years ago at Middletown, Conn., when her father was a professor at Wesleyan university.

The principles of education which Woodrow Wilson advocated while president of Princeton university were put into practice in his own family. None of the girls went to school until after ten years old. The natural inclinations of each were allowed to develop to the full extent, and the parents made almost unfelt their guiding hands. A German governess gave them instruction in French and German, and today all three young women are very proficient in both languages. They fitted for college at a private school in Princeton.

Miss Margaret entered the Woman's college at Baltimore in the class of 1907. At the completion of her sophomore year she discovered that she had a soprano voice of great possibilities, and, acting under advisement, she left college for musical training.

The most serious of the trio is Miss Jessie Woodrow Wilson, much of whose time is given to educational, philanthropic and religious work. She is a member of the national board of the Young Women's Christian association and is prominently identified with the educational branch. She was an honor member in the class of 1908 of the Woman's college at Baltimore, gaining the golden key of Phi Beta Kappa.

Miss Eleanor Wilson, known as Nell in the family circle and among her intimate friends, inherited her mother's artistic ability and has already made quite a reputation for herself by her productions. She is not a college graduate, having gained her education in a private school at Princeton and in St. Mary's school at Raleigh, N. C. Much of her artistic training was received at the Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia.

The Confession of a Heroine.

"And you didn't promise 'to obey' in the marriage service?"

"No, Susie, I didn't."

"That was brave."

"Yes, but honest, Susie, I'd sooner have said it than lose him."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Routing Ennui.

Bliffkins and his wife live in one of those fashionable, childless apartment houses. The visiting friend speaks.

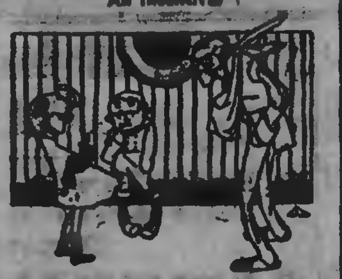
"Say, what became of that pretty bull terrier you used to have around to keep Mrs. Bliffkins company during the day?"

"The management wouldn't stand for it, so we gave him away. We ventured a canary, but they kicked on that. I suggested some goldfish, but Mrs. Bliffkins said they reminded her of swimming snakes."

"How did you finally agree?"

"Excellently! I bought her one of those Mexican jumping beans. It's as cute as it can be. Say, Clara, get our little Pedro and make him do some of his stunts."—St. Louis Republic.

An Incentive.



Father—Children, you'll have to be very good now, for I've broken my right arm and cannot thrash you for about a month.—Satire.

Daily In Dismay.

Dorothy—Mother, when I get married shall I have a husband like papa?

Mother—Certainly, my dear.

Dorothy—And if I stay single shall I be an old maid like Aunt Anna?

Mother—I think you will.

WHILE every man, whether he works for others or for himself, should carry a LIFE INSURANCE POLICY. There is especial need of this on the part of the man who is IN BUSINESS FOR HIMSELF. In the case of such a one's death the proceeds of a policy may mean not merely the usual financial protection for his dependents—they may be the means of saving a profitable business from disruption and a family from serious loss. Every enterprising business man occasionally contracts obligations which he cannot immediately pay, but which, if he retains his health and strength, he manages to cancel in course of time. Sometimes, however, death prevents the payment of business debts that were fully warranted by the outlook when they were incurred. To compel payment of these debts out of the policy-holder's regular estate might greatly embarass his family. But if the head of the firm is insured for an adequate sum, the pressing indebtedness may be met, the business saved, without embarassing the family, and either carried on successfully or sold to good advantage.

On his own account also, a business man should be eager to insure his life for as much as he can conveniently pay premiums on. The business man's credit is always improved by the fact that he has had his life well insured. A Life Insurance Policy, therefore, is a good asset and should be considered indispensable by any one who is conducting a business of his own.

Remember that the late Cyrus W. Field was said to be worth at one time $20,000,000, yet he did not leave a dollar to his family, except his Life Insurance.

Life Insurance is the one asset that never deteriorates at death.

The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada will give you the protection you need. Call, phone or write them—

Motor Bandits In Chicago.

Chicago, Sept. 30.—Four restaurants were raided in quick succession by four automobile bandits Saturday.

The robberies were the climax of a thrilling night's campaign by the robbers in northern Indiana, where a score of people were held up. One was robbed of $800.

After this the quartette raced their automobile across the state line and resumed depredations in Chicago and its suburbs.

Assistant Chief of Police Schuettler detailed a squad of motorcycle police men to attempt to pursue the gang.

NO USE IN DISCUSSING LOCAL OPTION FURTHER

Mr. Burnham Says the Question Should be Left for the People to Decide at the Next Election for the Provincial Legislature.

Mr. Burnham says that he is frequently asked the question:

"Do you mind stating whether you are in favor of submitting the Temperance question (that is Local Option) to a vote of the people next January, as suggested by some, or of letting it go to the people when they go to the polls at the next election for the legislature?"

His reply is: "I do not mind stating my opinion. I should say that it was necessary and not a matter of option at all, to leave it to Sir James and Mr. Rowell at the next election. Their new policies supersede, or will supersede local option altogether, and it would therefore be useless to bring it in under these circumstances and just as useless to defeat it.

"The result of continued agitation has been that Mr. Rowell has suggested something new and Sir James has countered with something else. If local option had been pushed by both leaders it would have been quite different to giving it a black eye by proposing something else. Frankly, therefore, I cannot see the use of discussing local option further."

MAGISTRATE SAYS TRAFFIC BY-LAW MUST BE ENFORCED

Safety and Comfort of Pedestrians Depends on the Proper Enforcement.

Magistrate Dumble intends to assist, in as much as lies within his jurisdiction, the enforcement of the recently framed traffic by-law. In dismissing the case on Saturday in which Mr. Arthur Head was charged with a breach of the by-law, he intimated that as the by-law was framed for the express purpose of regulating traffic, it must be enforced at all costs. Upon the carrying out of the by-law depended the safety and comfort of pedestrians and the general regulation of traffic.

"It is and will be the duty of every one to abide by, and obey the by-law," said His Worship when addressing the defendant, "and instead of you receiving the instructions of the officer courteously, you defied him. You were in a state of excitement at the time, I am quite sure. But the by-law is a necessary one and the constables must be obeyed."

CAME DOWN WRONG SIDE.

The evidence of P. C. Sills was to the effect that he and P. C. Bullied saw Mr. Head driving down George street on the east side, between Hunter and Simcoe, finally drawing up on the same side, in front of the Dominion Bank. Constable Sills asked him why he came down on the wrong side, and told him that a by-law had been passed. The officer declared that Mr. Head said "To grass with your by-law; what do they think we are? I'll travel on any side of the road I like." He got quite angry, said P. C. Sills, although I told him there was no use getting mad about it, and that it would be wise for him to comply with the by-law.

Mr. Head, so the officer said again replied that he would drive on any side of the road he liked.

"I then asked his name," said the constable, "and he refused to tell me. P. C. Bullied and I laid hold of him and took him to the police station, the man struggling and resisting all the way. It took us five minutes in the station to secure his name and we then let him go."

Constable Bullied corroborated P. C. Sills' story.

Mr. Head was asked to give his version of the affair.

Before being sworn he remarked that the evidence given was the worst bit of false swearing he had ever listened to. He was politely requested to never mind that; but to proceed with his narrative.

A SKITTISH NAG.

Mr. Head stated that he was pretty sure he did not come down the east side of the street, although he might have. His horse was a particularly skittish one and a hard one to drive. On being closely questioned he finally declared on his oath that he did not drive on the east side of the road. When the officers came up to him, he said that he made a move to tie his horse, but was prevented. He affirmed that he did not know about the by-law. The constables, he alleged, took hold of him and in doing so pinched his arm, and as proof he whipped off his coat and displayed a small darkened spot upon the fleshy part of his arm. Mr. Head also swore that he was not asked his name until he was in the police station, where P. C. McGinty identified him.

Mr. Head had to be requested to confine himself to answering just "yes" or "no" to the various questions he was asked, as he displayed a tendency to talk too fast.

Magistrate Dumble censured Mr. Head for not giving the constable his name when requested.

"You are bound to give a constable your name when asked," he said, "and in this case you would have been wise to do so."

Werba and Luescher's dainty operatic success, "The Spring Maid," announced for one performance at the Grand, on Thursday, Oct. 3, has broken all records for popularity during the past two seasons. The company to be seen here is the same star organization with Gene Luneska, the prima donna who scored so pronounced a triumph as the saucy Princess since her first performance in New York.

KEEP PETERBORO ON THE (Annual Inspection) MAP AS A CLEAN CITY

Fire Chief Howard commences tomorrow his annual inspection of the wholesale and retail business establishments of the city, the schools, churches, public halls and hotels.

The report on this inspection means much to the merchants and the city at large as regards fire insurance rates and merchants and others interested should not fail to recognize, the importance of having their premises free from combustible rubbish and other contributory causes of fire.

A clean town boosts itself, and in these days of competition a black mark does irreparable damage.

The Chief will start at the north end of George street, and work south, before taking up the cross streets and this inspection which will take the greater part of the balance of this year, will be continued every Tuesday afternoon.

It is interesting to note that the damage this year from 92 fires is only $9,800. In the opinion of the Fire Chief this will be a record year for Peterborough. Not one dollar of this amount was due to carelessness of merchants, as regards rubbish about their premises.

Lightning was responsible for damage to the extent of $7,000.

A peach was found in the orchard of Mr. James Marlow, Grimsby east measuring eleven and a half inches in circumference and weighing 13 ounces.

OMEMEE STUNNED

By Terrible Tragedy in Which Five Persons Were Drowned

Nine Pound Lunge Was Responsible for Overturning of Boat

Special to the Review.

Omemee, Sept. 30— Pigeon River exacted a sad toll on Saturday afternoon when the lives of five persons were taken, Mr. Wm. McCaffery, of Toronto, his wife, his two children and his mother were down the river in a canoe, fishing, when, it is supposed, a catch was made and in the efforts to capture the fish, the boat was overturned, and all were precipitated into the water and met their death. This is supposed to have occurred about 3 p.m., and on the failure of the party to return at dark, a boat went down the river to ascertain the cause, and about 11 p.m., another party of six went down when the first boat had not reported. The empty canoe was discovered and not far distant from it four of the bodies were recovered and brougth to town. The fifth was not located till Sunday forenoon. Speculating on the circumstances revealed it is supposed that Mr. McCaffery made heroic attempts to save the lives of the party but was handicapped by the trolling lines and hooks being wrapped about his legs. It appears the party had a number of lines out for fish and one nine pound lunge was still a captive. The body of Mrs. McCaffery was found on the surface, not far from the place where the accident occurred. Mr. McCaffery's watch stopped about 10 minutes to 3, and it is thought the accident occurred about that time. Mr. Charles McCaffery, father of the young man and husband of Mrs. McCaffery, sr., who were drowned, is almost insane with grief, as are also many of his children, who arrived on Sunday from Toronto and other points. Our whole populace is plunged in gloom over so sudden and Titanic a tragedy. Mr. Wm. McCaffery was to leave for the West on Monday. The children were a boy about 10 and a girl, 12 years of age, and good swimmers.

Woe is written on the visages of all our citizens, whose hearts go out in sympathy to the grief stricken friends.

FAMOUS EVANGELIST AND GOSPEL SINGER ARE COMING

Mr. Albany R. Smith, son of the evangelist, Gipsy Smith, will enter Crozer Theological Seminary this fall to prepare himself for the ministry. Mr. Smith is himself a successful evangelist, both as a speaker and singer. He was associated for some tim as soloist with Rev. Harry Taylor. During the past season he was with Herbert Booth, son of the late General Booth, of the Salvation Army, and also conducted successful services himself. He has been engaged in tent work this summer under the Indiana Evangelistic Conference. Mr. Smith was the singer who accompanied Mr. Stair at the meetings in Central Methodist church, Toronto, under the direction of Evangelist J. W. Chapman, a year or so ago.

It will be of interest to the public of Peterborough to know that the Rev. Harry Taylor, the famous evangelist referred to in the above clipping taken from the "Canadian Baptist," will open a series of special services in the Park street Baptist church in December, and will be assisted by Mr. Hatch, the well known gospel singer.

"THE LIGHT ETERNAL" GORGEOUSLY STAGED

All the sweet simplicity of spirit characteristic of the early professors of the Christian faith is deftly interwoven with the powerful dramatic action of "The Light Eternal," the big spectacular religious drama to be offered at the Grand theatre, Friday and Saturday October 4 and 5. This play comes to local theatregoers as the one pretentious and really meritorious offering of the season. It is a gorgeously produced romance of the fourth century and is presented by an exceptionally large and capable company.

PRE-NUPTIAL PRESENTATION

A very informal but charming event took place at the Conservatory of Music on Saturday afternoon in honor of Miss Julia Choate, the popular young violiniste, whose wedding is announced to take place on Oct. 8 She was presented with a handsome grandfather's clock, as a joint gift from her pupils, the Conservatory orchestra and the teaching faculty.

Miss Choate has always been a popular and valued member of the staff, besides being a great favorite with her large class of pupils. Her withdrawal will be keenly felt, as her talents as violin instructress have always been in evidence. She has been connected with the Conservatory both as pupil and instructor for the past ten or eleven years.

Miss Choate was much affected by the unmistakable evidences of the esteem with which she was regarded.

The evening was concluded by an enjoyable and informal little dance by the orchestra members and other friends of Miss Choate, finishing with the hearty singing of "For Auld Lang Syne."

John Doig was ordered in Police Court, to pay a fine of $12.60 for depositing night soil on a vacant lot, and being financially embarrassed he goes to jail for thirty days, as the alternative

Doig was found guilty of depositing matter on a vacant lot, south of Smith street on the east side of the river.

The Magistrate stated that as these men receive good pay for their work, and that the town provides a place for depositing such material, he intended dealing severely with scavengers who are depositing night soil anywhere but in the place provided.

The cases of two fruit dealers who are required to secure proper garbage receptacles was again enlarged for one week.

BOUNDARY ROAD REPAIR

Township Councils Confer with City Council as to the Work

Members of the councils from the townships adjoining Peterborough met the City Council on Saturday afternoon with the object of arriving at a definite and mutually satisfactory arrangement for the maintenance and up-keep of the boundary roads.

The statutory agreement at the present time is that the township councils look after the building of good roads, the city bearing one half of the expense incurred thereby.

Ratepayers living on the city side have been asking for the improvement of the roads in various townships and the meeting was to arrange for such work in the future.

Several township councils contended that the townships had done more already than the city had in the matter.

It was also pointed out that an appropriation must be made to cover the estimated cost of such road-work.

Ald. Gillespie thought that a favorable plan would be to have a member from each of the township councils go over the boundary roads in each township with the city council or a committee from the council.

It was finally moved that the various township councils be asked to take up the matter and after they have come to a decision to meet the city council again and report on their decisions.

The existing arrangement has not received much attention in some townships. In Monaghan, however, Reeve Howden informed the gathering, the plan of having the township do the work, and the city assume half the expenditure, had worked out splendidly and with general satisfaction.

Some of the township councillors present were Messrs. Porter and Miller, reeve and deputy reeve of Otonabee; Deyell and Laurie; Messrs. Howden and Foster of Monaghan; Jory and Kennedy of Douro; J. H. Garbutt and J. W Kelly, of Smith, and F. McKee, Selwyn; W. Davis, Young's Point; F. Cann, Smith, and B. Telford of Smith. Mayor Bradburn presided at the meeting.

PARLIAMENT AT ST. JAMES CHURCH

Brotherhood have Aranged Their Program for the Season

At a meeting held at the home of Rev. J. N. Clarry, the Brotherhood of St James' church arranged their program for the coming season. This program will it is believed, be most interesting.

The Brotherhood have formed a Men's Parliament, to educate and interest and encourage public speaking in men who are thinking men. Measures calculated to benefit and uplift the country and community will be discussed. As closely as possible this parliament will be conducted on lines similar to the Ottawa Parliament, and the first session will be held at St. James' church on Friday night at eight o'clock. All men will be cordially welcomed, not only to attend the meetings, but also to become a member of Parliament.

STAR PITCHERS IN WORLD'S SERIES RELY CHIEFLY ON SPEED

Photographed by [illegible]

JEFF TESREAU. JOE WOOD.

In big Jeff Tesreau and Joe Wood lie the respective hopes of the National and American League fans in the world's series. Both are "smoke" pitchers.

Tesreau is the pitching salvation of the Giants. When Marquard stumbled and Mathewson was overworked until he lost his effectiveness, McGraw called upon the "Ozark Wonder and the big fellow responded. He kept the team in first place when the Cubs challenged, giving Marquard and Matty opportunity to rest.

"Smoky Joe" Wood is the best of American League pitchers. He has accumulated a string of successive victories, such as Marquard and Walter Johnson ran up earlier. In the case of the last named pair, the long run had its effect, both going badly after their streak was broken.

Giant partisans believe Wood will go to pieces from nervous strain as the result of his wonderful string of wins, but Wood insists he is too phlegmatic to be worried by so insignificant a thing as a couple of dozen victories in a row.

WHEN PHYLLIS DRIVES.

When Phyllis drives her motorcar
And down the street we set the pace
There's not a monarch, earl or king
With whom I would exchange my place.
I long to take her hand in mine
And tell her of the love I feel,
But, oh, her thoughts are far from me,
And both her hands are on the wheel.

Her talk is all of chain and gears,
Of sprockets, rims and springs,
Of nonskid tires and inner tubes,
Of carburetors and such things,
And when I'd take her hand in mine
And tell of her of the love I feel
She says: "You really must look out
And keep your hands, please, off the wheel."

It surely is a cruel fate
To love a girl who knows so much,
Who holds the wheel, likewise your heart,
Beneath her lightest finger touch,
For when you'd take her hand in yours
And tell her of the love you feel
She says, "You really must take care
And keep your hands, please, off the wheel."

Some day I hope a tire will burst,
Blow out or come right off the car,
And that beside the road we'll stop
Out in the country, very far,
And then I'll take her hand in mine
And tell of her of the love I feel
When we are sitting there quite still
And both her hands are off the wheel.

THE MOTOR DERBY.

Tractors Are Making Their Way in Rural Canada.

Traction farming is always of keen interest to the young man. Nothing on the farm will hold his attention longer than the rigging up of any machinery whereby labor can be saved nad his ow ningenuity vindicated. The production of the wheat fields of Western Canada would be at present impossible without a tractor. It is also invading the live stock farmer's domain, and steam and gasoline, as well as kerosene and electricity, are to play very important parts in the evolution of Canadian farming says Eliud Kester in The Farmers' Magazine.

When the first agricultural motor contest was held in Winnipeg five years ago there were not three hundred gas tractors employed on farms of the Canadian West. The fifth annual meet which has just closed at Winnipeg, the great distributing centre of the West, sees the number of tractors magnificently increased. It is estimated that there are over four thousand gas tractors and about five thousand steam tractors employed by Canadian farmers. The year 1911 was considered to be a big year on engine sales but this year has already proved to be a big one, and Winnipeg, where the "Motor Derby" is held is the great gateway of this extensive and great field of manufacturing activity.

Large crowds were present each day of the contest. The farmers were so eager to inspect the work of the various engines in the plowing contests that they journeyed out to the 200 acre tract nine miles west of Winnipeg even on a rainy day when all operations had to be called off. The first part of the motor competition which included all the brake contests of the numerous engines, steam and gasoline, took place on the Exhibition grounds during the first week of the fair. This exhibition work only proved a good feeder for the real agricultural contests that were to take place the following week at Bergen.

Each of the three divisions in the competition, the brake contest, the engine contest and the plowing contest, allowed entries by three classes of machines. The engines were divided into classes determined by their power.

The contest for the engines, each having plows, required them to make six miles. The machine is judged on the amount of power used, the fuel consumed and the general endurance displayed. While the field was rather stony and of a heavy soil, conditions were more favorable for the heavy engines than was the tract that was chosen last year for the test where so many steam tractors almost got lost in the mud. Perhaps it was not a bad matter of policy for the directors of this competition to secure a good, hard clay for the work. It must have occasioned considerable chagrin to the manufacturers of the heavy engines in any contest where a little gasoline tractor might have the opportunity of pulling them out of the hole.

The regulations for the competition of plows were similar to those for engines. They could be drawn by any engine and were judged according to the amount of power that was required to pull them.

Facilities Improve.

A recent report from the Department of Trade and Commerce states that the capacity of the grain elevators in the west for 1911-12 is 89,514,900 bushels, which is an increase of about five millions over the preceding year. In Manitoba the storage capacity is 21,833,800 bushels; in Saskatchewan, 36,465,000; in Alberta, 8,764,500. Ontario milling elevators have a capacity of 1,760,000 bushels; terminal elevators in the same province will accommodate 26,700,400 bushels, while the eastern transfer elevators have a capacity of 20,835,00. The grand total shows [illegible] stations with a total capacity of 105,466,100 bushels.

The percentage of shipments from Fort William and Port Arthur terminals to American ports has been steadily increasing during the past four or five years. It is considered that the milling in bond transit privilege given by the States will account to a considerable extent for the increase during the past two years, also the lower freight rates via United States ports to the seaboard which prevailed on occasions during the year. Canadian wheat exports to Great Britain and other countries show a decline against the figures of the previous 12 months.

"Commercial Candour."

In common with many other Canadian cities, Montreal is experiencing decided activity in real estate transactions, and its suburbs are "decorated" with a great many real estate signs.

Several of those signs have been put up in a hurry, and some of them have been lettered by Frenchmen. Probably both of these circumstances had something to do with the burlesquing of one of the signs. At any rate, one of the agents in charge of a certain suburban subdivision got a shock a few days ago while showing a prospective purchaser over the property.

"That's a great sign," said the p.p.

"Why?" asked the agent.

"Read it," was the answer.

The agent read it, and was horrified to find that it contained a line in big type stating that his firm were the "SOLD AGENTS."—Canadian Courier.

U. S. Catholics in West.

So great has been the migration of United States farmers to western Canada during the past few years, that the Roman Catholic Church in the United States, finding that the movement included many of its members and communicants, has formed an association for the purpose of aiding and directing the settlers to a section where they could be in touch with communities of their own faith. Negotiations were entered into with a land company, and the association acquired a large acreage, which is now known as St. Peter's colony, in the Quill Plains district of Saskatchewan. A monastery was established, and there is now a considerable Catholic population.

CRAVATH WINS

COPYRIGHT 1912 BY THE NORTH AMERICAN CO

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS STORIES

CRAVATH is an athletic young fellow in search of thrills. His quest for the coin leads him to a gilded café, where he can most readily get rid of his sole remaining cash. Luck favors, however, and he meets his Boswell, the narrator of his subsequent adventures, in the person of a good-natured promoter of athletic sports named Scanlon. It so happens that the latter is in the dumps. His "white hope," a mammoth specimen of stonemason that he had matched to fight the "Gravedigger" at the Pelican Athletic Club, has decided not to risk having his beauty spoiled in the ring. The purse is $1000, and as that is just the amount Cravath needs, he agrees to be a "ringer." It seems that the thousand is the price of a certain dueling pistol belonging to a Miss Betterton, then in Europe, with whom Cravath is in love. When he recovers it, he gets the girl. She wants the pistol because it is her sole and only claim to aristocratic lineage. One of her ancestors used it when he seconded a gentleman in a duel, so it is proof positive that the ancestor was a gentleman.

When Cravath enters the ring, he goes after the thousand as rapidly as possible—in the first place, because he needs the money, and in the second, because he is not in trim to stand a long fight. The "Gravedigger" goes down, and the "white hope's" substitute walks away with the coin.

Next day the papers are full of the sensation—an aristocratic amateur has entered the professional ranks and pounded the other fellow for what there is in it. Most scandalized of all are "Old Blaylow" and his son, who are intent upon taking Miss Betterton and her money into their family. Blaylow calls upon Cravath at his suburban home, to induce him to give up his claims to the young woman, but without avail. In the afternoon, however, Cravath is obliged to call up Scanlon and impart the information that the thousand has been stolen. Suspicion, of course, attaches to Blaylow. In the night the two repair to Blaylow's house, where the money is supposed to be hidden in a Flemish cabinet. Unfortunately, another has taken up the quest before them, and he gets away with the money. Not to be outdone, they pursue the thief and rob him, regaining the missing money.

III.—The Adventure of Crosby's June

I HAD not yet arisen when Charlie Patterson came in. Charlie was one of the old sort, a sport to his fingertips and as honest as the sun. But he had fallen upon evil days. Time was when he owned a string of racers, and his appearance in a betting ring was a signal for the weak-kneed to take heart of grace; but now he was brought to the pass that necessitated occasional small loans from old and trusted friends. Hence the earliness of the call.

Charlie sat down after a brief statement of his case and took the nip which his system had come to require of a morning.

"That stuff," said he, as he clicked his tongue, "is as some honest man made it; the only foreign thing it holds is the char from inside the cask." He set down the glass and sighed regretfully. "Sometimes," he continued, "I think it's the only thing that has retained its quality with the passing of the years."

"Elder brother," said I, as I struggled with a collar before the mirror, "the rosy time of youth is passed with you; the days when you had means and the zest that made it seem twice as much naturally seem the better."

He nodded his head and folded his old hands.

"I suppose you are right," said he. "It is I, and not the times, that's at fault, in the main. But not altogether. When I was in my prime we had better sports, more generous, fairer; men who loved the track, its people, its brave-hearted runners. But the generation now at the helm seldom see a racetrack; they campaign from rooms one flight up and take their ventures in about the same spirit that a pawnbroker takes his."

"I have encountered them," said I. "A daring set, indeed; as reckless spirited and disregardful as so many mongrels harrying a sick kitten."

"The romance of all sports is dead," said Charlie; "even the very cleanest of them are so highly commercialized that they have lost their savor."

"I have no defense to offer," said I, surveying the collar with critical glance. "It is a count which I think any fairly fluent person could prove."

"In the flush times of the horse," said Charlie, reminiscently, "a man staked his money with some degree of sentiment. And even the most speculative gambler had eyes only on the man with whom he was dealing! But not so now. You are lucky these days, it would seem, if the man you bet with has not so placed his money that he'll have a claim on you even unto the third generation."

"Something has occurred," stated I. "I am confident that your mind would never have wandered into this channel of its own accord."

Charlie nodded.

"Last night," said he, "I dropped in at 'Gusty' Dalton's for a chop and a mug of old musty ale. And Joe Clark was there, talking about his horses, as usual, and there was a group of young fellows joshing him about them. That is, I thought they were all joshing; but later I centered upon one of them, and somehow I couldn't shake off the idea that he meant business."

"Huh!" said I, incredulously, "what manner of profit could he hope for from old Joe Clark?"

"That's the very question that arose in my mind," said Charlie. "The old lad hasn't a hundred dollars in the world—his only property is his horses, and they, poor, stiff old brutes, are but a source of expense."

"It must have been years ago that they ran their last races," said I. "And if Joe wasn't the worst kind of a ninny he'd have turned them over to the glue factory long ago."

Charlie shook his head.

"It's not all sentiment," said he. "Joe believes they can run as well today as ever. All they need is a little conditioning, he says. And that's the point that the youngsters were joshing him on. But, for the most part, they were light and easy about it, as though they respected the old man's feelings. But this one young fellow that I've mentioned was different. His remarks were sarcastic and had a sting in them that finally made Joe mad and caused his near-sighted old eyes to snap. Then, suddenly, before I had time to say a word, the backing of their opinions with money came up, and Joe was on with a big bet, while the other fellow was laughing and looking very well pleased.

"I took Joe aside," proceeded Charlie, "and began to overhaul the situation. This was a delicate thing to do, for you know how touchy he is on the subject of bets, for his greatest pride, outside his horses, is that he's never failed to make good. When I hinted that perhaps I could prevail on the other party to call the wager off, he flared up; and when I suggested that it would be asking a great deal of any one of his nags to be put against time at such short notice, he answered that they, one and all, had done the mile in somewhere about two minutes, and as their now doing it in three would take down the money, he felt sure of the result.

"Then," said Charlie, "I hinted with much care as to where he proposed getting the stake to put up, and he had a pat answer for that, too. It was, he said, never a matter of difficulty to capitalize a sure thing. He could get the money with ease.

"When they had all gone, I talked to 'Gusty' at the bar and expressed my feelings in the matter.

"'That young fellow,' says 'Gusty,' 'has a long head and a nice little game—if it works. You see, there is a fellow he wants to "get" for some reason. The fellow is a friend of old Joe's. Joe will be sure to go to the fellow for the money to make good, and he will lose it. What do you think of that?'

"And I said," proceeded Charlie, with some heat, "that I thought it was fringed with diabolism. The man who could put such a thing into play must be second cousin to a shark."

Now, all this had slipped my mind when Charlie finally left me, and I went out, strolling on the sunny sides of the streets, with never a thought of evil intent, until I met Cravath.

"How is it?" asked I, as I shook his hand.

"Old chap," replied he—and he wore the look of a man who faced doubt and strove to smile—"I really don't know how to answer that. Up to an hour ago I could have said 'great'; but an hour, as you know, works wonderful changes."

"More than once," said I, "a moment has altered the fortunes of heroes. But what is your particular occurrence?"

"I had a call," replied Cravath. "It was an old and valued friend—an ancient benefactor. He came to borrow the sum of $1000."

"He didn't get it, though," I stated, positively.

"I made no resistance," said Cravath. "And at this moment he is speeding away to the St. Felix with the money in his pocket, hunting some one who had wagered that exact sum with him."

I tottered, but managed to grasp him by the arm.

"It wasn't Joe Clark!" I denied.

"It was," said he, amazement in his face.

For a moment I could do nothing but stare; then I took him by both lapels and earnestly [illegible] him.

"You look like a man with some degree of intelligence," said I. "But the [illegible] appearance to be a [illegible]. What [illegible] indeed you [illegible] away a sum of [illegible] father's friend, he was my friend, and when a few moments ago I called him an ancient benefactor, I meant it in every sense of the word."

"Joe wanted [illegible] [illegible]

I drew in a long breath.

"Such things have leaped at me from the pages of books," I told him, "but never before has one approached in the form of an actual experience."

He smiled.

"Ah, well," said he, "after all, it's such which make life both sweet and exciting. Give me an instant of pure joy in preference to years of smug contentment. And, at the same time, my money is fairly safe; Joe is an old hand with horses, and he—"

"He is an infatuated old sentimentalist," stated I, with conviction. "His horses are stiffened with time and swollen with overfeeding; they can no more do a mile in three flat than I can."

"Hello!" exclaimed Cravath. "Hello! You seem pretty well up on the facts of this matter, too. How do you know that one of Joe's horses is to do three minutes?"

"I know a good deal more, maybe, than you think," said I. "Just come in here and I'll see if I can't turn a suspicion into a fact."

In a few moments I had "Gusty" Dalton on the telephone. He exchanged greetings with me when he learned who it was, for "Gusty" and I are old friends.

"Do you recall a bet Joe Clark made in your place last night?" I inquired.

"Perfectly," answered "Gusty"; "and I've just heard at this moment that Joe's put the money down and is on his way to Senderling's to get his nag ready. The trial is to be at 3 this afternoon."

"Perhaps," said I, "you know the other party on the bet."

"Oh, yes; a regular patron of mine. Son of a big gun in finance. Name's Blaylow."

This was all I wanted to hear, so I bid goodby to "Gusty," hung up and turned to Cravath.

"You," accused I, "have got yourself into a devil of a mess."

"What's wrong?" asked he.

Thereupon I related to him what Charlie Anderson told me earlier in the day. And when I had finished he drew in a long breath.

"Now, there is a deep-thinking, far-seeing rapscallion for you," said he.

"He and his father could not have been cognizant of each other's efforts," said I, "for the son did his planning while your money was safely locked away in the Flemish cabinet."

Cravath nodded and smiled.

"Apparently the entire house of Blaylow is aroused," said he. "But, then, victory is not always to the active and cunning. Old Joe's nags may be in better shape than is thought."

"Did you ever see them?" asked I.

"No," said he. "But I have heard that they once were—"

"Oh, once!" I waved a hand in a manner that expressed disdain. "That was ten years ago, maybe. But what are they today? Fat, short-winded old plugs, of the sort that old ladies can drive with safety. You stand a fine chance for your money!"

"Where does Joe keep these horses?" asked Cravath, after a pause.

"At Senderling's farm, just on the outskirts."

"Let's go out and look them over."

Accordingly we took an electric car, and in less than an hour were standing at Senderling's barn-door. An undersized negro, whom I immediately recognized as a former jockey known as Little Pete, met us with a wide grin.

"Howdy, gen'lmen," greeted he. "Come down to see de hoss racin'?"

"Has Mr. Clark been here?" I asked.

"Yes, suh," answered Little Pete. "Mistah Clark's out dah in de road wif dat po' old Post Boy hoss, trying to make him run."

Every tooth in his black head gleamed in appreciation of this rare piece of humor.

"Post Boy is not up to much as a runner, then?" said Cravath.

"Boss," Little Pete assured him, "Post Boy's j'ints done crack like rusty hinges when he try to move faster than a walk."

"Can any of the others do better?"

"De bes' of de lot," speculated Little Pete, "is de ol' mare Molly Blue. She's done got some ginger lef'; but Gawd bless yo', boss, she'd never do a mile in three."

We were still talking to Little Pete, when old Joe Clark and some stable boys came up with Post Boy. The latter was a gray gelding, showing his age in every way, and he was still panting from his exertions on the road.

"He's not in condition," said Joe to Little Pete. "It would take a little training to get him into shape."

"A lil' 'tention, boss, is what he needs," said the black jockey, rubbing his shining scalp. "Jes' a lil' 'tention, dat's all."

"[illegible]," said old Joe, "that it would be best for me to use Molly Blue." He paused and blinked about [illegible]. "What do you say, Pete? Think she could show them something, eh?" And he laughed with great satisfaction.

Then Cravath spoke to the old man, who mounted a pair of glasses upon his high nose and tried to make him out. But Cravath had to speak again before he recognized him. And then old Joe laughed again, as pleased as a boy.

"Come out to see the fun, have you?" he cried, clapping Cravath on the back. "Well, you'll not be disappointed. I'll show them that they can't get a rise out of me, for all their smart talk."

And while they were engaged Little Pete beckoned me into the barn.

"Dis gen'l'mun," stated he, solemnly, "is anybody to bet wif dat [illegible]. Dem [illegible] hosses can't run enough to keep [illegible] old beast credit. But as for running, a glance showed it to be out of the question.

"With the speed and uproar of a landslide, June tore down the stretch."

"Pete," said I, "the horse is a noble beast, but he is followed by a crew of abandoned villains."

"Da's right," agreed the darky. "Da's just right. Some mighty mean men make a living by de hoss."

We stood at the side of Molly Blue, the mare upon which Joe Clark depended to win. And as I gazed upon her fatness and her complacent, stall-fed air, I realized how fully a man can be deceived by his familiar possessions. But, also, as I studied her there came a thought with more tang to it; and as I continued to stand and look the idea grew and grew. Finally I turned to Little Pete.

"You rode for Joe Clark, didn't you?"

"Yes, suh," emphatically. "An' I can' say dat I nevah done wu'k fo' anybody dat treated me bettah."

"There are ways, other than work, of using a man," said I, "but old Joe knows nothing about them." Then I looked Little Pete over carefully from head to foot. "Maybe," I continued, "you would do him a good turn if you could?"

"Yess," said Little Pete, "jes' try me."

"All right," said I, "but keep mum."

"I am shut up tight," promised he.

"If I put a surprise up to you," asked I, "what would you do?"

"I conceals my feelings," stated he, "and I takes hold o' dat surprise at de place yo' points out."

"Right," said I. "Keep on [illegible] that frame of mind, and you will do [illegible]."

While the two outside were still talking, I had a [illegible] with a [illegible] in it; then I [illegible].

"Where are we going?" asked Cravath, as I directed him into the buggy.

"A small matter of business," [illegible]. "Joe will [illegible] you for a little [illegible]."

"Of course," cried Joe. "[illegible] in there for the trial. [illegible] them boys get the track [illegible] heavy, I know, but a little [illegible] enough for Molly Blue."

"There's an ancient optimist for you," said I to Cravath, as we drove along the dusty road. "He can't see anything but the bright side of things."

"I talked to him about the money," said Cravath, "but he only smiled and patted me on the shoulder. He looked so confoundedly funny and childish about the matter that I just couldn't tell him any of the disagreeable features."

"It's just as well," said I. "Joe's a good fellow, and perhaps we can rearrange his affairs in a way that will bring pleasure to him and save you from misfortune at the same time."

Cravath looked at me.

"You are but a man," declared he, "and it is not in the power of man to perform wonders."

"No wonder in this," said I; "it is merely a bit of thinking. A man requires no wonderful lamp or magic carpet with attendant genii in this day of intel- [illegible]

"May I inquire," said my friend, humbly, "as to the nature of your mental effort?"

"First," said I, and I drew in the horse until it came to a stand, "I would like an expression of opinion as to the moral status of this whole affair."

"You mean Joe's wager?"

"Of course."

"Well, on the part of young Blaylow, I think it a shabby piece of trickery."

"And considering it such," questioned I, "would you think it unfair to meet the trick with another of a more or less sharp nature?"

For a moment there was a pause, and then Cravath said:

"I think not. There is a saying that like cures like, also that we must fight fire with fire. If you've got any little thing up your sleeve that will lead to the discomfiture of Blaylow, produce it, and I am your sworn ally and friend."

"Good," said I, shaking the horse into a trot. "And now that we have that settled, we will proceed with the accomplishment of my purpose."

About six miles from Senderling's was a little white house surrounded by big green trees, and pottering about in the front yard was a man in blue overalls.

"Hello!" I called. He looked up and grinned at sight of me.

"Well, of all people," said he. "Get down, old sport, and come in."

I shook hands with him and tied the horse to the fence.

"We haven't much time, Crosby," I told him. "We're due at Senderling's in a very little while."

"Something on?" he inquired, shrewdly.

I nodded, digging at the sod of the front yard with the toe of my shoe.

"We've come over to have a look at June," said I.

Once more he grinned widely.

"Well," said he, "I don't see no harm in that."

We crossed the yard; Crosby opened a gate, and we entered a field where several horses were grazing. He whistled, and a gaunt old mare with a scrubby chestnut coat lifted her head and looked at him.

"Same Old June," said I.

"Not a bit changed," spoke Crosby. "Not in any way."

"I should think [illegible]," said I, as I looked at the mare [illegible]. Then turning to Cravath, I said, "What do you think of her?"

He looked at her uncouth head, at the shabby coat, the big knees and sprawling hoofs, and replied:

"She has the advantage of being a thing that requires no thought."

Crosby winked and seemed to enjoy this hugely. I said to him:

"If you have no objections, I would like to engage June for this afternoon."

Crosby considered.

"If it was anybody else," said he, "I'd refuse. But seeing that you've done me a favor more than once, old man, it'll be all right."

In a little while we were on our way back to Senderling's with old June hitched behind the buggy.

"This relic which we are towing," spoke Cravath finally, "is meant in some way to circumvent Blaylow, I take it?"

"She is," I replied.

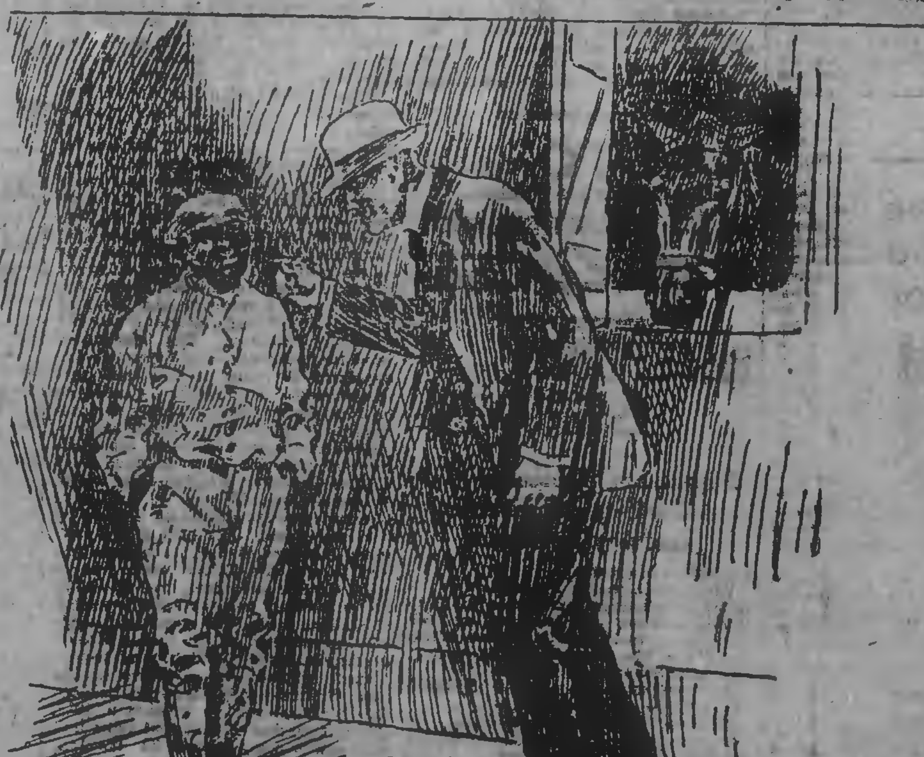
"I have been studying the situation with some closeness," said he, "but I fail to gather just what use you mean to make of her."

"Molly Blue, under the able direction of Little Pete, will disappear."

"Yes?"

"Crosby's June will take her place. Old Joe is so near-sighted that he'll never note the difference. And as for Blaylow, the probabilities are that he never saw either of the two nags in his life."

[illegible]



"If I put a surprise up to you, what would you do?"

taken, but I draw from your remarks that you [illegible] to have them run the remarkable-looking animal [illegible] there in place of Molly Blue."

"You are not mistaken," I told him. "June will do the running."

Cravath looked at me unhappily.

"I can see my money sprouting wings," stated he. "She is a beautiful defense to throw between a man and his enemies. It would be just as sensible in a general to grow a line of mushrooms to stop a cavalry charge."

"This horse," said I, "could run once upon a time."

"It must have been a long time ago," [illegible], taking another brief look at the ambling June. "Her best time was probably made before the [illegible]. Her pedigree, I suppose," with labored [illegible], "would show some noted Arab and Kentucky blood, I doubt not."

"If it were known, perhaps," returned I. "But the fact is that Crosby drove her in a cab until he [illegible] about a year ago, and her ancestry is more or less conjectural."

"A cab horse!" moaned Cravath, dismally. "Now I am indeed at the mercy of my foes."

When we reached a spot about a half mile from Senderling's I bade Cravath get down and take the object of his scorn in charge.

"In a very little while," I told him, "you will be relieved of her by one who will, perhaps, show more appreciation."

Then I drove to Senderling's, turned the buggy over to a hostler and held lengthy conversation with Little Pete.

"I got yo', boss," said he, when I had told him all. "But Mistah Clark is done goin' ovah to de track wif me, and I won't be able to fix it nohow."

"I'll attend to that," said I. "You ride on ahead. The horse I mentioned is behind the next bend; shift the saddle quickly and make for the track at once."

Then I found old Joe and insisted that he drive over with me in the buggy. When I got him into the vehicle, I discovered that the horse [illegible] and other attentions, which took some [illegible] drove along at a foot pace, diverting [illegible] mind with sundry anecdotes. In this way Little Pete, who had ridden ahead, was given [illegible] to do his work.

The track at Senderling's was a good half mile [illegible] in the great days of the sport had been [illegible] training-place. Blaylow, the stakeholder and [illegible] of others were already on hand, and [illegible] freakish-looking mare of Crosby's was already a [illegible] for their derisive sayings.

"Hello, Clark," called young Blaylow, a [illegible]-faced fellow, who gave promise of maturing [illegible] after the style of his father. "Do you expect [illegible] beast to give you a run for your thousand?"

Old Joe, having the plump Molly Blue in [illegible] and unable to make out the lines of Crosby's June, replied:

"She's just a bit heavy in flesh."

A roar went up at this.

"Ah, that's what you call it, is it?" cried Blaylow, his eyes upon the angular mare. "Different people have different notions about different things."

Cravath, who had arrived early, stood nearby and caught this saying.

"There are some things, however," said he, "about which all people would think the same."

Blaylow grinned at him.

"Hello, you're here, are you, old man? [illegible] you."

"In the course of things," said Cravath, "there are many unexpected occurrences. Perhaps [illegible] will not be the only one which will come to you today."

The sharp eyes of young Blaylow [illegible].

"I hope," said he, "you don't think that [illegible] skinful of bones out there is going to [illegible]."

"Wait and see," answered Cravath, with [illegible] air of confidence. Then he turned to me, and [illegible] voice said, "Has she really a chance in the [illegible]?"

"My boy," said I. "June was once a [illegible] any man's backing."

"Once!" said he. "As far as that goes, Molly [illegible] was once also a most excellent runner."

By this time all was about ready for the trial. Little Pete had warmed the old mare up [illegible] could see the fire in her eye, and her grotesque [illegible] thundered upon the turf. Several times [illegible] the line with a lumbering awkwardness that [illegible] the onlookers laugh. Old Joe turned a puzzled look upon me.

"I can't make her out very clearly, [illegible] how, Molly Blue acts rather strange."

"It's just skittishness," I told him [illegible] way as I could. "She'll get over that before the end of the first quarter."

There was another uncouth rush [illegible], and this time the mare was off. With a [illegible] gait, she thundered down the track, Little Pete sitting well forward and urging her on. With the dust rolling above her in clouds she passed the first quarter, swaying like a dromedary.

"A minute and twelve," chortled Blaylow. "Why, she couldn't do the time if she had [illegible]."

Still tearing along under the [illegible], Crosby's June crossed the half like a [illegible] on a badly ballasted road.

"Two minutes flat," laughed Blaylow. "[illegible] chance, eh? I told you," to old Joe, "[illegible] were underengined."

That the old mare had done the second quarter in twenty-four seconds less than the first caused [illegible] stare eagerly after her, watch in hand. [illegible] by the timekeepers, I [illegible].

"Two twenty-five," said I.

But Blaylow had turned [illegible].

"She's limbering up," [illegible]. "I always said that's all she needed."

With the speed and uproar of a landslide, June tore down the stretch; her thin old neck [illegible], her ill-shaped head pointed like a wedge [illegible] of the knotted, big-jointed legs [illegible] and wonderful; the [illegible] is believe[illegible].

"Two forty-five," called the timekeeper, [illegible] went under the wire; and [illegible] helplessly. When I had recovered, the [illegible] been paid over to old Joe, who in turn [illegible] $1000 of it to Cravath. And as the latter [illegible] notes into his pocket, he smiled at young Blaylow.

"Last night," said he, "it was your father who failed. Today it is you."

Blaylow nodded and grinned.

"I fancied that you were on when I saw [illegible]," said he. He buttoned up his coat, [illegible] his friends, who were already [illegible] mobile. "I [illegible] expected to make [illegible] honor of the family," he said, smiling [illegible]. "Sorry I failed; but, perhaps, better [illegible]."

The automobile had started away [illegible] and Little Pete had dashed away [illegible] place where he had left Molly Blue [illegible] and myself crowded into the buggy and [illegible] by another way.

The jockey was [illegible] the saddle from Molly Blue when Joe got down and went to her.

"I knew you could do it, old lady," he said, [illegible], as he patted her neck. "I knew [illegible] it." Then he turned [illegible] to us [illegible]. "And, boys, she's not even breathing [illegible]."

Cravath and I [illegible] Little Pete had tied her, and [illegible] way Crosby's in the gathering dusk, Cravath [illegible].

"A narrow [illegible], that."

"And there is a lesson attached to it," said I. "[illegible] is, hold fast to the [illegible] until you [illegible]."

"This very night," said Cravath, "[illegible] myself before a mirror and promise [illegible] to be used upon [illegible] financial matters of any degree. This is the [illegible] time that I have been used as a [illegible] but I warrant you, old boy, that it is the last."

NO ONE ABOUT TO SHOW HIM HIS WAY, SO HE TOOK THE FIRST PORT

It was a case of "any old place I can hang my hat is home sweet home to me," with a befuddled disciple of John Barleycorn, who at an early hour yesterday morning wabbled up the front stairs at the Lundy block and acted so queerly that a policeman was called to lead him away. It was about 2 a.m. [illegible] and it was [illegible] when he found his way to the top of the stairs.

He entered a hall and finding the doors leading to separate apartments unlocked, visited the occupants of each apartment. He awakened and badly frightened one young lady and drank copiously of cream and milk which he found handy. The police were called and the unwelcome visitor hurried away. Later he was allowed to go to his home.

WHY HAS SIR WILFRID GONE BACK ON THE FARMERS?

With the Toronto Globe he Would Destroy Canadian Market for Agricultural Products if he Had His Way

The Liberal party at the present time is in a frightful condition. Today they have none. In the good old days the Globe was all for the farmer, [illegible] what does the Globe say? In the issue of to-day in big headlines it shows how Germany is starving under the protective tariff. Not starving industrially, but starving because there is a tariff against food stuffs. Drop the tariff against food stuffs and the German farmer goes out of business.

On page 1 of the same issue the Globe triumphantly says that the trade in Canada may run over the billion mark this year. The increase so far this year is already over eighty millions. There never was such an increase in one year before. Doesn't this look as if the Borden Government was not such a bad Government after all and the Borden policy was not such a bad policy?

Notwithstanding the immense importations of American grains into Canada which have been [illegible] particularly of late, the Globe would have Reciprocity in natural products, saying nothing about manufactures. What would be the consequences? [illegible] Canada would [illegible] while American agriculture with its earlier crops and [illegible] acreage would [illegible] the Canadian farmer. [illegible] in price in the Northern States than in Canada and [illegible] into Canada in large [illegible]

Where is the Grit [illegible] anyhow? What's the matter with [illegible]? Is it to be supposed that [illegible] can be fed with impunity on such political hash as that?

According to the Globe the next election in Canada will be fought on Home Rule. The Globe is devoting a very large measure of its space to ridiculing the Ulster people and supporting of Home Rule for Ireland. The Mail and World are taking the opposite side. It looks as if Canada was to be divided on religious lines and thus is the world-wide struggle [illegible] up in this country. It is hard to tell just where and how these things break out from time to time. It's either Ne Temere, Marriage Question, Bilingualism, Separate Schools or some other question involving the great underlying principle that starts the row. The Globe has evidently [illegible] itself on the side of the Roman Catholic church, although some times it speaks as if religion really had no connection with politics. No one denies that the latter is the true position, but who is it that advocates the union of Church and State?

Then what about farm and garden products? To-day [illegible] after carload of [illegible] are coming in [illegible] U.S. The [illegible] market which our farmers [illegible] would be reduced [illegible]

[illegible] crazy enough, who is in the producing business, to ask for further competition? And [illegible] about these things. But why has the Globe deserted the farmers?

SUPREME KNIGHT VISITS LOCAL COUNCIL, KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

James Flaherty of Philadelphia, Supreme Knight of the Knights of Columbus is visiting the city to-day while on an official tour of Western Ontario and during his stay here is being entertained by the Peterborough Council. This is the first official tour of Western Ontario that has ever been made by the Supreme Knight and Mr. Flaherty is being extended every courtesy by the local Council.

A dinner was held to-day at the residence of Mr. A. Popham in honor of His Lordship Bishop O'Connor, where the distinguished visitor was privileged to become acquainted with His Lordship. Prominent members of the Order were present and the occasion was highly enjoyable to all.

This afternoon the party embarked on the "[illegible] Butler" through the [illegible] residences of the officials, and went over the lift lock.

To-night Mr. Flaherty will deliver an address at the new Knights of Columbus quarters on matters of interest to the Society. The latter is in a particularly flourishing condition at the present time and the noted visitor expressed himself as being greatly pleased with the Council's affairs in Peterborough.

William Watson is disliked almost as deeply by the women of Ulster as by women who talk too much.

REV. DR. GRANT AT ST. PAULS

Open Doors Include Canada where Need is Great

Rev. Dr. Grant, superintendent of Home Missions of the Presbyterian church, spoke in St. Paul's Church yesterday morning and at St. Andrew's in the evening. He also addressed the Brotherhood at Knox church at the afternoon session.

Dr. Grant had a message of importance and interest to the Presbyterians of Peterboro. At St. Paul's church he made reference to the last General Assembly, and of some changes made. One of these was, the placing of the finances with the business men of the church.

The discourse of Dr. Grant was distinctly along missionary lines, and he was at all times intensely interesting. Speaking of the open doors, Dr. Grant did not point alone to Japan, China, and other nations, but brought his listeners right to Canada and its centres where there was great work to be done, if the church was to cease "marking time," and "move forward."

And Dr. Grant was optimistic. He held that men only wanted a vision of their task and they would put their wealth and themselves into the work.

NOVA SCOTIA'S TOWER

WHAT NEWLY-DEDICATED MONUMENT STANDS FOR.

The Memorial Which the Duke of Connaught Inaugurated a Few Days Ago is of Special Significance to Canadians—It Marks the Place Where the First Parliament Was Formed.

On one of the hills which give diversity and beauty to the site of the City of Halifax, there now stands a lofty and beautiful stone tower, from whose turret-crowded top can be had a charming view of the historical city and its magnificent harbor. A few days ago that tower was dedicated by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught to the memory of the first elective Legislature that ever met on territory now within the boundaries, of the Dominion of Canada. The tower, therefore, commemorates the birth of our Parliamentary institutions.

One hundred and fifty-four years have passed since that first Canadian Parliament was called to order in its opening session, but in order to understand the circumstances that attended its creation it is necessary to go a little further back in our history, and start, in fact, with the beginning of British rule in Canada.

British Canadian history, and British Parliamentary institutions in Canada have their beginning in Nova Scotia. That little province has blazed the way along which much of our political life has passed, and in many things set an example for the other British-Canadian communities.

She has also contributed to our public life some of our ablest men, among them being three who have been Prime Ministers of the Dominion. Her contributions to our history, her achievements in solving the problem of colonial self-government, and her contributions to those elements of our population that established, governed and developed this country fully entitle her to the name she bears. She certainly is the New Scotland of British North America, filling in this Dominion a position very similar to that filled by old Scotland in the United Kingdom.

The treaty of Utrecht that brought to a close what is known as Queen Anne's war, gave Acadia to the British crown; and Acadia may be generally described as all that territory now forming the province of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, but for almost seventy years after the cession the whole formed the one province of Nova Scotia.

During the first six years of its history as a British possession, Nova Scotia was under military government, which consisted of the general commanding the troops there, and his officers. It was the rule of the soldiers and not the civilian. It was in 1719 that the governor, Col. Phillips, in accordance with instructions received from London, established a form of civil government, which consisted of the governor and an appointed council whose duties were both executive and legislative. This form of government, however, was intended to be only temporary, for an elective House of Assembly was promised, and it was not long before the people began looking for the fulfilment of the promise. They had to wait thirty-nine years—that is until 1758.

At this time Sir Charles Lawrence was governor of Nova Scotia. He had repeatedly been instructed by the Government in England to call a House of Assembly, or elective Parliament, but he had neglected to do so because he knew that as soon as such a representative body came into existence he would have less power than he exercised with only an appointed council to be responsible to and to co-operate with. And Lawrence loved power and clung to it tenaciously. In 1758, however, he received orders from London that he could not ignore. The long-deferred House of Assembly had been created.

Early in the spring the British fleet commanded by Admiral Boscawen arrived in Halifax harbor. With it came a large number of transports having on board a powerful army commanded by Amherst, who, two years later brought the war to a close on this continent by the capture of Montreal and the surrender of Canada by Governor Vaudreuil. With Amherst as his chief lieutenant, was a young officer, James Wolfe, who in the following year conducted the siege of Quebec, and "died victorious" on the Plains of Abraham. The fleet sailed away for Louisburg, and Lawrence was impatient to follow it and take part in the siege. But before he could go he must carry out his orders and set up the long-delayed Parliament.

Governor Lawrence called his council and together they planned that first of Canadian Parliaments, whose House of Assembly was to consist of twenty-two members to be elected by the freeholders. The part of the province not yet divided into counties, and it was the larger part, was to elect sixteen members, the township of Lunenburg, two, and the township of Halifax four. The appointed council was retained as an Upper House, corresponding to the Senate of to-day.

Then followed the elections — the first Parliamentary elections held in this country, and on October 2, 1758, the first session of that first Canadian Parliament was opened at Halifax, Robert Sanderson being chosen Speaker of the Assembly. That first session opened much the same way that sessions of provincial legislatures or of Federal Parliament opens to-day —with a speech from the throne by the governor, read to both Houses.

The session lasted from October 2 until April 17, but the House did not sit continuously for there was a long recess. The sittings were held in the Court House, and the members were called together by the ringing of a bell. The members were not paid salaries or indemnities, as the remuneration of members is now called.

That earliest of Canadian Parliaments held only two sessions, when it was dissolved and a second election held.

The insanitary state of Windsor city hall may result in an indictment of the Council.

WANT TO HEAR FROM SEYMOUR POWER CO.

Opponents of Hydro-Electric Present Their Side of Question

There are two sides to every question. There are people in Peterborough who are opposed to the Hydro-Electric, and their views as set forth in the following statement are here given.

They say: The city of Peterborough has now come to a critical point in relation to the agreement of electric power for public and domestic light and power purposes. With so important interests at stake, and confronted with the responsibility of making a permanent arrangement it would seem to be wise to consider the subject in all its bearings. We want the best and at as moderate a cost as possible.

It shows no lack of confidence in the Hydro-Electric proposal, now practically before the people, to suggest that it is the duty of our City Council to assure themselves and the people they represent what they propose is the best. If investigation shows that it is the best we can do, by all means adopt it. But ordinary business prudence suggests that there should exist no doubt as to its being the best. It is stated that the Seymour Power Company has been in negotiation with the City Council for several years, but that so far the two interests have not come together with any definite result.

In view of the conditions suggested above, it seems that it would be the duty of the Council to put themselves in working relation with the Seymour Power Company and receive and consider what proposals they have to make, as we are led to believe they desire to do. Accepting their proposal for consideration does not bind the Council to anything. If the offer they make is not found to be more favorable to the city than than the Hydro-Electric proposals, then, of course, nothing comes of it. It seems that it would be but simple justice to the people to have a chance provided to see whether the Hydro-Electrical proposal is the better and at present this can only be done by the City Council, taking the opportunity to get in touch with the Seymour Power people, finding out what they propose and considering the proposal on its merits.

SERVIA IS READY FOR TURKISH WAR

Europe is Alarmed Over the Situation—Demand for Complete Autonomy to Macedonian Province at Once

London, Oct. 1.—The Balkan difficulties have developed with alarming rapidity to a point where only a spark is needed to set the whole of south-eastern Europe aflame. Three of the Balkan states by common consent have ordered the simultaneous mobilization of their armies and are making every preparation for immediate hostilities.

Two possible explanations are offered, the first, that a coalition of the Balkan states exists for the purpose of demanding from Turkey, before she has time to conclude peace with Italy, the grant of complete autonomy to the Macedonian provinces; the second that, fearing Turkey will seek an issue from her difficulties at home and abroad in war, they are preparing themselves for a possible attack.

Everything now seems to depend on whether the great powers will be able to bring sufficient pressure to bear to prevent the outbreak of hostilities and preserve the status quo in the Balkans. Yesterday's developments appear fully to confirm the existence of a military understanding between Bulgaria, Servia, Greece and Montenegro, directed against Turkey.

The approach of winter is held to be a factor in favor of peace, and in the European capitals the hope is still cherished in diplomatic quarters that the efforts of the powers will be successful. The Russian and British representatives at Constantinople are energetically urging upon the Porte the necessity of carrying into execution the promised reforms in Macedonia and are applying pressure to induce Turkey to modify her provocative military preparations in the Adrianople district.

Decision In Forty-Eight Hours.

Constantinople, Oct. 1.—Owing to the insistence of the Turkish Government upon obtaining a written declaration of amity from the Servian Government, the Servian Minister, Dr. Nenadovitch, has sent another important communication to the Porte. This follows a communication which the Minister addressed to the Porte on Saturday respecting the stoppage of Servian ammunition after permission had been given for its passage through the Turkish lines. In reply to this, the Turkish Foreign Minister said that the consignment was detained because of the doubtful attitude of Servia. On the declaration by the Minister that the Servian policy was unchanged, the Turkish Foregin Minister asked for a written statement embodying these assurances.

The present note invites the Porte to adopt a definite decision within 48 hours, either to sanction the passage of the ammunition or return it to France. The communication is touched in friendly but energetic terms. It is understood that failure to comply with the conditions will lead to the departure of the Minister.

The Foregin Minister denied last night that the Government had received an ultimatum, either from Bulgaria, or from Bulgaria and Servia jointly.

Austria Is Impressed.

Vienna, Oct. 1.—At the sitting of the Austrian delegation yesterday Count von Berchtholdt, the Foreign Minister, when asked whether it was true that mobilization orders had been issued at Belgrade and Sofia, replied:

"Up to the present we have only heard from Sofia that an order for general mobilization was issued yesterday afternoon. No information of a similar kind has yet reached us from Belgrade or Athens, although the situation at these places cannot be described as less serious.

"I would point out," continued the Foreign Minister, "that between the ordering of mobilization and the beginning of hostilities there are the weighty efforts of the great powers, which are being directed towards allaying the dangers arising from such situations. The powers will continue to work for the maintenance of peace.

Feverish Preparations In Servia.

Belgrade, Servia, Oct. 1.—War preparations are being carried on with feverish haste. General mobilization of the Servian army has been ordered and it is expected will be well under way in 24 hours. The publication of news of military movements is forbidden.

According to newspaper reports, the Servian Minister of Turkey, Dr. Nenadovitch, has left Constantinople for Belgrade.

Belgrade is seething with excitement. The streets are full of uniformed reservists and the railway stations are crowded with men on their way to join the colors. The mobilization of the Bulgarian army simultaneously with that of Servia has added enthusiasm to the occasion.

The Skupstchina has been summoned to meet on Thursday in extraordinary session.

Greek Vessels Leave Turkish Waters.

London, Oct. 1.—A Constantinople despatch says that all Greek vessels have received orders to leave Turkish waters.

Turco-Grecian relations have improved since Turkey apologized to Greece for the firing by Turkish troops on the Greek steamer Rumoli.

The Bulgarian proclamation of a general mobilization has, on the other hand, added fuel to the Balkan fire.

The near eastern situation is considered in diplomatic circles here as distinctly serious, although officials are disposed to be optimistic. This feeling is widely shared in consequence of the lateness of the season and the fact that the powers are working in concert in tendering advice to the Balkan States to keep the peace.

Germany Fears Worst.

Berlin, Oct. 1.—The German Foreign Office is prepared for the worst in the Balkans since the issue of the mobilization orders in Servia and Bulgaria. The possibility is taken into consideration, however, that the orders have been issued for tactical purposes and to bring pressure to bear on the Porte.

The exact aims of Servia and Bulgaria in mobilizing their own secret and it is thought war may possibly break out without a formal declaration.

The great powers, however, none of whom desire war, will continue their endeavors to prevent it until the last moment.

Bulgaria In Line.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Oct. 1.—The mobilization of the Bulgarian army was proclaimed by the Government yesterday.

The action was taken in consequence of alarming news received here as to the centralization of considerable forces of Turkish troops along the Bulgarian frontier.

He hid in a stook of grain, and when his late employer, Walter Parkin and his farm foreman, Le Pryne, witnesses against him, drove by him shot at Parkin, wounding him so badly that his recovery is doubtful. Special to the Review.

Winnipeg, Oct. 1.—J. H. Snusball, of Birmingham, England, manager of a large English Accident Insurance Co. who is on a visit here, declared this morning that the British Empire is on the brink of a volcano and that Germany is getting ready to strike a blow to cripple Britain as a naval power and attain the world supremacy. He believes war can only be avoided by the German people refusing to be further taxed for dreadnaughts or by substantial contribution to the Imperial defence from the Overseas Dominions.

SIR RUFUS ISAACS IS HOPEFUL

Says that Home Rule Bill is Sure to Triumph

Special to the Review.

London, Oct. 1.—Speaking to his constituents in Reading last night, Sir Rufus Isaacs, referring to the Ulster demonstrations, said he spoke for the government, in saying that the incidents in Ulster would not turn them one hairsbreadth.

"We shall carry the Home Rule bill through the Commons," he concluded "and I predict that before the end of the year the bill will emerge from the Commons after having passed its third reading."

MRS. MARY McCAFFREY, SR.

SAY SCHREITER IS A LIAR

Detroit, Oct. 1.—Testifying in their own behalf at the preliminary hearing yesterday, seven of the seventeen Detroit aldermen charged with conspiracy, denied the testimony of their co-defendant, Edward Schreiter, former council clerk, that they had accepted or promised to accept bribes from a detective believing at the time that the money had been offered them as payment for alleged councilmanic favors to be tendered the Wabash Railroad.

Their evidence completed the hearing. Judge Jeffries announced that he will make public his decision on Friday.

The aldermen who took this stand are O'Brien, Watson, Merritt, Koenig, Zoeller and Lynch. Some declared [illegible] Detective Brennan, who previously testified he conducted the so-called graft investigation and found a number of aldermen susceptible to bribes. Others testified they had been approached, but refused to consider his proposition.

DOES THE FARMER OF CANADA NEED ANY WIDER MARKETS?

The Local Situation Indicates That he Does Not and the Same Truth is Made Manifest in Port Colborne Where Wheat is Being Imported From Duluth

If Sir Wilfrid Laurier follows his usual program to-night, when he speaks in the Brock Street Rink, he will make a plea for wider markets for the Canadian farmer. Let us see how far this plea is justified by local circumstances.

The Quaker Oats Company has for some time been buying oats in the United States, because the grain so purchased is cheaper than it is in Canada. About two weeks ago they received a train load.

At that time September cash oats were selling in Chicago for 32½ cents per bushel of 32 pounds, while Canadian October oats were quoted at 37⅜ cents for 34 pounds at Fort William.

The freight rate between these two points and the seaboard is practically the same.

The company have just received anothert rain load of American oats. The market quotations to-day are—

Cash oats, Winnipeg	46 cents
Cash oats, Chicago	32½ cents

Does this indicate in any way that the Canadian farmer is suffering for a wider market? Does it not prove conclusively that he has the best market in the world right at his own door?

What is true in the case of oats is true of wheat, The Maple Leaf Milling Company, of Port Colborne, is importing wheat from Duluth in bond, grinding it in their mills and exporting the flour.

A few days ago the company sent a check for $4,513 to the Port Colborne customs officials to pay the duty on one consignment of American wheat, and the duty is 12½ cents a bushel. This represents a shipment of approximately 36,000 bushels.

A big steamer is at present unloading a cargo of 202,000 bushels for the same company.

Does the Canadian farmer need a wider market for his wheat?

American produce is being shipped into Canada every day.

Does the Canadian farmer need a wider market for his hogs or for his vegetables?

When Sir Wilfrid declares that the duty on these commodities be removed he strikes a blow at the farmers, whose cause he professes to espouse with so much fervor.

MORAL REFORMERS NEED $30,000 FOR YEAR'S WORK

This is an Increase of $12,000 Over the Sum Expended Last Year—Board Hopes That the Money Will be Forthcoming

Toronto, Oct. 1.—Thirty thousand dollars a year is the amount of the campaign fund required by the Methodist Temperance and Moral Reform Board, with its full staff of a general secretary, three field secretaries and office staff. This is equivalent to $100 for six days every week of the year. The Moral Reform Board considers that the money will be easily forthcoming, as the responses have been spontaneous wherever the present general committee or field secretary has placed the matter before the Methodist congregations. The sum named will mean an increase of $12,000. This it is expected will be raised without difficulty by the two new field secretaries.

At present the board works through a central bureau conducted by Rev. Dr. Moore in the Confederaton Life Building.

The new field secretaries will have their divisional bureaus. The western may be located at Winnipeg or Vancouver; it is not decided definitely at which city.

Another will be at a city in the Maritime Provinces, and one at St. Johns, Newfoundland.

A private meeting of the Moral Reform Board was held yesterday to consider the present situation in Toronto. It was decided to have the executive prepare a plan of campaign to secure a more aggressive administration of the police morality department should a conference with the police commissioners by the officials representations of the board render such action necessary.

WRITS ISSUED

Two Provincial By-Elections to be Held on October 28th

Toronto, Oct. 1.—Sir James Whitney announced yesterday that writs would be issued to-day for the bye-elections to take place in East Middlesex and North Waterloo constituencies. The nominations for both seats will be held on October 21 and the elections on October 28.

Hon. Mackenzie King's name is being mentioned as a possibility for Liberal nomination to fill North Waterloo seat, vacated by the resignation of Dr. Lackner, M.P.P. It is not considered to be likely, however, that he would accept, and W. D. Euler, who contested the riding last December, will probably be the Liberal nominee.

In Conservative ranks R. Reid, C. H. Mills and Simon Bricker of Waterloo have an equal showing, but it will be left for the convention to decide.

Dr. Lackner had an interview with the Premier yesterday. He is pretty sure that his riding will return a supporter of the Government. Dr. Lackner will soon assume the office of sheriff of Waterloo County.

Ready to Start Trial.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 1.—"Nothing less than the sudden illness of half of the defendants can cause delay," said U. S. District Attorney Charles W. Miller yesterday, as indicating the Government's readiness to begin the trial of the 51 present and former labor union officials on a charge of conspiracy in the carrying of dynamite and nitro-glycerine on passenger trains.

Two sets each of fifty veniremen have been drawn from throughout Indiana for the selection of a jury. The defence is to be allowed a total of ten and the prosecution a total of six peremptory challenges.

BANK CLERK GOT FOUR YEARS FOR PLAYING THE RACES

Arthur Richmond Will Pay the Penalty for His Misdeeds—Counsel Says Crooks Led Him Into Sin

Toronto, Oct. 1.—Arthur R. Richmond pleaded guilty in the sessions yesterday to the theft of $26,089.73 from the Bank of Toronto, and was sentenced to four years in Kingston Penitentiary by Judge Denton.

"This young man is the victim of a well-known race track shark," declared Mr. T. C. Robinette, in pleading for mercy on Richmond's behalf. "This man is well known to track followers in all the large cities. He got this young man out to dinner, and by the aid of two fake jockeys, and some fake telegrams from supposed horse owners, inveigled him into stealing this money to play on "sure things." Of course, he lost, and he now pleads guilty to the theft."

Richmond is 27 years of age, and the son of a Gaspe clergyman. He is a well-educated young man, having spent five years in Bishops' College at Lennoxville, Que. He first went into the Bank of Toronto's service in Montreal, later at Hastings, Ont., and finally came to the Elm street branch in Toronto, where the theft occurred.

All the money appropriated by Richmond was taken inside of a period covering two weeks, and it all went "on the ponies." "He hasn't one cent of money left at the present time. He hasn't a dollar in the world," declared his counsel. "He has told me that after serving sentence, he will go west and make a new name for himself."

DROWNING VICTIMS AT REST IN ONE LONG GRAVE

Funeral Held at Omemee This Afternoon to the Emily Cemetery.

Special to the Review.

Omemee, Oct. 1.—Omemee was stirred to its depths this afternoon, as the funeral of the five drowning victims Mr. and Mrs. McCaffrey, their two children, and Mr. McCaffrey's mother, took place to the Emily cemetery.

The following order of service was carried out at the house:

Hymn—Jesus, Lover of My Soul.

Prayer—Rev. Mr. Earle.

Scripture reading, by Rev. Mr. Wilkinson, rector of St. Peter's Anglican church, Toronto, from Cor. 1. 15

Address by Rev. J. F. Chapman, from Isaiah 55, 8 and 9.

Hymn—Rock of Ages.

Prayer—Rev. Canon Marsh, of St. Paul's Lindsay.

The pallbearers were Messrs. Thos. Stevenson, Wm. Stevenson, Geo. Wilson, E. McPherson, T. C. Ivory, of Omemee, and W. B. Lamb, of Toronto.

Four hearses were used, three of which were secured from nearby points, and the caskets containing the remains of the two children were placed in one hearse.

The many beautiful floral offerings received from Toronto, and also from Omemee friends, almost hid the caskets from view in the house.

At the Emily cemetery the caskets were placed in one long grave, the one containing the remains of Mr. McCaffrey being at the head, Mrs. McCaffrey next, with the children following, and Mrs. McCaffrey, sr., last. At the interment of the latter the Methodist church service was held.

The services throughout were of the most solemn character, and the memory of the past three days will linger long in the minds of the people of Omemee. The schools were closed and the blinds in the majority of the stores were drawn.

Directly a policeman of one station descries a beggar he kicks him away, no matter whither, and another policeman of another station catches hold of the fellow and throws him out of his area, and so on, with the consequence that beggars after wandering from one ward to another and back again ultimately settle down in the regions of the least resistance—namely, the suburbs. The latest happenings prove that suburbs are fast becoming the center of [illegible] criminality.—Tokyo [illegible]

THE SEYMOUR COMPANY

The Seymour Power Company have a commodity for sale. They are in the business of furnishing the public with power and light and it is always in order for a firm or individual who has wares for sale to quote the best prices upon what they have to offer.

From the statement published in the Review yesterday, it is apparent that there are ratepayers in Peterboro, who are in favor of giving the Seymour Power Company a hearing before final action is taken toward the installation of the Hydro-Electric in this city. The members of the company themselves have repeatedly expressed a desire to meet the Peterboro aldermen for the discussion of business. The power men say they are not only ready at any time to submit a bid but are willing to receive an offer for that portion of their plant, which the city will require, in case municipal ownership is adopted. Furthermore, if the council asks for figures on reserve power to be used in cases of emergency at any time in the future, the company is willing to meet them on this proposition.

In the interests of all and as a measure of fair play to both sides it appears that it would be nothing more than reasonable for the council to give the Seymour people a hearing

TIMES HAVE CHANGED

Even with three leading candidates in the field and two or three in the running as a matter of principal and without any hope of success the political sea in the United States today is as calm as a mill pond. This is a situation in striking contrast to the turmoil and the industrial unrest which marked the presidential contests a few decades ago. The country at times was plunged into a state of political hysteria. Business was neglected for the political game, capital grew timid and withdrew from the arena, fearing that an adverse verdict might be pronounced upon it by the voters, so blinded for the time being by partisanship as to lose sight of even their own individual and collective interests.

Now everything is different. Capital regards the present contest with equanimity and labor is losing no sleep over it either. The many financial journals published in the United States tell us that the outlook is rosey. In all parts of the country business is becoming more and more active and the fall trade is excellent. It is hinted, however, that unfavorable political development would precipitate a reaction but apparently nothing of the kind is anticipated. There is no occasion for anxiety anywhere.

This condition is not only satisfactory but is significant as showing that the day of the blatant, calamity-howling politician has passed away. He can no longer divert the public mind upon himself and his ambitions and cripple the industrial energy of the country by breeding discontent and terror among either the masses or the classes. The voter has learned to think and to keep his convictions to himself until election day.

The primaries that have been held in the different states, since last spring are no true index of the political leanings of the people. In nearly every primary contest a majority of the people staid at home. Those who voted were members of the hysterical element of the electorate. The voters who have learned to think for themselves have not yet been heard from but it is their votes that will decide the contest on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November.

The feeling of security that prevails in all branches of trade, the absence of excitement over the political situation can easily be accounted for. No matter who is elected president, the national bulwark, the tariff, is not likely to be seriously impaired. Taft and Roosevelt, as we all know, are in favor of protection. Candidate Wilson, posted no doubt by those who are supplying him with the sinews of political warfare, has set the minds of the established industries at ease by intimating that if any revision of the tariff is attempted changes should be made so gradually that no effects would be felt for years.

IMPORTING WHEAT

The announcement first made by the Welland Telegraph that the Maple Leaf Milling Company at Port Colborne were importing wheat from Duluth in bond, grinding it and exporting the flour was a stunning blow to the Globe. Its issue of yesterday contains an editorial argument of length in which a labored attempt is made to explain away the points which tell against the plea for wider markets.

In the first place the Globe refuses to admit that it is the proper thing for a Canadian milling company to buy American wheat when the price is favorable, and so make work for the wage earners of Canada. It dodges that point by throwing the responsibility for the assertion on the Telegraph, and then asks, "Why should not the Canadian farmer sell wheat for export to the United States when the price is favorable?"

When does such a condition prevail? When throughout the past year have prices for wheat been higher in the United States than in Canada, even according to the market reports of the Globe?

The Globe goes on to say that the farmers do not want a duty on foodstuffs like wheat. If so why do they not vote as they think? The Globe argues that with the duty on natural products removed the Canadian farmer would export more grain than would be imported from the United States. Even in the West a section of the Dominion in which the Liberals love best to preach reciprocity, there would be no excess of exports, seeing that at Winnipeg the prevailing price of wheat is higher than in Minneapolis.

The Globe in its desperation, in its anxiety to do something, is simply flailing at an arguement that has been so thoroughly threshed that not one kernel of truth remains.

The Globe's closing sentence is: "It is only when the farmer tries to get wider markets and better prices that the Welland Telegraph and its kind smell treason."

The case of the Maple Leaf Milling Company is only one instance among a thousand that might be quoted to show that the Canadian farmer does not need a wider market for his grain or for his other produce. Here in Peterborough we have the Quaker Oats Company importing car after car of oats from the United States because that variety of grain is cheaper there than in this country. With reference to the assertion that the Canadian farmer has a shadow of a chance to secure better prices across the border the Globe should be convinced, even by its own market reports, that any claim to this effect is an idle dream.

DOCTORS SAID IT WAS HEART FAILURE

And Gave Me Up—But "Fruit-a-tives" Cured Me

MOORFIELD, ONT., MARCH 25th. 1910

"I suffered from severe Indigestion and Dyspepsia for nearly two years.

I could not take food without fearful distress. Two doctors thought my disease was Heart Failure and incurable, and I expected to die in a short time. My son asked me to try "Fruit-a-tives".

From the outset, I was better and gradually this fruit medicine completely cured me.

I took perhaps a dozen boxes—now I am cured and have gained over 30 pounds in weight".

EDITORIAL NOTES

It is no longer appropriate to invest the figure of Death with a scythe. A modern aeroplane would be a better representation.

Inspector Kennedy, of Toronto, deplores the fact that ministers preach the "no hell" doctrine the officer asserting that such preaching injures the moral tone of the community by encouraging license. The inspector has evidently had experience enough with the underworld to convince him that there is such a place right in his own city.

The Toronto police have roused themselves as a result of the disclosures made at the trial of Rev. R. B. St Clair, and variety theatres will now be strictly censored. The turkey trot is to be prohibited and anything savoring of profanity forbidden.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Sept. 30.—There was a good enquiry from the continent for Manitoba spring wheat and some business was worked, but the demand from the United Kingdom was poor. A good business continues to be done in oats and sales of Duluth No. 3 white were made at 50½c, ex-store. A few cars of Ontario oats are coming forward, which are poor in quality and some heated. Manitoba oats are scarce and very firm on spot. The trade in flour is fairly active for local account, but the foreign demand is quiet. A good business is doing in mill feed at firm prices. Butter is firm under a fair demand. The demand for cheese is quiet and only a small business is passing over the cable. Exports for week were 46,298 boxes, against 62,857 a year ago. Eggs, active.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Sept. 30.—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Sept. 28 were 2300 cattle, 4800 sheep and lambs, 3800 hogs and 400 calves. The offerings on the market this morning were 1700 cattle, 4400 sheep and lambs, 1800 hogs and 500 calves.

Owing to the continued limited supply of choice steers coming forward the tone of the market for such was firm and sales of a couple of full loads were made on Saturday to local dealers at $7, for which in a jobbing way they asked as high as $7.50 this morning, and for which buyers refused to pay and the top price realized was $7.25, while bids of $7 were refused.

The supply of other grades of cattle was larger than it has been for some time past and in consequence the tone of the market was weaker and prices ruled fully 25c per cwt. lower than this day week. Even at this reduction some buyers were disposed to hold off, but on the whole the demand was fairly good, owing to the very cool weather for this time of year. In addition to the buying for local requirements several carloads were bought for shipment to Quebec and other outside points, consequently the trade on the whole was fairly active and a good clearance was made by noon. The demand from canners was good and a fair trade was done at a small decline.

A weaker feeling developed in the market for sheep and lambs, owing to the large receipts and prices were 25c per cwt. lower than this day week, but at this reduction the demand from packers and butchers was good for supplies, as they are all now putting them away for winter requirements and in consequence an active trade was done, with sales of Ontario lambs at $5.75 to $6, and Quebec stock at $5.25 to $5.50 per cwt., while ewe sheep sold at $3.50 to $3.75, and bucks and culls at $3 to $3.25 per cwt. The demand for milk-fed calves was good, of which the supply was small and sales were made at $7 to $7.50 per cwt., while grassers sold at $6 to $10 each.

Owing to the increased supplies of hogs coming forward and the lower prices ruling in the Toronto market at the latter end of last week a weak feeling continues to prevail in the local market and prices scored a further decline of 20c to 25c per cwt. since last Wednesday, but at the lower range of prices the demand from packers was good and a brisk trade was done with sales of selected lots at $8.80 to $8.90 per cwt., weighed off the cars, and the prospects were that values would go still lower.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7 to $7.25; medium, $4.75 to $5.75; common, $4 to $4.50; canners, $2.50 to $2.75; choice cows, $5.25 to $5.50; medium, $4.50 to $5; bulls, $3 to $4.50; milkers, choice, each, $60 to $70; common and medium, each, $40 to $50; springers, $30 to $35.

Sheep—Ewes, $3.50 to $3.75; bucks and culls, $3 to $3.25; lambs, $5.25 to $6.

Hogs—F.o.b., $8.50 to $8.90.

Calves—$5 to $10.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Sept. 30.—Cattle—Receipts, 6100; slow, 15c to 25c lower; prime steers, $9 to $9.50; butchers, $6 to $8.25; bulls, $4 to $6; stock heifers, $4 to $4.50; shipping, $7.80 to $8.25; heifers, $4.75 to $7.50; cows, $2.50 to $6.25; stockers and feeders, $4.50 to $6.40; fresh cows and springers, active and strong, $35 to $75.

Hogs—Receipts, 15,200; fairly active and steady; heavy, $8.75 to $8.90; mixed, $8.90 to $9; yorkers, $8.25 to $9; pigs, $7.50 to [illegible]

HAPPY THOUGHT

HAPPY THOUGHT

Back of This Stove Stands a Great Institution

Do you realize what it means to you to have a really satisfactory range in your kitchen? For twenty-five years the "Happy Thought" has been tried and tested under all kinds of conditions. It has proven over and over again its 100 per cent. efficiency.

Its use means actual dollars and cents to you every day.

You can buy stoves that cost you less than the "Happy Thought"; but you pay for that saving many times over every year in the fuel such stoves waste.

The "Happy Thought" is a product of the skill and long experience of the greatest stove-making institution in Canada. It gives you full value in return for every cent you invest in it. It gives you full heat efficiency from every ounce of fuel you burn in it. It is the most profitable stove you can buy.

Over a Quarter Million Canadian women who have discovered this, use the "Happy Thought" every day.

"Mine was a business proposition, not a marriage proposal," she interrupted, coldly angry. "I wonder if somewhere in this world there is one man who could accept me for a comrade."

"But you are a woman just the same," he began, "and there are certain conventions, certain decencies"—

She sprang up and stamped her foot. "Do you know what I'd like to say?" she demanded.

"Yes," he smiled. "You'd like to say, 'D— petticoats!'"

CHAPTER XII.

THE LOGIC OF YOUTH.

SHE nodded her head ruefully.

"That's what I wanted to say, but it sounds different on your lips. It sounds as though you meant it yourself and that you meant it because of me. Well, I am going to bed. Let me be your partner and you'll see me rattle the dry bones of the Solomons. Confess, I've rattled yours already."

"I should say so," he answered. "Really, you know, you have. I never received such a dressing down in my life. If any one had ever told me that I'd be a party even to the present situation— Yes, I confess you have rattled my dry bones pretty considerably."

"But that is nothing to the rattling they are going to get," she assured him as he rose and took her hand. "Good night. And do, do give me a rational decision in the morning."

"I wish I knew whether you are merely headstrong or whether you really intend to be a Solomon planter," Sheldon said in the morning at breakfast.

"I wish you were more adaptable," Joan retorted. "You have more preconceived notions than any man I ever met. Why in the name of common sense, in the name of—fair play, can't you get it into your head that I am different from the women you have known and treat me accordingly? You surely ought to know I am different. I sailed my own schooner here—skipper, if you please. I came here to make my living. You know that; I've told you often enough. It was dad's plan, and I'm carrying it out, just as you are trying to carry out your Hughie's plan. Dad started to sail and sail until he could find the proper islands for planting. He died, and I sailed and sailed until I arrived here. Well," she shrugged her shoulders, "the schooner is at the bottom of the sea; I can't sail any farther; therefore I remain here. And a planter I shall certainly be. Do you want me for a partner?"

"But do you realise that I would be looked upon as the most foolish jackanapes in the south seas if I took a young girl like you in with me here on Berande?" he asked.

"No; decidedly not. But there you are again, worrying about what idiots and the generally evil minded will think of you. I should have thought you had learned self reliance on Berande, instead of needing to lean upon the moral support of every whisky guzzling, worthless south sea vagabond."

He smiled and said:

"Yes, that is the worst of it. You are unanswerable. Yours is the logic of youth, and no man can answer that. The facts of life have no place in the logic of youth. Youth must try to live according to its logic. The facts always smash youth's logic, and they usually smash youth's heart, too. It's like platonic friendships and—and all such things; they are all right in theory, but they won't work in practice.

"Suppose we do become partners on Berande," he said, "either I'll fall in love with you or you with me. Propinquity is dangerous, you know. In fact, it is propinquity that usually gives the facer to the logic of youth."

"If you think I came to the Solomons to get married," she began wrathfully. "Well, there are better men in Hawaii, that's all. Really, you know, the way you harp on that one string would lead an unprejudiced listener to conclude that you are prurient minded"—

She stopped, appalled. His face had gone red and white with such abruptness as to startle her. He was patently very angry. She sipped the last of her coffee, and arose, saying:

"I'll wait until you are in a better temper before taking up the discussion again. That is what's the matter with you. You get angry too easily. Will you come swimming? The tide is just right."

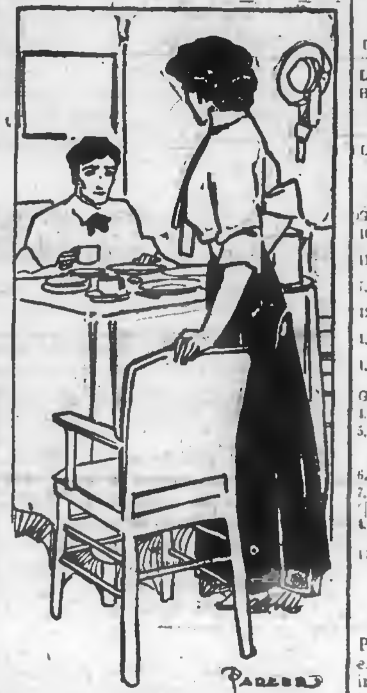
"If she were a man, I'd bundle her off the plantation, root and crop, whaleboat, Tahitian sailors, sovereigns, and all," he said to himself after she had left the room.

But that was the trouble. She was not a man, and where would she go, and what would happen to her?

He got to his feet, lighted a cigarette, and her Stetson hat, hanging on the wall over her revolver belt, caught his eye. That was the devil of it, too. He did not want her to go. After all, she had not grown up yet. Never again would he lose his temper with her. She was a child; he must remember that. He sighed heavily. But why in reasonableness had such a child been incorporated in such a woman's form?

Her trilling laughter smote upon his reverie and he stepped to the screen door, through which he could see her running down the path to the beach. At her heels ran two of her sailors, Papehara and Mahameme, in scarlet lava-lavas, with naked sheath knives gleaming in their belts. It was another sample of her wilfulness. Despite entreaties and commands, and warnings of the dangers from sharks, she persisted in swimming at any and all times, and by special preference, it seemed to him, immediately after eating.

He watched her take the water, diving cleanly like a boy, from the end of the little pier, and he watched her strike out, with single overhand stroke, her henchmen swimming a dozen feet away on either side. He did not have much faith in their ability to beat off a hungry man eater, though he did believe implicitly that their lives would go bravely before hers in case of an attack.



"I'LL WAIT UNTIL YOU ARE IN A BETTER TEMPER."

HOW GIRLS MAY AVOID PERIODIC PAINS

The Experience of Two Girls Here Related For The Benefit of Others.

Rochester, N. Y.—"I have a daughter 13 years old who has always been very healthy until recently when she complained of dizziness and cramps every month, so bad that I would have to keep her home from school and put her to bed to get relief.

"After giving her only two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound she is now enjoying the best of health. I cannot praise your Compound too highly. I want every good mother to read what your medicine has done for my child."—Mrs. RICHARD N. DUNHAM, 311 Exchange St., Rochester, N.Y.

Stoutsville, Ohio.—"I suffered from headaches, backache and was very irregular. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and before I had taken the whole of two bottles I found relief. I am only sixteen years old, but I have better health than for two or three years. I cannot express my thanks for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I had taken other medicines but did not find relief."—Miss CORA B. FOSNAUGH, Stoutsville, Ohio, R.F.D., No. 1.

Hundreds of such letters from mothers expressing their gratitude for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished for their daughters have been received by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass.

Big Pulp Contract.

Montreal, Sept. 30.—The Chicoutimi Pulp Co. have just entered into what experts call the largest pulp contract in the world. This concern has agreed to supply Edward Lloyds Co., London, with 50,000 tons of pulp annually for a term of ten years.

The news also comes that three new pulp mills will be started in Canada next year, one in Ontario and two others on the St. Lawrence.

Brantford Postoffice Plans.

Brantford, Sept. 30.—Plans for the post office building have arrived here, and are being looked over by the local committee. The new building will cost $200,000, but the plans are considered somewhat stereotyped and will likely be revised before tenders are called for. The building will be completed next year.

Filtration Plant for Kingston.

Kingston, Sept. 30.—The Robert Filter manufacturers of Philadelphia have made an offer to the civic utilities committee to erect and equip a filtration plant to care for the city's water supply for $54,000. The proposition will be considered.

Not Permanent Policy.

Vancouver, Oct. 1.—Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, makes the following statement regarding the naval question:

"The members of the Dominoni Parlament called for November, two months earlier than intended, is for the special purpose of enabling Premier Borden to make a pronouncement on the navy question. Not with the idea of framing a permanent policy, which will be dealt with later, and which in due course will be submitted to the people, but for the purpose of presenting the view of the Government as formed after the recent conference with the British Government and the Admiralty."

Robin's Nest in a Gas Globe.

About March 27 a robin began to make her nest in a spare gas globe placed horizontally on a peg on which one may hang an overcoat in the vestry of a border parish church. She did not seem to mind the playing of the organ, which is quite near the nest, or the bright light of the incandescent burner which had to be used before and after evening service, or even the presence of minister and beadle. She laid five eggs and reared four young ones, which left the nest on May 16.—London Globe.

Quake Scare In Chile.

Santiago, Chile, Sept. 30—Great anxiety prevailed here yesterday owing to the possibility of earthquakes in Chile. So far there have been no signs of seismic disturbances, although they were predicted for yesterday. Several astronomers, however, have been endeavoring to reassure the people, declaring that no faith should be put in such predictions.

Flying Stone Broke Leg.

Kingston, Sept. 30.—While playing in St. Mary's school yard, the seven-year-old son of M. Amodeo, fruit merchant, was hit on the leg by a stone and the member fractured. His elder brother hit the boy who threw it and he was then strapped by a teacher, who witnessed the entire affair.

Earth Shocks Recorded.

Mobile, Ala., Sept. 30.—The seismograph at Spring Hill College yesterday afternoon registered earth shocks which are calculated to be eight thousand miles away. The first shock came indistinctly at 3.15 p.m. Quakes came intermittently and with varying violence until 5.30 o'clock.

POSITIVELY THE LARGEST SALE IN CANADA

WHILE every man, whether he works for others or for himself, should carry a LIFE INSURANCE POLICY. There is especial need of this on the part of the man who is IN BUSINESS FOR HIMSELF. In the case of such a one's death the proceeds of a policy may mean not merely the usual financial protection for his dependents—They may be the means of saving a profitable business from disruption and a family from serious loss. Every enterprising business man occasionally contracts obligations which he cannot immediately pay, but which, if he retains his health and strength, he manages to cancel in course of time. Sometimes, however, death prevents the payment of business debts that were fully warranted by the outlook when they were incurred. To compel payment of these debts out of the policy-holder's regular estate might greatly embarass his family. But if the head of the firm is insured for an adequate sum, the pressing indebtedness may be met, the business saved, without embarassing the family, and either carried on successfully or sold to good advantage.

On his own account also, a business man should be eager to insure his life for as much as he can conveniently pay premiums on. The business man's credit is always improved by the fact that he has had his life well insured. A Life Insurance Policy, therefore, is a good asset and should be considered indispensable by any one who is conducting a business of his own.

Remember that the late Cyrus W. Field was said to be worth at one time $20,000,000, yet he did not leave a dollar to his family, except his Life Insurance.

Life Insurance is the one asset that never deteriorates at death.

The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada will give you the protection you need. Call, phone or write them—

LAST CONTRACT HAS BEEN LET

The Hudson Bay Railway is to be Completed in 1914

Ottawa, Oct 1—The contract for the last section of the Hudson Bay Railway, has been let to J. D. McArthur. It is to be completed by 1914. This portion of the road is from Split Lake to the Bay, 165 to Port Nelson and 245 to Churchill.

The terminus of the road has not yet been decided upon. Nelson seems to be generally favored, but there is some final information to be furnished by engineers, which may change the destination to Churchill.

Work will start at the Bay end, and much of contractor's supplies will be sent in by water this autumn.

THE SPRING MAID PRODUCTION

Stage Settings for the Sparkling Operetta are Unique

Musically perfect, "THE SPRING MAID," which Werba and Luescher are sending to the Grand, for an engagement on Thursday, Oct 3, is notable also for the ornate and rather unusual stage settings and costuming. When the operetta played its two seasons engagement at the New York Liberty Theatre, the New York critics declared its production the handsomest and most artistic, seen in the metropolis in years.

The stage settings and costumes in "THE SPRING MAID," are in what is called pastel shades. Softness and a charming blending in tone characterizes everything. Green is the predominating color with pink a second shade, yet these greens and pinks have all the softness and charm of chiffon, dainty, alluring to the eye and combined in perfect shading. The first scene laid in the public square at Carlsbad, where saucy "Princess Bozena" poses as a spring girl to give a lesson to naughty "Prince Aladar" is bright with the pastel tints. More beautiful still is the second scene laid at the Bitterbrunnen bee farm, while the forest glade in the third act, where the peasantry stage their allegory of the origin of the spring and the wood nymphs revel, is a symphony in greens and browns and gold.

Costumes in keeping with the settings are beautifully toned, the spring girls and gay visitors at Carlsbad, the peasantry at Bitterbrunnen, and the nymphs and characters in the last scene, form charming combinations in silk and satin, velvet and chiffon, all in the prevailing pastel shades.

The seat sale for "THE SPRING MAID," engagement opened this morning at the box office, and judging from the "line up" at the wicket it looks as if it will be greeted by the biggest house of the season.

VICTIM OF RAILWAY MISHAP DIED AT THE HOSPITAL

David Ferguson Was Injured Five Weeks Ago, at Central Ontario Junction, When he Left His Train Before it Reached the Station—Remains Sent to Cartier

David Ferguson, who has been lingering at the Nicholls Hospital for the last month, passed away at one o'clock this morning, at the age of 72 years. He had suffered from concussion of the brain.

While alighting from a C. P. R. train at Central Ontario Junction on August 26th, last, he fell and was rendered unconscious. He was brought to Peterborough and removed to the Nicholls Hospital where he has been ever since. His son and daughter came here soon afterwards but left some time ago.

The remains were to be taken to Cartier, near Sudbury, this afternoon for interment.

WITH THE 57TH REGIMENT

The weekly drill of the 57th Regiment was held last night, and considering the cold and wet weather, there was a fair turnout. There was no outside drill.

For one hour rifle exercise was practised in the armories, after which the officers and men adjourned to the recreation room, where Sergt. Instructor McKay gave an interesting lecture on advance guard work. These lectures are looked forward to by the men and are of great usefulness when the time for the actual carrying out of the subject arrives.

The class instruction, which is preliminary to the school of instruction will start next Thursday and continue two nights every week till the school of instruction begins on November 11th, which will be under the supervision of an officer from Toronto. This is to enable junior officers to qualify as subordinates and all those who wish to attend the school of instruction should attend the preliminary classes. The examinations will be held six weeks after in December.

Looking For Wife Deserters.

Ottawa, Oct. 1.—Sir George McRae, chairman of the Local Government Board of Scotland, arrived in Ottawa yesterday. He is touring Canada looking into cases wherein old countrymen have deserted their wives and come to this country. There are said to be thousands of such cases in the Dominion. He wishes to further an arrangement between Canada and Scotland by which husbands may be deported, or failing that, that they should contribute to the support of their spouses.

"In the city of Glasgow alone," said Sir George, "the number of wives and children deserted last year was 970, which cost the city no less than $41,250."

BRITISH ADMIRAL SAYS

ROYAL NAVAL CLUB, Portsmouth, England

To the Zam-Buk Co.

Dear Sirs,—I have found Zam-Buk most reliable for healing cuts and abrasions; while for the relief of skin irritation it is invaluable.

(Signed) RODNEY M. LLOYD, Admiral.

Zam-Buk Cures Bad Burns.

Stoker Kingsnorth, of H.M.S. "Cochrane," says:—"I slipped and fell with my arm on an exhaust steam pipe, which fairly frizzled the skin. At once the ship's surgeon dressed my arm, but the burns took the wrong way, owing to a lot of dirt from the pipe setting up blood-poison. A large scab appeared, and from underneath the festering flesh, matter oozed out. I was in fearful pain and didn't know how to get ease.

"For weeks I remained under treatment, but the ordinary ointments proved no good. Indeed, I got worse. I therefore obtained a supply of Zam-Buk and almost as soon as this was applied I got ease. From the very first application, healing commenced; and a few boxes of Zam-Buk healed my wound completely."

Zam-Buk cures eczema, ulcers, abscesses, ringworm, bad leg, varicose ulcers, piles, cold sores, chapped hands, babies' sores, etc. All stores at 50c., or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Send 1c. stamp for trial box.

LECTURE ON CHRISTIAN SCIENCE BY MR. STRICKLER

The lecture on Christian Science, given at the Conservatory Hall, last night, by Virgil O. Strickler, C. S. B., of New York was well attended, and the audience heard a splendid exposition of the Christian Science doctrine.

Mr. Strickler was introduced by Mr J. H. Burnham, M.P., and his lecture in part was as follows—

However much people may differ in their attitude towards Christian Science every one will admit that it has done many good things. Entirely apart from the question of physical healing, it is generally conceded that it produces a happy and contented mentality that it destroys fear, and makes people loving and kind.

When we add to this the fact that it has healed many sick people who had previously been unable to find relief under other systems, that it has cured many of the drug habit, and of the liquor habit, has restored harmony in many homes that were discordant, and has given hope and courage to people who were discouraged, it is easy to understand why Christian Science has spread from one end of the earth to the other with such wonderful rapidity.

Why should any one not wish to believe that God heals the sick? Is it not a thing to be desired? and is it not something for which humanity has been praying through the centuries? Now that it is here why should not any one wish to accept it? Let each one ask himself that question.

Christian Science shows that sickness and sin originate in mortal mind, and result from the operation of this so-called mind. God did not create them nor do they result from the operation of spiritual law. In destroying them Jesus did not work contrary to God's laws. Christian Science insists that Jesus was consistent. He did not do the will of the Father at one time, and at another seek to overturn His laws. It follows, then, that if Jesus performed His work in accordance with, and by means of, God's laws, the same results must follow in every age whenever those laws are understood and applied. Moses and the prophets, and Jesus and His disciples and followers, healed the sick, raised the dead, and performed many wonderful works by means of this power and in every age the result of the operation of spiritual law in human consciousness has been to destroy discord and to establish peace.

WHAT IS CHRISTIAN SCIENCE?

Christian Science is a religion. It is the Science of Christianity—the science of God and man. It reveals spiritual law, and explains the operation of that law in its relation to man and the universe. It defines mortal mind and immortal Mind, and so makes plain the difference between mortal men and man made by God in His image and likeness.

Christian Science pleads for a rational understanding of God in place of mere belief about Him, and it is urging mankind to look for the real causation in Mind and not in matter. It declares that God is not the author of sin, sickness or death, hence these conditions are illegitimate and can be destroyed by a knowledge of the truth. It denies that there is any divine authority for man to sin, suffer, or die, and recalls the solemn declaration of the Scripture that God gave man as his birthright dominion over all the earth and over all that it contained. Jesus said, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Christian Science says to the tired and suffering man who is wandering about without any dominion at all that the knowledge of the truth will set him free from his bondage to sin, suffering, sorrow and failure, and will give to him that dominion which God said in the beginning belonged to man.

A correct understanding of God therefore, is necessary as the foundation of religion. Any system of religious teaching that is founded upon an imperfect or an erroneous conception of God must necessarily fail to bring to the believer the comfort and help that he seeks. When we look around and see the devotion and fidelity of people to their religious beliefs and then see how often they fail to realize the benefits for which they seek, it is a fair deduction that there is something wrong about their understanding of God.

The prophet Micah said a man's enemies are they of his own household and Jesus repeated the statement. I used to understand their meaning to be that a man's enemies were his own kin, but I now realize that a man's enemies are they of his own mental household. The mental guests or thoughts that we entertain in our mental homes are either our friends or our foes. Hatred, fear, self-love, and all evil qualities of thought are enemies that bind man to sickness and death, and man will never gain his freedom until he drives out these enemies and makes his consciousness the temple of God.

We are told in Christian Science that fear is an ingredient of every disease, and if fear were entirely destroyed, a large number of diseases would go with it. If we could imagine this world with all hatred, fear superstition, self-will and self-love out of it, it is conceivable that longevity would be increased and that happiness and health would be more secure.

If Christian Science had never healed a case of sickness it would still be entitled to lasting praise for compelling this age to recognize the power and influence of thought. Solomon declared, three thousand years ago that as a man "thinketh in his heart, so is he." In other words, the quality of the man is determined by the quality of his thought. It is therefore of supreme importance that man should know the truth, to the end that he may know how to think correctly.

As time goes on humanity exhibits an ever decreasing interest in theories about God that are not helpful and practical. This tendency has been deplored by the churches as indicating a loss of interest in religion but it is not so. It indicates a tremendous desire for a religion that is practical.

THIS IS AN AGE OF PRACTICAL THINGS

The demand for practical things also demands a religion that is practical. People are no longer satisfied with theories about what is to happen in another world. What is desired is a demonstrable religion that saves from present troubles— from sickness and sin, and failure, and unhappiness, and the countless ills of every-day human experience—and if there is a religion that will do that, it can be safely trusted for the future.

Christian Science is essentially a practical religion. It has been called applied Christianity. There is the same difference between Christian Science and other systems that there is between mathematics and engineering. Mathematics does much good in many ways, but it is not until the rules of mathematics are applied to human affairs that we see brought out great bridges, railroads, subways lofty buildings, and other things that are of public utility, and which contribute to the well-being of mankind. So it is only when the teachings of Jesus are understood and applied to human affairs that we see the sick healed, sinners liberated from bondage to evil habits, and other practical things done for the betterment of humanity.

THE LOGIC OF TWO-NIGHT THEATRICAL ENGAGEMENTS

One of the best arguments that can be offered as to the quality of "The Light Eternal," the big spectacular drama to be given for two nights at the Grand Theatre, starting Friday, October 4, is found in the mere fact that the engagement is for two nights instead of the conventional one night stand. The manager or producer would be worse than foolish, who sought to foist upon the public an inferior offering for more than one performance. In a city of this size but a few hours are necessary for good or bad report concerning a theatrical offering to spread to every quarter, and a bad report following the first performance would effectually end all possibility of profitable patronage. On the other hand, the enthusiastic commendation of the first-nighters spreads as rapidly and is equally effective for good, and it is to this personal indorsement that the management of "The Light Eternal" looks for best results.

LARRY DOYLE.

BY HUGH A. JENNINGS,

Manager of the Detroit Americans League Team

The infields of the Giants and Reds are a toss-up.

Heinie Wagner is far ahead of Fletcher as a shortstop, and Gardner is a better third baseman than Herzog.

Opposed to this fact, Merkle at first and Doyle at second excel Stahl and Yerkes.

Gardner is Herzog's superior as fielder and hitter. He is faster and covers lots of ground. He has a pair of clever hands and his throws to first are great. He fields cleanly. Herzog is no slouch, but he is not Gardner's equal.

The success of Boston this season is in a large measure due to the work of Wagner at short and at bat. He is without a doubt the best shortstop in the American League to-day, and that is saying a lot with Bush and Jack Barry to consider.

Yerkes suffers when compared to Larry Doyle, who has been a Giant star for a long time. McGraw made Doyle a brilliant player and appointed him captain. Much was expected of Doyle last year in the world's series and he was the one star who made good.

Jake Stahl must manage his team as well as play first base, and in so important a series this may handicap his work. Merkle is a younger man, faster and a better fielder. Stahl is a better hitter, however, than Merkle, although both are clean-up men.

Both infields work like machines at their best. There is probably no infield in baseball, save that of the Athletics, that can execute double plays with any greater speed and accuracy than these two combinations.

In handling runners I think the Red Sox, with Wagner in the game, will excel. Wagner has no superior in taking the ball and putting it upon the runner.

Boston's infield is a better hitting combination than that of the Giants, but it is not nearly so fast when once on the bases. Those New York infielders are demons, once they get on. A fleeter four than Merkle, Doyle, Fletcher and Herzog are not playing ball anywhere.

Thus as the hitting of one offsets the base running of the other and the better left side of the Red Sox equalizes the right side of the Giants, I consider them a toss up.

There is no use trying to compare the outfields. As McGraw is the game's greatest manager, so

YERKES.

Speaker, Hooper and Lewis form the greatest outfield.

Becker, Murray and Snodgrass are not in the same class as the Boston trio either as hitters or fielders. While they might possibly equal them as fielders in a short series they cannot hope to excel them in covering ground.

I have seen these men cover ground so completely that it seemed impossible to drop a hit into the outfield. They forgot that there are such things as hits for the opposing team and caught everything near and far. Texas Leaguers would not have been invented had this bunch been playing at the time.

These men I consider worth $50,000, and Speaker worth half the sum alone. Stahl has said he would neither sell them for money nor give them away for love.

They are hitting away up in the averages. Speaker rivals Cobb and has few equals. But it is not a one-man outfield. Both Hooper and Lewis are also wonderful players.

I don't believe the Giants' pitchers can stop these three. The best in the American League have failed to do so. They are likely to drive even Mathewson out of the box, once they start.

The Boston outfield must bear the brunt of that psychological disturbance that has always had a baneful effect upon stars in world's series. The world is looking for the three to bear the greatest part of the offensive burden, as well as more than the average share of the defensive work.

The Giants, while lacking the ability of Boston, may find that the experience in last year's series offsets Boston's natural advantage. The finishing polish of a gruelling series is hard to penetrate and they may actually rise superior and play better ball than the wonderful Boston outfield on sheer confidence alone.

FIRING AERO BOMBS.

Two Methods Are Undergoing Tests by French Army Experts.

Highly satisfactory results have just been obtained in the series of experiments carried out to test several methods of dropping bombs from aeroplanes on to a given spot. Though the are far from having reached perfection, two appliances, invented by the Farman brothers, have already given great satisfaction to army experts.

Details of their mechanism are, of course, kept secret, but as regards one of them it is known that the method employed is that of, first of all, locating the target by dropping a dummy bomb, which on exploding spreads out a white powder easily visible to the pilot.

This bomb once dropped, the machine is turned back, and the pilot, knowing his height by his barograph and the speed at which he is flying can by means of an aiming apparatus and the ordinary principles of gunnery locate his next shot to a nicety.

The other apparatus, much more complicated, requires to be handled by an experienced officer and therefore can only be employed in two seated aeroplanes, carrying, besides the pilot, a bomb dropping specialist.—C. F. Bertelli in Leslie's.

Paper Towels and Soap Books.

A chemical friend of the Scientific American suggests that a campaign be started against the common cake of soap. About fifty years ago there was sold a form of soap for travelers consisting of a booklet about two inches by four inches, in which small leaves of soft paper saturated with soap were found. Each leaf contained enough soap for one washing of the hands. It is suggested that one might profitably dispense through a penny-in-the-slot machine a paper towel in which is folded a sheet of soap paper for convenient use in public lavatories.

Women Teachers Oppose Suffrage.

London, Oct. 1.—A referendum of the London Teachers' Association, three-quarters of whom are women, regarding women's suffrage, shows two thousand for and ten thousand against the suffrage. Another militant campaign is threatened here.

STAGE WOMEN NOT IDLERS

Miss Louise Dunbar Says That Life of Actress is Strenuous

"It is a big mistake to think of women of the stage as idlers, and a bigger mistake to suggest idleness to them,' says Louise Dunbar, who comes to the Grand Opera House, Friday and Saturday Oct. 4 and 5, with matinee Saturday at 2:30 in "The Light Eternal". "Contrary to popular opinion, a majority of actresses are far from being hot-house flowers. Their life is pecularly strenuous and its hardships tend to quickly disqualify the weaklings and accelerate the development of those having the proper mental and physical fibre. The successful actress must have a reserve dynamic force.

Such force comes from perfect health, and health and idleness do not go hand in hand. It is the woman who can take advantage of each day's leisure and devote it to the upbuilding of her reserve force that is successful on the stage. If she can go to the theatre with her lungs full of fresh air and her blood circulating as it can circulate only when pulsed through the arteries and veins by healthful and well exercised organs, there is a double chance of success, a double chance of exercising that dynamic force upon her audience and arriving at greatness in her art. Idleness that takes the form of cooping one's self up in a stuffy room is the one great hindrance of many women; and yet the mistake of suggesting such idleness is often made by well meaning associates. After a trying matinee performance you are advised to go home and lay down for an hour or two, when the proper spirit would be to say: 'Come on, let's take a good long walk in the fresh air.' This view of life is becoming more generally accepted every day, and as a result, the time spent indoors is used to a better advantage. The listless life has given way to useful pursuits, and a majority of the women of the stage have become especially proficient in some useful manual work. Nearly all of them are fine seamstresses and milliners, and you may safely wager many of the prettiest hats and gowns seen on the stage are the creations of their wearers. This is as it should be. No actress should be entirely dependent upon her supposed art, but should be mistress of other arts, or even trades—something to guarantee her against want or inaction should an untoward event call a halt in her career."

Next attraction, "The Red Rose," big musical company, Tuesday, Oct. 8th.

WEDDING BELLS

SIBLEY—SHAW.

A Regina exchange gives the particulars of the marriage of Miss Molly Shaw who is well known in Peterborough:

A very pretty and informal home wedding took place on Wednesday afternoon at the residence of Dr. and Mrs Shaw when their daughter Molly was united in marriage to John C. Sibley, B.A., the ceremony being performed by the Rev. W. E. Sibley B.A., brother of the groom, who is at home at present on furlough from West China. Rev. J. A. Doyle, of Prince Albert, assisting.

The evening previous to the wedding the girls of the bride-elects' Sunday school class showered her with flowers, and, in consequence, lovely blossoms of every hue transformed the rooms into regular bowers. The bride who looked very girlish and winsome in an exquisite white lingerie frock, carried a huge bouquet of pink and white sweet peas.

Among the out-of-town guests present were the two sisters of the groom Mrs. T. B. Blackwell, of Cannington, Ont., and Mrs. J. W. A. Cairns, of Edmonton.

The happy couple left for Winnipeg a large number of friends gathering at the station to shower them with good wishes and confetti. They will live for the next two years in Chicago where Mr. Sibley will take his theological course. In travelling the bride wore a very smart and becoming suit of dark blue and dark blue hat of velvet.

WHEN SIR WILFRID WAS IN THIS CITY IN 1903

e Building of the Transcontinental Was Then His Pet Project, But he Turned His Back on That Public Work When he Embraced Reciprocity—Nothing Said of the Pact in the Street Decorations.

Talking of spirits, the Ghost of an address made by a public man, years ago often parades its unsightly proportions before him, to his annoyance. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, on his last appearance in Peterboro, in 1903, made a speech the shades of which may confront him when he faces his audience to-night.

Circumstances were different then with the Liberal leader. He was in power and one of the great public works in which he was engaged was the construction of the Transcontinental Railway. He was filled with enthusiasm over that gigantic project, which he assured the people could be completed for $13,000,000.

The then premier painted a picture of the future of the Dominion, when the [illegible] traffic route was in operation, east and west were to be united more [illegible] than ever. Trade was to be from the Pacific to the Atlantic, and vice versa. No time was to be lost.

"I hope to God I am not too late," declared Sir Wilfrid in one of those dramatic outbursts for which he has ever been famous.

When the sum of over two hundred million dollars had been expended on the new work, Sir Wilfrid suddenly changed his policy. He declared for reciprocity with the United States, which, had it been given effect, would have to a great extent ruined not only the railway in the estimated cost of which Sir Wilfrid and his colleagues blundered, but the other Transcontinental lines.

Hon. Charles Murphy will be one of the speakers to-night, and, following his usual custom of late, will discuss the present construction methods employed on the Transcontinental. Can he not possibly find time to explain just how the former administration blundered in their estimates, and why they proposed to relegate it to the scrap heap by advocating a policy that would render the costly construction practically useless.

IS THIS A NEW POLICY?

Stretched across George street says: "Laurier and a larger Canada." Is this a new policy or only the usual Grit idea of one?

IS THIS GOOD TASTE?

The word Reciprocity does not appear on George street. Is it good taste to suggest to a leader that be had better "forget something"?

OUT OF THE BUSINESS.

The man who Warren says introduced Travers to him will not introduce anybody this evening.

WOULD PUT THE FARMER OUT OF BUSINESS.

The Liberal party has declared in favor of more American farm produce. Isn't it enough to have foreign competition with our own farm produce without trying to put the Canadian farmer out of business altogether.

IS THIS FAIR?

Carloads of American butter, eggs and poultry are coming into this district at the present time. Yet the Liberal party wants Reciprocity in farm produce, but not in manufactures. Is that fair?

SQUARE DEAL POLICY WANTED

Isn't it about time that even the Liberal leaders declared for a good all-Canadian, all round, square deal policy generally. Attacks on wind mills and other myths may fill rinks, but not brains or pockets.

MONEY CAN'T BUY EVERYTHING

Some men keep from sinking out of sight in their own mire by hanging to respectable men's coat tails. It is the easy way [illegible] can't buy a good name or the world's respect. "Give a dog a bad name and hang him," is an old saying.

Miss Wylie Is Elusive.

Montreal, Oct. 1.—The question of the whereabouts of Miss Wylie, the suffragette, was settled yesterday afternoon, when it was found that when she left the Windsor Hotel, instead of going out of town, she merely went to a hotel that was less known, in the hope of avoiding the attention curious people have been devoting to her.

Miss Wylie said she would probably address a meeting here.

C.P.R. AFTER PROPERTY WHERE TEMPERANCE HOTEL STANDS

It is understood that the C.P.R. contemplate an extension of their yards for shunting purposes, and that they intend, if possible, to secure the land where the Foster Temperance House now stands. If successful in their negotiations, it will mean that the building there will be moved or torn down. The deal for the purchase of the land has not been put through, and the lessee of the building, and the executors of the Cooke Estate and the C.P.R. are said to have the matter under discussion. The Temperance House is leased by Mr. W. J. Overend, and the land is owned by the Cooke Estate.

Mr. Foster proprietor of the Temperance House under Mr. Overend's lease, must vacate the premises by Oct. 12th. when the lease which is a renewable one expires.

SAY THEY HAVE THEM

Chicago Police Claim That the Bank Robbers are Captured

Chicago, Oct. 1.—Information that $170,000 of the money stolen from the Bank of Montreal at New Westminster may be now in possession of two men, one a well-known business man here, was given Assistant Chief Schuettler by Jeannette Little. She is the reputed wife of Jim Stacey, under arrest in St. Louis in connection with the robbery. She said the two had the money, or at least the knowledge of where it is. The identity of the business man is kept secret by the police.

The second man implicated by the woman is said to have a criminal record. The police are searching for both. The business man is reported to have disappeared after the search for the bank robber became hot. Detectives say that the woman has only begun her revelation and that through her they may round up the entire gang.

Tighten Grip on Stocey.

St. Louis, Oct. 1.—To prevent the possible release of James W. Stacey, alias Frank West, alias "Doc" Danzell, on a writ of habeas corpus, the police here yesterday applied for a fugitive warrant charging the man wanted in connection with the $271,000 Canadian bank robbery case with attacking Police Lieut. B. J. Burns in Chicago two weeks ago.

The discovery of a memorandum book in the room formerly occupied by the suspect, and Jeannette Little, the woman arrested at Edwardsville, Ills., will aid, it is believed, in capturing other members of the gang.

ROOSEVELT'S LETTERS.

Correspondence With Harriman Read at Enquiry.

Washington, Oct. 1.—All the correspondence between President Roosevelt and the late E. H. Harriman, covering the period from Mr. Roosevelt's succession to the office in 1901 until Mr. Harriman's differences with him in 1906, was placed in evidence yesterday before the Senate committee investigating campaign expenditures.

Out of the scores of letters covering every subject from exhibits of Indian pictures to the appointment of federal judges and territorial governors in Arizona, the Senate committee was able to secure little new light bearing upon the subject of campaign contributions or the disputed question of whether or not President Roosevelt had specifically asked Mr. Harriman in 1904 to raise a fund of $240,000 for the aid of his campaign.

C. C. Tegethoff, now agent for the Harriman estate, and former private secretary to Mr. Harriman, and C. A. Peabody, president of the Mutual Life Insurance Co., and personal attorney for Mrs. Harriman in the administration of the estate, both testified that Mr. Harriman had told them the raising of the big campaign fund had been undertaken at President Roosevelt's request, a statement which Mr. Harriman made before his death, but which was denied by President Roosevelt.

Aside from the file of letters given the committee, no documentary evidence was offered, however, and out of the many letters, none was produced except that written by Mr. Harriman, to Sidney Webster, Jan. 2, 1906, that in any way bore upon the charge that President Roosevelt had asked the railroad man to raise funds.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

The Marchioness of Dufferin presided at a meeting of women in Ulster Hall at Belfast in opposition to home rule. Fiery protests were voiced against the measure.

A growth of 1,338 in the population of St. Catharines, and an increase of $2,588,392 in the assessment during the past year, is reported. The population now totals 14,741.

Anatole Poindron, formerly commercial agent of the Canadian Government in France, committed suicide in Paris, by blowing out his brains, following the death of his wife.

That Windsor, Ont., is losing a considerable portion of its population as the result of an extreme shortage of workingmen's homes is the information forthcoming from a well-informed source.

The Hamilton Council, by a vote of 11 to 10, yesterday decided to join with other municipalities in petitioning the Ontario Government to give them power to exempt improvement to a certain extent from taxation, and to assess land at its full market value.

Crushed In Mine.

Thetford Mines, Que., Oct. 1.—A. Corriveau was killed while at work in Jacobs' asbestos mine yesterday. He was stripping clay off the face of rock when a slide took place and he was crushed to death under several tons of earth.

SIR WILFRID AT CORNWALL

Cornwall, Oct. 1.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier opened his tour of Ontario here last night by holding a meeting in the Victoria skating rink. In all there were between 3,000 and 4,000 people present. Several hundred came from Brockville and intermediate points, while others came from the east. Sir Wilfrid devoted most of his speech to the naval question.

"We wait for the policy of the Government," said the Liberal leader, "and will judge it on its merits—on its merits, I repeat. We will support it if it is right, and oppose it if it is wrong, but the judgment shall be given upon merit, and not upon passion or prejudice.

"In the meantime—and while we continue to wait, and wait, and wait—we stand where we have stood right along. Our policy is a Canadian navy, built in Canada, equipped in Canada, manned in Canada, under the control of the Canadian Parliament, and the Canadian people, and ready if Britain should ever be in danger—I will not say that—if Britain should ever be on trial—to do its part, as a loyal daughter of the old Motherland."

Sir Wilfrid was gratified to learn that at last Mr. Borden had come to a realization that Canada had become a nation. Nationhood involved the responsibilities of nationhood. It had an obligation in the defence of its own territory. Canada had a thousand miles of coast line on the Pacific which was absolutely defenceless, and a similar condition obtained on the Atlantic coast line.

When he visited the Imperial Conference in London in 1902 Sir Wilfrid had taken this matter up with the Imperial Government. The British Government represented that they would welcome action. "This we believed was right and proper," said Sir Wilfrid, "and we forthwith took over the defences at Halifax and Esquimault, and took the ground that as we developed in wealth and population we would undertake a navy of our own."

In concluding his address, the Liberal leader dealt briefly with the justification of the Senate in amending the Government highways and subsidies bills.

Hon. Messrs. Murphy and Graham concluded the meeting with vigorous speeches.

Brantford Has 26,377.

Brantford, Oct. 1.—Brantford jumped in population 1,233 during the year, according to figures submitted by the assessment department here last night, the population of the city now being 26,377.

If the effort to annex the suburban district is successful, the population will be over the 30,000 mark.

The increase in assessment during the year was over two million dollar

St. Bernard, Que., Oct. 2.—All of the ten children of Alexandre Gravel were burned to death in their home here early this morning while the father and mother were absent at a dance. The children ranged in age from fifteen years to eighteen months.

The parents discovered the house on fire as they returned home and made a frantic effort to rescue the children without avail. The piteous cries of the children maddened them, and they had to be restrained from flinging themselves into the flames. The skulls of the eldest and youngest children have been found.

TURKS FIRE FIRST SHOT AT SERVIA

Belgrade, Oct. 2—A patrol of fifty Turkish soldiers, are reported to have fired into the Servian frontier town of Rushka to-day, sweeping it with repeated volleys and causing the inhabitants to flee.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER.

The star attraction at the Liberal Rally last night.

TURKEY IS PREPARING FOR WAR WITH BALKAN ALLIES

Servia Has Refused to Allow Ammunition From Germany to Pass Through Her Territory and Bulgaria Is Holding Up All Freight Bound for Turkey—Ferdinand Is Chief of the United Balkan Armies.

Constantinople, Oct. 2.—The Cabinet, after a prolonged meeting last night, decided to order a partial, not general, mobilization of the Turkish army. The exact orders are for the present secret.

The Cabinet also rejected the Servian demand respecting the transport of ammunition through Turkish lines. This action is in reply to a note sent to the Porte by the Servian Minister, Dr. Nenadovitch, in which he requested the Porte either to sanction the passage of ammunition, at present detained by the Turkish authorities, or return it to France.

Servia has now stopped consignments of ammunition from Germany to Turkey, while Bulgaria has suspended freight traffic between Turkey and Bulgaria and commandeered all the cars for military purposes.

Although no communication has yet been presented to the Porte by any of the Balkan states with reference to Macedonia, it is the opinion of an influential section of the diplomats here that they will formulate a demand for Macedonian autonomy, which Turkey is certain to refuse. War will then be inevitable unless the powers succeeded in restraining Bulgaria and Servia most effectively by a threat of occupation by Austria and Russia of these two kingdoms if they embark on hostilities against Turkey. But it is doubtful if they will be unable to agree on such joint action. Consequently it is regarded as not improbable that Austria, backed by Germany, will act singly. Or it may be that war can be stayed off by assembling a European conference.

On the other hand, there is a section of the diplomats in Constantinople which believes that the Bulgarian and Servian mobilization and Greece's military preparations are merely a bluff, designed to frighten Turkey into instituting sweeping reforms in Macedonia.

The council of Ministers sat throughout the day from 10 o'clock in the morning. In addition to the Ministers, Hadi Pasha, the chief of staff, and Abdullah Pasha, the commander of the reserves in European Turkey, were present.

It is reported that the Turkish Government is about to address a circular to the powers in which it repudiates responsibility for the crisis which it says has occurred in consequence of the provocative attitude of the Balkan states.

Crown Prince to Lead Greek Army.

Athens, Oct. 2.—Crown Prince Constantine has taken the oath as generalissimo of the Greek army. He at one time held the post of commander-in-chief, but in 1909 the army reform bills passed by the Chamber of Deputies, abolished his right to hold the office.

Latterly Prince Constantine has been inspector-general of the army.

King Ferdinand to Command Forces

London, Oct. 2.—A despatch from Sofia says that a convention between Bulgaria, Servia, Montenegro and Greece has named King Ferdinand as chief of the united armies of the Balkan states.

Crete Will Join Greece.

Canea, Crete, Oct. 2.—The Cretan Government has admitted to the foreign consuls its intention to join with Greece in the action against Turkey. On the consuls pointing out the possible consequences of such action, they were informed that the Cretans had determined to share in the fate of the mother country.

Servia Confiscates Autos.

Belgade, Servia, Oct. 2.—Troop trains were leaving the capital all night long for garisorn towns near the Turkish frontier.

Many business houses in this city have been compelled to close on account of their employes having been ordered to join their regiments. The street railway service also has been suspended, as it is worked largely by army reservists.

The owners of automobiles throughout Servia have been ordered to surrender them immediately to the military authorities.

Red Cross to the Front.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 2.—An extensive hospital equipment has been prepared in Russia for service in Bulgaria and Servia in the event of war.

The mobilization department of the Russian Red Cross Society has made all arrangements for the sending of two field hospitals of two hundred beds each and [illegible] tals of fifty beds each, with a full complement of surgeons and nurses to the front.

Montenegrins Mobilize.

Vienna, Austria, Oct. 2.—King Nicholas of Montenegro yesterday ordered the general mobilization of the Montenegrin forces, according to a despatch received from Cettinje.

Polish Reservists Called Out.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 2.—An imperial ukase was published yesterday calling to the colors the reservists in twenty-two districts in Poland as a test of mobolization. The call, it is calculated, applies to 221,650 men. The ukase states that the reservists are called simply to test the percentage of arrivals and the time consumed, after which they may depart for home.

An official note explains that the trial mobilization was decided upon last spring, and has no reference to the tense situation in the near east, pointing out that there is no mobilization of horses and wagons.

SIR WILFRID AND HIS STAFF AT THE BROCK STREET RINK

The Liberal Chieftain Spoke Mainly on the Naval Question and Dodged the Issue Which He Once Considered Canada's Only Hope--Messrs Murphy, Fisher, King and Graham Appeared In Their Usual Roles.

Curiosity and interest shared equally in the visit of Sir Wilfrid Laurier to Peterborough, and as there were no other events of local interest called for last night, people crowded the Brock street rink to hear the former premier and his colleagues.

The big demonstration that was to be, was not what could be termed a howling success, as there were few people prepared to howl. The crowds along the street, looked in vain for the spectacle of many torch lights, autoes and a long procession of stalwart supporters of the Liberal party.

The reception to Sir Wilfrid at the C.P.R. station was enthusiastic enough and he and his party received a warm reception as they appeared on the platform, provided in the Roller Rink.

The seating accommodation had been well arranged and the big crowd was able to listen to the spectators with every comfort possible. When it was seen that the crowd was to be particularly large, it was decided to open the Opera House and Sir Wilfrid with the other speakers of the evening were heard at both places.

The ladies turned out in large numbers, and made up half of the attendance at the rink and opera house.

Mr. J. J. Hartley, president of the Peterborough Association, was chairman, and he introduced each speaker.

As Sir Wilfrid arose to speak, he was presented with a large bouquet of roses by Miss Audrey Huycke, the young daughter of His Honor Judge Huycke.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER.

It was in Ontario that Sir Wilfrid Laurier met with his most signal reverse one year ago and Peterborough did its part in effecting his downfall. Now that the Liberal chieftain has undertaken to stump Ontario he has at least modified the policy which proved so ruinous to himself and party. Upon his first appearance in this province on his present tour, which appearance was at Cornwall Monday night he made no reference to Reciprocity either directly or indirectly, but confined himself to an academic discussion of the navy question.

It was the same at the Brock street rink last night. Not one of the speakers, the leader included, referred to the Pact by name and only one, Hon. Mackenzie King, made any reference whatever to the question of wider markets and the allusion was brief and mild.

Sir Wilfrid is vigorous and eloquent as ever. When he appeared before the audience last night he was, of course, cheered, but the audience of over 4,000 was large enough to make a louder noise if they had been inspired with the proper degree of enthusiasm. He made one of his characteristic speeches counselling that all elements unite for the advancement of Canada as a nation, and that religious and and race differences be buried out of sight. He admitted that he was defeated last September, an admission that was justified by the returns, but claimed that the people had thrown him overboard because they were misguided and because they had been led away from the consideration of the main issue by error and prejudice. He was tempted to say that he was glad that he had been defeated as his defeat had served to show up his opponents in their true colors. Sir Wilfrid's address, as at Cornwall the previous evening, was largely devoted to the naval question along the same lines which he has followed whenever he takes that subject up. He criticized the policy of the present administration, assuming all his premises and making a guess where definite information was lacking. His own policy with regard to a navy was upheld as the ideal one. He declared, however, that when Mr. Borden's policy is disclosed he will favor it if it is better than his own, something the Liberal leader seems to regard as an impossibility.

Sir Wilfrid is hopeful for the future, at least he says he is, even in the face of overwhelming defeat. He doesn't know when the next general election is to be held, but it cannot be later than 1915, and may be much earlier. In any case he will be there to try it again and has, he says, nothing to fear for the result.

MR. J. R. STRATTON.

The first speaker introduced by Chairman Hartley last night was Mr. J. R. Stratton, who fairly bristled with statistics. He quoted figures to show how this city has grown since 1896 when the Liberals carried the country for the first time, and brought his statement down to the close of last year where he abruptly cut it off. Mr. Stratton did not appear to consider it good policy to call attention to the fact that Peterborough has grown in population and that the city's assessed valuation has increased, during the present year. The information was easily available, seeing that it was widely published no later than yesterday. Of course Sir Wilfrid Laurier was given all the praise and all the gory for the development of Peterborough.

HON. CHARLES MURPHY.

Former Secretary of State Charles Murphy sees rainbows in the clouds of defeat that envelope himself and his party. He declares that they were not defeated, but slandered out of office and he is sanguine that on the very first opportunity the verdict given by the people a year ago will be reversed. Then once more were submitted the deadly figures with important omissions. Mr Murphy cited the elections held since Sept. 21, 1911, the by-election in Renfrew in which Hon. George P. Graham was rescued from an untimely political grave; the election in Quebec, the by-election in Alberta and the party victory in Saskatchewan. In the heat of the moment Mr. Murphy probably forgot all about the landslide in New Brunswick. At all events he made no reference to it.

Since starting out on the present tour Mr. Murphy, never before suspected of expert knowledge on such matters, has devoted a good deal of talk to the construction of the Transcontinental railway as at present conducted. He has asserted time and again that Hon. Frank Cochrane and his employer are degrading that roadbed tearing up what their predecessors had put down, depressing the grade here and elevating it there and otherwise conducting themselves as mere novices would be expected to do. Hitherto Mr. Murphy has offered no explanation for such a course on the part of the present builders. He did not tell the public whether Mr. Cochrane and the rest of them were acting through incompetency or sheer wantoness.

Last night Mr. Murphy let the cat out of the bag. He says Mr. Cochrane is playing into the hands of the C.P.R. He is degrading the people's road in the interests of a powerful rival an assertion as unwarranted as any of the other wild statements made by the ex-Secretary of State during the course of his address when he took up the members of the present government man by man from Premier Borden down and heaped upon their devoted heads the contumely of which Mr. Murphy possessed a supply that is apparently inexhaustible. No one was spared.

HON. SIDNEY FISHER.

The former minister of agriculture had more figures concealed about his person when he rose to speak than those that had been produced by Mr. Stratton. The audience was getting impatient. The versatile Mr. Murphy had exceeded his time limit, the hall was cold the hour was late, but still Mr. Fisher read and talked until the nerves of his hearers could stand it no longer. They began to stamp to whistle, and to call for Laurier but Mr. Fisher refused to yield. On the contrary he gratuitously insulted the Conservatives in the audience when he said:

"I believe there are some of our opponents present. It is like them to come here to make trouble and create a disturbance."

It was Mr. Fisher's own friends who were getting impatient and clamoring for the chief speaker of the evening. They knew when they had had enough although the speaker seemed unable to realize that fact and persisted in holding the boards. People began to leave the hall and finally the calls for Laurier became so uproarious that Mr. Fisher cut off in the middle of a flowery statistical sentence was obliged to take his seat. He got the cheer of the evening when he finally desisted.

HON. MACKENZIE KING.

It was delegated by the travelling quintette of the unterrified to Hon. Mackenzie King or Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King if you want all of it to make direct reference to the once paramount question of wider markets. Mr. King is an ambitious young man with a remarkable flow of ornate oratory. He dragged into the discussion President Gourlay of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association when he quoted from the address of that gentleman at the recent banquet [illegible] when Mr. Gourlay said th[illegible] to have Canada made [illegible] in Canada but that they should be offered for sale in the other markets of the world.

"If that is so" declared Mr. King,

Struck by Train.

Belleville, Oct. 2.—J. Bradshaw of Thurlow Township, yesterday escaped death in a miraculous manner. He was delivering milk to Thurlow cheese factory, and had occasion to drive over the G.T.R. track about two miles east of the city. Bradshaw, as he drove upon the track, did not notice a westbound freight train which came along at this time, at a fair rate of speed. The engine struck the team, killing both horses and also demolishing the wagon.

The occupant was thrown off from the track for some distance and fortunately escaped serious injuries.

Mr. Bradshaw claims he was suddenly taken with a weak spell and did not hear the train approaching.

FARMER SHOT HIS WIFE AND THEN SUICIDES

West Pelham, Mass., Oct. 2.—George Shaw, a wealthy farmer, shot his wife, Jennie E. Shaw, probably fatally, here yesterday, and then blew himself to pieces with dynamite, which he placed in a stump and sat upon.

Mrs. Shaw had come from Hartford, Conn., to place flowers on her son's grave. Shaw, who was about 50 years of age, had not seen his wife since January, 1911, when she left him, until she drove past him in a carriage near his home yesterday. She was accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. H. W. Griffin, of Chicopee, and Mrs. Wm. Barnes, of Springfield. All carried flowers, which were to be placed on the grave in the West Pelham cemetery.

Following his wife later he caught up with her in the dooryard of the caretaker of the cemetery and began firing at his wife with a revolver as she sat in her carriage.

The horses of both teams became frightened and ran away. Mrs. Shaw's horse threw the three women out. Shaw ran up to his wife when she fell and pounded her over the head with his fists and with the revolver until she was insensible.

Leaving her apparently dead, the man made his way across the fields to his home a mile and a half away. When search was made for him a little later a strong smell of dynamite was noticed near his house and in an open lot at the rear bits of his body were found scattered.

Investigation showed that Shaw visited a steam sawmill behind his house and had taken away several sticks of dynamite.

GALT ROBE FACTORY SWEPT BY BAD FIRE

Galt, Oct. 2.—At 5 a.m., fire broke out in Galt robe factory, North Water street, and within two hours entirely destroyed the buildings and plant, causing a loss of $150,000, on which is insurance totaling $90,000; 75 employes are out of work.

The institution was owned and controlled by Newlands & Co., who have an extensive factory devoted to woollen fabrics on Ainsley street. The company had a large lot of new machinery stored awaiting additions to the robe works building. The firm will likely rebuild.

Mr. Stauffer, manager of the Newlands Co., has been telegraphed to at Vancouver.

The origin of the fire is unknown. It was discovered late and the firemen had no chance to cope with the flames, more especially as the water supply was inadequate. At the pumping station 120 pounds was registered and yet the hose failed to throw 30 feet. An investigation is in progress to discover the cause of this remarkable condition of service.

For years Galt has been immune from serious fires, and the present disastrous conflagration will probably rouse the council to reorganization of the fire protection system and better handling of the water supply service. Galt has no fire alarm telegraph, no steam engine and only a call brigade. It was the first time in the history of the waterworks that the fire supply had failed. Large extensions are constantly being made and a new management installed recently. The supposition that a block in the main caused the trouble, resulting in the present heavy loss.

LOSS ONE MILLION

Valuable Pier Wiped Out by Fire in Philadelphia

Philadelphia, Oct. 2.—Property valued at $1,000,000 was destroyed by flames which swept pier 80, South Wharves, at the foot of Snyder avenue here yesterday, in one of the most spectacular fires that ever occurred on the Delaware River front. The pier, which was owned by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and valued at $350,000, was entirely destroyed. Merchandise loaded on the structure was valued at an equal amount, and the adjoining property was damaged to the extent of more than a quarter of a [illegible] end of the pier, had their escape to the shore cut off by the rapid spread of the flames, which are supposed to have been due to crossed electric wires. The men were rescued by tugs.

Train Running Forty Miles an Hour When Car Jumped Track—Another Passenger Fatally Injured and Fifteen Have Miraculous Escape

Special to the Review.

Kingston, Oct. 2 — Mrs. Alfred Brown, of Moscow, was killed, and Mrs. Fabland, Clam Falls, Wis, was probably fatally injured when the incoming train from Tweed of the Bay of Quinte railway, left the tracks, four miles from Kingston, on the Kingston and Pembroke railway this morning. Fifteen other passengers on the train escaped miraculously as the car plunged down a steep embankment. Conductor Marshall Parks, in charge of the train, was pinned under a heavy safe, but escaped with slight injuries. The train was running forty miles an hour, when the box car, second from the locomotive, left the track.

ANOTHER GUESS AT THE NAVY POLICY COMES FROM THE WEST

The Latest is That Premier Borden Will Ask for Grant of Twenty Million to be Used for Building Warships at Halifax by English Company

Winnipeg, Oct. 2—The Free Press quotes a man in the confidence of the Roblin Government, which it says, is acquainted with the Borden navy plans. It states that the naval proposals to be presented to Parliament shortly, will consist primarily of an act authorizing the government to raise twenty million dollars for naval purposes, not all at once, but as required. Part of the money is to be applied to the building of one if not two Dreadnoughts, possibly by an English shipbuilding company to be located at Halifax, if it is assured of sufficient government work.

TORONTO MOTORIST RAN DOWN A FOUR YEAR OLD CHILD

Della McGoey, Aged Four Years, Tried to Run Across Yonge Street When She Was Struck and Died While Being Taken to the Hospital—Crimean Veteran Killed by Street Car In Hamilton.

Toronto, Oct. 2.—Intent only on beating her cousin in a race little Della McGoey, four years, ran to her death in front of a motor car at 3.45 yesterday afternoon. James Scott, driver of the car, is under arrest on a charge of manslaughter.

The accident happened at the corner of St. Mary's and Yonge street. With her cousin, James Leonard, who lives next door, Della was returning home from St. Basil's School. The two started to race. Della was in the lead, but when they reached Yonge street the boy stopped at the edge of the pavement.

Failing to notice the approach of the machine, the little girl ran out into the street, with the intention of making her home at 31 McMurrich street before Leonard reached her. The car knocked her down and one wheel passed over her neck.

She was rushed to the hospital for sick children. When the ambulance arrived there, however, the little girl was dead.

Scott states that he was only fifteen paces away when he saw the child. He attempted to swerve, but the distance was too short to prevent an accident. Later he surrendered himself to Detective Twigg.

The police took charge of the car and have retained S. Visick, an expert at 45 St. Vincent street, to make a test of the machine. Dr. Elliot will open an inquest at the morgue this afternoon and Mr. Visick will testify as to the possibilities of swerving in a distance of 15 paces.

Crimean Veteran Killed.

Hamilton, Oct. 2.—George H. Pidgeon, 94 years of age, a veteran of the Crimean war and well known in the city, was instantly killed about 10.30 last night, when he was struck by an eastbound street car at the corner of York and Locomotive streets.

Pidgeon had been to a down town show and was walking home when he met his death. The motorman of the street car stated that he rang the gong of his car when he say the old man was on the track, and at the sound of the bell, Pidgeon stopped in the middle of the track and was struck and thrown to the side of the tracks before the car could be stopped.

Pidgeon's skull was fractured and he was dead when picked up a moment later. The police ambulance was called and conveyed the body to the city morgue. Coroner Anderson will open an inquest into the man's death to-day. Pidgeon came to Canada in the late 60's, after having served as a British soldier throughout the Crimean war, in which he attained the rank of sergeant. At the time of the Fenian Raid, he enlisted with the Canadian volunteers, who opposed the intruders. For many years he served in the Canada customs department, until he was superannuated several years ago.

SOUR RISINGS FROM STOMACH

Those Who Experience Fullness and Pain After Meals, Stomach Disorders, and Indigestion, Should Read Below.

"When I was working around the farm last winter I had an attack of inflammation," writes Mr. E. P. Dawkins, of Port Richmond. "I was weak for a long time, but well enough to work until spring. But something went wrong with my bowels, for I had to use salts or physic all the time. My stomach kept sour, and always after eating there was pain and fulness, and all the symptoms of intestinal indigestion. Nothing helped me until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Instead of hurting, like other pills, they acted very mildly, and seemed to heal the bowels. I did not require large doses to get results with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and feel so glad that I have found a mild yet certain remedy. Today I am well—no pain, no sour stomach, a good appetite, able to digest anything. This is a whole lot of good for one medicine to do, and I can say Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the best pills, and my letter, I am sure, proves it."

THE LIBERAL TOUR

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has nerve. He was overwhelmingly defeated a year ago and nothing daunted apparently, blindly refusing to accept the verdict of the electors, and to profit by the lesson read to him he is in the field again essaying to thrust himself once more upon the people. Other statesmen who have with their policies been repudiated have had the grace to remain in the back ground until at least the worst of the tempest had cleared away.

Not so with the irrepressible Sir Wilfrid. He refuses to die game or to acknowledge that his defeat was a fair one. He even questions the good sense of the people who overthrew him from his pedestial of power. Sometimes he insinuates that they were misguided. At other times he prays that they may be forgiven their politicial trespasses, seeing that they sinned blindly, not knowing what they did.

Selecting a quartette of his defeated and discredited followers chosen out of the remnant probably for their vitrolic brand of oratory, the Liberal leader starts on a tour of the country. At first the itinerary provided for a tour of the west where the text of the speeches was to have been Reciprocity. The local leaders of the party in that section knowing better than the leader what the feeling is in that part of the Dominion interposed an objection and the west as a stamping ground was abandoned.

Up in New Ontario the reception given the orators was, in a good many cases, in the nature of a frost. When they reached the older section of the province and opened fire in Cornwall, they changed their mode of attack. The trade question was buried and the naval issue was made paramount. When the coterie reached this city the same program was followed. There was no preaching of the needs of wider market in a community where produce of all kinds is pouring in from the United States.

The itinerant five furnish an example of what an ideal mutual admiration society should be. They rejoice in showering praise upon each other dwelling upon their individual prowess and their achievements in the past. They are the ideal statesmen, the only true patriots, the only public men, charitable in their religious views and in their sentiments for the creed of all men.

That's what they say about themselves. When it comes to describing their successful opponents, its a different matter. Even the leader himself, at last night's meeting, set his followers an unworthy example by referring slightingly to his successor in office, by questioning the honesty of his every purpose and casting slurs at his attitude on every important public question. Mr. Murphy singled out the members of the cabinet by name and gave them anything but a blessing. Mr. King selected three cabinet ministers and made them the objects of personal attack. Mr. Graham came nearer to the homes of his auditors and assailed the local member who defeated the speaker's personal and political friend.

The touring five are not advocating any policy. They appear to have none. They are ladling out vituperation and abuse, passing through the country stirring up the very sectional race and religious differences which they profess to deplore, they are leaving behind them a slimy trail of hate.

BAITING THE RAILWAYS

The Weekly Financial Review, published in New York, says of the railway situation in the United States:

"The American railroad situation is gradually brightening. For a long period the railroad section of the stock market has been enshrouded in doubt. In all probability the Arbitration Board which has been considering the demands of the engineers will grant the latter some concessions. Whether or not the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington will allow the roads to compensate themselves for these losses by some advances in rates is not yet made public. The claims of the railroads in this respect are strongly entitled to consideration, because everything they purchase has risen in cost, while the only thing they have to sell, transportation, remains practically unchanged in price, and requests for advances have been repeatedly denied. This policy on the part of the Interstate Commission is neither sound business nor sound politics. Such a policy if persisted in would in time inevitably lead to bankruptcy, should it happen that the roads were unable to recoup themselves by an increase of traffic. Business conditions just now are exceptionally favorable; otherwise many of the roads, particularly those in the weaker class, would have been involved in financial difficulties. If the roads were owned by the Government, rates would certainly have been advanced long ago to compensate for the concessions already made to labor, and there is no reason why the roads should be treated less favorably simply because they are operated as private enterprises. But quite apart from the justice or injustice of the present attitude of the Government is the future of American railroads upon which the development of the entire country so absolutely depends. If the transportation systems of the country are to be starved and their natural development retarded industry and commerce will correspondingly suffer. Such a result with all its accompanying derangement and discontent is inevitable if the necessary development of transportation is denied. At present the railroad facilities of the country are in many respects notoriously inadequate, and the demands for transportation are fast pressing ahead of the abilities of the roads to meet them."

The above must be regarded as an able argument against the senseless policy of keeping up an agitation against the railroads of any country for political or other reasons. If a country is prosperous and is to continue so the railways must be given the opportunity to do business without unwarranted and unjustifiable molestation from the politicians, the same opportunity which is afforded any other branch of public enterprise.

OMEMEE NEWS

Special Correspondence.

Omemee, Oct. 1.—On Friday afternoon prizes were awarded for last year's work in the forms of the public schools. Reeve Mulligan, Mr. W. H. Curry and T. W. McLean made the presentations. For highest proficiency in the term work of the Senior Fourth Class and highest standing on the Junior Entrance to High Schools' examinations, a beautiful gold medal, suitably inscribed, was presented to Jimmer Williamson. The second prize was donated by Mr. W. H. Curry for the best work in the school of the combined subjects of arithmetic and writing. This was a very handsome pair of nickeled skates and was captured by Marion Carey, after a spirited and close contest. The third award was for the Senior Third Grade, the highest percentage of the term and promotion examinations being necessary for the winner, who was Ernest Bushnell. Mr. T. C. Ivory, chairman of the Board of Education, was the donor of the third prize, which was a beautiful copy of Goldsmith's poems. The fourth and last prize was for the highest percentage in all subjects during the term and on the promotion examinations of the Senior Second Class. This was carried off by Willie White, who received a very handsomely engraved bronze medal.

The presentation exercises were enlivened by songs from the school, recitations by Reeve Mulligan, and a decidedly interesting retrospective talk on educational matters by Mr. W. H. Curry. The singing of the National Anthem concluded the proceedings.

Extreme happiness prevades the home of Mr. and Mrs. James McQuade, resultant from a visit of the stork, which brought them a fine baby boy.

Many farmers are not done harvest and the late grains are being cut with the mower, because of the extreme softness of the rain-saturated ground. Potatoes are magnificent in size and are plentiful, but rot has effected a certain proportion.

Mr. D. Stinson has increased the capacity of his business stand by the addition of the vacant store east on King street, which he has fitted up and put therein a grand display of stoves and their furnishings.

Last week Mr. and Mrs. Milton Sherin were overjoyed because of a visit from the stork, which presented them with a bonny wee girlie.

Children's Day service was held on Sabbath morning in the Presbyterian church. The Joy of Harvest was the title of a leaflet of the order of service, which was followed by an address on "Sowing and Reaping," by the pastor, Rev. D. H. Currie.

Reports from the west state that steel on the Tofield-Calgary branch of the Grand Trunk Pacific has now been laid as far south from the main line as Irricana and that the grade is now ready for entry into the latter place. A bridge at the Bow River about four miles out of Calgary is likely to delay track laying a little. This bridge is of steel construction and is to be erected by the Canadian Bridge Co. It is expected that it will be completed and the steel laid right into Calgary by the first of November.

Adventure

A Romance of The South Seas

BY JACK LONDON

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith
Copyright, 1911, by the Macmillan Company

Straight out they swam, their heads growing smaller and smaller. There was a slight restless heave to the sea, and soon the three heads were disappearing behind it with greater frequency. He strained his eyes to keep them in sight, and finally fetched the telescope on to the veranda. A squall was making over from the direction of Florida; but then she and her men laughed at squalls, and the white, choppy sea at such times.

The squall blackened the sky, beat the ocean white where he had last seen the three heads, and then blotted out sea and sky and everything with its deluge of rain. It passed on, and Berande emerged in the bright sunshine as the three swimmers emerged from the sea. Sheldon slipped inside with the telescope and through the screen door watched her run up the path, shaking down her hair as she ran, to the fresh water shower under the house.

On the veranda that afternoon he broached the proposition of a chaperon as delicately as he could, explaining the necessity at Berande for such a body, a housekeeper to run the boys and the storeroom and perform divers other useful functions. When he had finished he waited anxiously for what Joan would say.

"Then you don't like the way I've been managing the house?" was her first objection. And next, brushing his attempted explanations aside: "One of two things would happen. Either I should cancel our partnership agreement and go away, leaving you to get another chaperon to chaperon your chaperon, or else I'd take the old hen out in the whaleboat and drown her. Do you imagine for one moment that I sailed my schooner down here to this raw edge of the earth in order to put myself under a chaperon?"

"But, really—er—you know—a chaperon is a necessary evil," he objected.

"We've got along nicely so far without one. Did I have one on the Miele? And yet I was the only woman on board. There are only three things I am afraid of—bumblebees, scarlet fever and chaperon. Ugh, the clucking, evil minded monsters, finding wrong in everything, seeing sin in the most innocent actions and suggesting sin—yes, causing sin by their diseased imaginings!"

"Phew!" Sheldon leaned back from the table in mock fear.

"As if anything good were worth while when it has to be guarded and put in leg irons and handcuffs in order to keep it good. Your desire for a chaperon as much as implies that I am that sort of a creature. I prefer to be good because it is good to be good rather than because I can't be bad because some Argus eyed old frump won't let me have a chance to be bad."

"But it—it is not that," he put in. "It is what others will think."

"Let them think, the nasty minded wretches! It is because men like you are afraid of the nasty minded that you allow their opinions to rule you."

"I am afraid you are a female Shelley," he replied. "And as such you really drive me to become your partner in order to protect you."

"If you take me as a partner in order to protect me—I—I sha'n't be your partner, that's all. You'll drive me into buying Pari-Sulay yet."

"All the more reason"— he attempted.

"Do you know what I'll do?" she demanded. "I'll find some man in the Solomons who won't want to protect me."

Sheldon could not conceal the shock her words gave him.

"You don't mean that, you know," he pleaded.

"I do; I really do. I am sick and tired of this protection dodge. Don't forget for a moment that I am perfectly able to take care of myself. Besides, I have eight of the best protectors in the world—my sailors. You were living like a savage when I came along and found you—eating nothing but tinned meat and scones that would have ruined the digestion of a camel. Anyway, I've remedied that, and since we are to be partners, it will stay remedied. You won't die of malnutrition, be sure of that."

"If we enter into partnership," he announced, "it must be thoroughly understood that you are not allowed to run the schooner. You can go down to Sydney and buy her, but a skipper we must have"—

"At so much additional expense and most likely a whiskey drinking, irresponsible and incapable man to boot. Besides, I'd have the business more at heart than any man we could hire. As for capability, I tell you I can sail all around the average broken captain or promoted able seaman you find in the south seas. And you know I am a navigator."

"But being my partner," he said coolly, "makes you none the less a lady."

"Thank you for telling me that my contemplated conduct is unladylike."

She arose, tears of anger and mortification in her eyes, and went over to the phonograph.

"I wonder if all men are as ridiculous as you?" she said.

He shrugged his shoulders and smiled. Discussion was useless—he had learned that; and he was resolved to keep his temper. And before the day was out she capitulated. She was to go to Sydney on the first steamer, purchase the schooner, and sail back with an island skipper on board. And then she inveigled Sheldon into agreeing that she could take occasional cruises in the islands, though he was adamant when it came to a recruiting trip on Malaita. That was the one thing barred.

And after it was all over, and a terse and businesslike agreement (by her urging) drawn up and signed, Sheldon paced up and down for a full hour, meditating upon how many different kinds of a fool he had made of himself. He had never seen a more independent woman who stood more in need of a protector than this boy minded girl who had landed on his beach with eight picturesque savages, a long barreled revolver, a bag of gold, and a gaudy [illegible]

He had never read of anything to compare with it. He smoked cigarette after cigarette. Satan, back from a prowl around the compound, ran up to him and touched his hand with a cold, damp nose. Sheldon caressed the animal's ears, then threw himself into a chair and laughed heartily. What would the commissioner of the Solomons think? What would his people at home think? And in the one breath he was glad that the partnership had been effected and sorry that Joan Lackland had ever come to the Solomons. Then he went inside and looked at himself in a hand mirror. He studied the reflection long and thoughtfully and wonderingly.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE MARTHA.

THEY were deep in a game of billiards the next morning, after the 11 o'clock breakfast, when Viaburi entered and announced:

"Big fella schooner close up."

Even as he spoke, they heard the rumble of chain through hawse pipe, and from the veranda saw a big black painted schooner swinging to her just caught anchor.

"It's a Yankee," Joan cried. "See that bow! Look at that elliptical stern! Ah, I thought so"— as the stars and stripes fluttered to the masthead.

"Martha, San Francisco," Sheldon read, looking through the telescope. "It's the first Yankee I ever heard of in the Solomons. They are coming ashore, whoever they are. And, by Jove, look at those men at the oars. It's an all white crew. Now, what reason brings them here?"

"They're not proper sailors," Joan commented. "I'd be ashamed of a crew of black boys that pulled in such a fashion. Look at that fellow in the bow—the one just jumping out; he'd be more at home on a cow pony."

The boat's crew scattered up and down the beach, ranging about with eager curiosity, while the two men who had sat in the stern sheets opened the gate and came up the path to the bungalow. One of them, a tall and slender man, was clad in white ducks that fitted him like a semi-military uniform. The other man, in nondescript garments that were both of the sea and shore and that must have been uncomfortably hot, slouched and shambled like an overgrown ape. To complete the illusion, his face seemed to sprout in all directions with a dense bushy mass of red whiskers, while his eyes were small and sharp and restless.

Sheldon, who had gone to the head of the steps, introduced them to Joan. The bewhiskered individual, who looked like a Scotchman, had the Teutonic name of Von Blix and spoke with an American accent. The tall man in the well fitting ducks, who gave the English name of Tudor—John Tudor—talked purely enunciated English such as any cultured American would talk, save for the fact that it was most delicately and subtly touched by a faint German accent.

Von Blix was rough and boorish, but Tudor was gracefully easy in everything he did, or looked, or said.

They were on a gold hunting expedition. He was the leader and Tudor was his lieutenant. All hands—and there were twenty-eight—were shareholders, in varying proportions, in the adventure. Several were sailors, but the large majority were miners, culled from all the camps from Mexico to the Arctic ocean. It was the old and ever untiring pursuit of gold and they came to the Solomons to get it. Part of them, under the leadership of Tudor, were to go up the Balesuna and penetrate the mountainous heart of Guadalcanar, while the Martha, under Von Blix, sailed away for Malaita to put through similar exploration.

"And so," said Von Blix, "for Mr. Tudor's expedition we must have some black boys. Can we get them from you?"

"In the first place we can't spare them," Sheldon answered. "We are short of them on the plantation as it is."

"We?" Tudor asked quickly. "Then you are a firm or a partnership? I understood at Guvutu that you were alone, that you had lost your partner."

Sheldon inclined his head toward Joan, and as he spoke she felt that he had become a trifle stiff.

"Miss Lackland has become interested in the plantation since then. But to return to the boys. We can't spare them, and, besides, they would be of little use. You couldn't get them to accompany you beyond Binu, which is a short day's work with the boats from here. They are Malaita men, and they are afraid of being eaten. They would desert you at the first opportunity. You could get the Binu men to accompany you another day's journey through the grass lands, but at the first roll of the foothills look for them to turn back. They likewise are disinclined to being eaten."

"Is it as bad as that?" asked Von Blix.

"The interior of Guadalcanar has never been explored," Sheldon explained. "The bushmen are as wild men as are to be found anywhere in the world today. I have never seen one, I have never seen a man who has seen one. The Austrian expedition—scientists, you know—got part way in before it was cut to pieces. The monument is up the beach there several miles. Only one man got back to the coast to tell the tale. And now you have all I or any other man knows of the inside of Guadalcanar."

"But gold—have you heard of gold?" Tudor asked impatiently. "Do you know anything about gold?"

Sheldon smiled, while the two visitors hung eagerly upon his words.

"You can go two miles up the Balesuna and wash colors from the gravel. I've done it often. There is gold undoubtedly back in the mountains."

Tudor and Von Blix looked triumphantly at each other.

"Old Wheatsheaf's yarn was true, then," Tudor said, and Von Blix nodded. "And if Malaita turns out as well"—

Tudor broke off and looked at Joan.

"It was the tale of this old beachcomber that brought us here," he explained. "Von Blix befriended him and was told the secret." He turned and addressed Sheldon. "I think we shall prove that white men have been through the heart of Guadalcanar long before the time of the Austrian expedition."

Sheldon shrugged his shoulders.

"We have never heard of it down here," he said simply. Then he addressed Von Blix. "As to the boys, you couldn't use them farther than Binu, and I'll lend you as many as you want as far as that. How many of your party are going and how soon will you start?"

"Ten," said Tudor; "nine men and myself."

"And you should be able to start day after tomorrow," Von Blix said to him. "The boats should practically be knocked together this afternoon. Tomorrow should see the outfit portioned and packed. As for the Martha, Mr. Sheldon, we'll rush the stuff ashore this afternoon and sail by sundown."

As the two men returned down the path to their boat Sheldon regarded Joan quizzically.

"There's romance for you," he said, "and adventure—gold hunting among the cannibals. Aren't you sorry you became a cocoanut planter?"

"What do you think of them?" she asked.

"Oh, old Von Blix is all right, a solid sort of chap in his fashion; but Tudor is a flyaway—too much on the surface, you know. If it came to being wrecked on a desert island I'd prefer Von Blix."

"I don't quite understand," Joan objected. "What have you against Tudor?"

"A man of Tudor's type gets on my nerves. One demands more repose from a man."

Joan felt that she did not quite agree with his judgment, and, somehow, Sheldon caught her feeling and was disturbed. He remembered noting how her eyes had brightened as she talked with the newcomer.

A second boat had been lowered, and the outfit of the shore party was landed rapidly. A dozen of the crew put the knocked down boats together on the beach. There were five of these craft—lean and narrow, with flaring sides and remarkably long. Each was equipped with three paddles and several iron shod poles.

"You chaps certainly seem to know river work," Sheldon told one of the carpenters.

"We use 'em in Alaska. They're modeled after the Yukon poling boats, and you can bet your life they're crackerjacks. This creek'll be a snap alongside some of them northern streams. Five hundred pounds in one of them boats an' two men can snake it along in a way that'd surprise you."

ANOTHER PRISON FARM.

Hon. W. J. Hanna Is Trying Experiment In the North.

While the Central Prison Farm at Guelph has been developing a continental reputation for improved and successful methods in dealing with ordinary misdemeanants, a new and perhaps more ambitious scheme has been introduced by Hon. W. J. Hanna, Provincial Secretary, in northern Ontario. Six or eight miles from Fort William lies a tract of land comprising some six hundred acres, hitherto avoided as being unsuitable for agricultural purposes. Hon. Frank Cochrane, late Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, saw the land, found its value and immediately withdrew it from settlement. The tract has now been turned over to the Provincial Secretary for the purpose of another Central Prison. Unlike the Guelph Farm, however, the Fort William proposition was virgin land, uncleared and untouched.

On June 6 last a party of men went on, not criminals, just ordinary misdemeanants — first offenders. They set to work. First, tents had to be erected and provision made for eating and sleeping the gang. The first field of seven acres was cleared by June 8. When the organization was perfected they went to work, sixty of them in all, brawny, willing, delighted to be out in the air. In a few days they made a big dent in the surrounding forest, and are now clearing at the rate of three acres a day. Field crops have been put in, buildings erected for the winter and some permanency given to the settlement. The scheme is just unfolding, and the way they go at it is proof that they prefer their work to jail yards.

Three acres a day and more! What will it lead to? Those who are prating about prepared farms, clearings with a little shack and a barn where a settler can go in and get busy at once on his land, these are some of the things that may result from the new idea. At the present time the men are giving the province a better return than if they were held behind brick walls, and the province is giving the men a better chance to start right again, and the settler, too, in the long run is benefited. Perhaps this is a bigger scheme than it looks, and Fort William may see an agricultural development that will startle the remainder of the province.—Toronto Globe.

A Tramp Newsie.

Pittsie Ryan, a newsboy, left Montreal recently on the second stage of his trip around the world from Edmonton, Alta., for a purse of thirty thousand dollars. Pittsie was in Montreal for four days selling papers on St. James street and his attempted exploits so captivated the newsboys of the city that they formed a sort of trust with the traveler as receiver.

Pittsie started on his trip from Edmonton on April 28 without a cent in his pocket. He is to pay his way by selling papers and is to have in his pockets $500 on his return.

He is clad in a white suit with the inscription "Pittsburg Ryan, Edmonton, on a tour of the world," in black letters on the collar of the jacket.

He says that he has covered 2,800 miles since leaving Edmonton and he has sold papers in Calgary, Regina, Moose Jaw, Saskatoon, Portage la Prairie, Winnipeg, Kenora, Port Arthur, Ottawa, Toronto, Rochester and Montreal.

Pittsie Ryan is twenty-seven years of age and he has been a newsboy almost from the cradle. He went around the world in 1905-10 in four and a half years on the same terms as the present trip.

Asked how much he has saved since he commenced his present tour Pittsie said nothing yet. He was too busily engaged in attempting to secure enough money for his passage. At this juncture a young man who had been listening to his story to the reporter stepped forward, asked him to call at his office, and said he would get him a free passage to Great Britain.

Woman-Worship In the North.

James Oliver Curwood, author of "The Flower of the North," tells the following story about the men to be found in the country about Hudson Bay, where the scene of his story is laid: 'I was at Prince Albert," he says, "sitting on the verandah of the little old Windsor Hotel, facing the Saskatchewan. During the few days previous a number of factors, trappers, and half-breed canoemen had come down from the north. One of these men had not been down to the edge of civilization for seven years. Three of the others had not been down in two, and this was the annual trip of the other eight—for there were just eighteen of us sitting there together. We were smoking and talking when a young woman turned up the narrow walk leading to the verandah. Immediately every voice was hushed, and as the woman came up the steps those twelve, roughly-clad men of the wilderness rose to their feet to a man, each holding his cap in his hand. Thus they stood, silent and with bowed heads, until the young woman had passed into the hotel. It was the most beautiful tribute to womanhood I had ever seen. And I, the man from civilization, was the only one who remained sitting, with my hat still on my head!"

A Big Province.

With the recent addition, now known as Patricia, the province of Ontario, contains 407,262 square miles, an area fully three and one-third times that of the United Kingdom, and almost equal to France and Germany combined. This latter fact, perhaps, conveys more vividly than any other an idea of the vastness of the territory subject to the jurisdiction of the Provincial Government and Legislature.

$1,000,000 Building Permit.

The biggest permit issued in Winnipeg this year has been taken out by the National Construction Co. for the New Law Courts at Winnipeg. The permit was for $1,000,000. Work on the foundations has already been commenced.

A woman would like to have a good figure in order to show her contempt for those who haven't.

BANKING

When you take out a life insurance policy you make the biggest bank deposit you ever made in your life at one time. Did you ever put one thousand five hundred dollars through the receiving teller's wicket and say "put that to the credit of my account"? No. Well, the minute you sign the Insurance application for this amount and pay the first installment on your new bank account, you have actually provided that whole sum—ready waiting, for service against one big call that is coming to you sometime—the one on which you will never get any extension of time. That's banking in a new sense and banking with common sense and foresight.

The sun Life of Canada has no peer in the security and liberal results which they give.

YOU CAN BE ABSOLUTELY SURE OF VALUES

If you carefully read the store advertisements and follow them in your buying.

Merchants advertise certain lines because they know these lines will advertise their stores. Because there is something about certain goods, they are put in conspicuous places and the people are told about them. It may be the exclusiveness or newness of design, it may be an unusual quality, it may be an attractive price.

But there is at least one definite, sure reason why a merchant advertises an article and is willing to stake the reputation of his store upon it.

Therefore, when you see an article advertised in THE REVIEW, depend upon it, that article is good value, as good value as can be obtained in that particular store.

EDUCATION IN FARM WORK

The Eighth Annual Report of the Canadian Seed Growers Association which is now being distributed by the Publication Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, is replete with matters of interest, not only to those concerned in the production of high class seed, but to all who are interested in Rural progress generally. In addition to the report itself there are included several addresses by such prominent authorities as the Hon. Martin Burrell, Dr. J. W. Robertson, Prof. C. C. James, Prof. L. S. Klinck, J. H. Grisdale, etc. Of special interest, perhaps, is the paper presented by Mr. Rufus Stimson, agent of Agricultural Education, Boston, Mass., on "Vocational Agricultural Education for Boys and Girls." The means adopted in Massachusetts and other States of the Union in interesting the boys in farm work and in correlating the work of the school with ordinary farm work is most suggestive and should be carefully studied by all who are interested in the more efficient education of boys and girls in rural communities.

The above report may be had free of charge by applying to the Publication Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

TWO CALLS FOR THE BRIGADE

The fire brigade responded to two small fires last night which were both started by fireworks.

The first alarm at 8.22 p.m., was sent in from Box 23 and was found to be two small awnings, one over Trebilcock's store and the other over the Examiner. The fire was easily extinguished with chemicals, but the awnings completely destroyed.

The second, at 10.13 o'clock, sent in by telephone, was at the G.T.R. ticket office. The bird nests in the cornice work had caught fire and had spread along for some distance.

COAL SITUATION AT R. HICKS CO.

Have Sufficient for Their Own Regular Business

In view of the alarmist reports that have gained currency regarding the scarcity of coal, it is somewhat consoling to state that the R. Hicks & Co. informed a Review representative to-day that they were fully capable of caring for their own customers. While not looking for any other, but their own regular business, they are in a position to take any orders for supplying hard coal. They wished to make it plain that in view of the agitation which prevails that they were supplied with coal for all their customers.

"THE LIGHT ETERNAL" EXTRAORDINARY PLAY

A reverent and impressive dramatization of Cardinal Wiseman's brilliant religio-historical book "Fabiola," will be given at the Grand Theatre on Friday and Saturday, Oct. 4-5, under the stage title of "The Light Eternal." This offering is probably the most pretentious ever sent on the road for presentation in cities and towns of moderate size. Its scenic equipment is unusually massive and the costuming is along the brilliant Roman lines. The presenting company is unusually large and possesses the added virtue of quality.

SERVICE OF THANKSGIVING AT ALL SAINTS'

What promises to be a service of great interest and helpfulness, is that of the Harvest Thanksgiving, to be held in All Saints' church, Thursday evening, when, as previously announced, the special preacher, will be the first rector of All Saints', Rev. W. L. Armitage, of St. Mark's Anglican Church, Toronto.

Willing hands are attiring the interior of the church in festive garb, and the choir for some time past, has been rehearsing special music.

The Englishman in Ontario.

"Is the labor problem of western Ontario to be settled by the Englishman?" says a Glencoe, Ont., man. "The present indications point in that direction. A few years ago you could find very few English immigrants in West Middlesex, and only a family or two in Glencoe. To-day you meet fine, intelligent men from the better classes of old England almost everywhere. Among the newer arrivals are mechanics and artisans—men who are proving themselves good citizens."

This opinion represents the experience of many towns and cities in western Ontario, says The London Free Press. There is an immigration into these parts of men from the old land going on to-day that is even more marked than was the immigration which resulted in the settlement of Ontario in large part by this same class of immigrant now approaching a century ago.

Wealthy Settlers.

The wealth of the immigrants settling in the west during the five years ended March 31 was estimated as follows: British, cash, $37,546; effects, $18,773,000. United States, cash, $157,-100,000; effects, $110,982,000.

H. M. S. THUNDERBOLT WRITES ON THE LAURIER MEETING

Conservatives Were Disgusted he Says at the Political Meeting

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—If ever Conservatives felt disgusted at a political meeting, or rather a political farce, it was that which was represented by the former Liberal leader and members of his cabinet.

For instance: Hon. Chas. Murphy, in his sarcastic manner, had nothing better to state than that Col. Sam. Hughes had gone to England and France to show them how to manoeuvre troops.

The real facts are that, in the first instance, he has increased the pay of the forces; in the second place, he has gone to the manoeuvres in England and France to see and gain information from the two best armies in the world, at the present time, and to be used hereafter for the benefit of the Canadian military forces.

Now as regards Hon. Sydney Fisher: He told the audience that he had sweet memories of Peterborough every morning for breakfast. No doubt he alluded to "Quaker Oats." But this member did not tell us whether the raw material was bought in America or Canada, or that they could be bought cheaper in America, or that a train load of oats arrived here from the United States during the week, and another is expected to-morrow.

Is it any wonder that the Liberal leader avoided "reciprocity" and made the "naval question" his sole topic.

Or is it any wonder that the audience would not allow Mr. Fisher to prolong his speech and he had to retire.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier told the audience that the last election was won in Peterborough by the Conservative member, Mr. J. H. Burnham, on the "tin pot navy," and the "marriage question."

But he also forgot to state that it was won by British sentiment and British connection and no reciprocity with America.

Also as regards the naval question, it appears to many, that Sir Wilfrid is trying to poison the minds of the people of Canada, against any naval policy, British or Canadian, introduced by Premier Borden and Conservative members, and which does not agree with his own views and those of the late Liberal government.

As regards our old friend, Hon. McKenzie King, he appears to be devoting his time to journalism. As he quoted the Toronto World and Mail & Empire figures, regarding the attendances at the Liberal meetings, and was not satisfied with the short reports made by these Conservative papers. He also found out they did not agree, as one had about two inches of spoil and the other three inches against 24 columns or so published in the Liberal papers, on "Laurier's Liberal tour." Mr. King denounced these papers as not showing British fair play.

But Mr. King, like the others, forgot to state that the Liberal papers do the same thing with reports from Conservative political meetings, and in a great many cases, they refuse to publish letters from Conservatives however true, in case they should hurt liberalism.

When will we hear sensible political questions and answers from the Liberals.

H.M.S. "THUNDERBOLT."

BARRIE'S LTD. IS EXPANDING

Fine New Branch has Been Opened at Saskatoon

Barrie's Limited, the local firm of manufacturing furriers, have found it necessary to add another link to their splendid chain of stores, and have accordingly opened a commodious and thoroughly modern establishment in Saskatoon, Sask. The frontage of the new store equals that of the local firm, and is situated in the Willoughby Summer block on 3rd Avenue, and will be devoted exclusively to the fur business.

The store will be managed by Mr John Gorham, of the local branch, who left to assume supervision last week. Many years experience in the fur business have eminently qualified Mr. Gorham for the position. The manufacturing end of the business will be managed by Mr. Holly McIlmoyle, also an experienced cutter of the local store, who has gone West. Other local help will proceed to Saskatoon to carry on the manufacturing operations under Mr. McIlmoyle's charge.

Immediate local trade in the new store at Saskatoon will be catered to, as Barrie's Limited have always adopted the policy of despatch and satisfaction in their business. The establishment of the new branches also tends to strongly increase the manufacturing end of the business locally, thereby necessitating the employment of more help.

TO ENCOURAGE SHEEP RAISING

During recent years, the sheep industry has been steadily declining. In some provinces, sheep have almost completely disappeared. To-day Canadian farms are not only not producing sufficient for the home market, but New Zealand mutton is actually being shipped into Western Canada.

Only five years ago Canada exported sheep to the value of one and one-quarter million and last year less than four hundred thousand dollars. Only $2,134 worth of mutton was exported in 1911.

SALES OF PURE BRED STOCK

The encouragement of this decaying industry is one of the problems which Hon. Martin Burrell, minister of agriculture, has undertaken. He secured the sympathy and active co-operation of the Dominion Sheep Breeders' Association. A committee from the association was appointed to work with the officials of the department in investigating the problem, and in suggesting ways and means of encouraging the industry. Two members of the committee, Col. McEwen, of Bryson, Ont., and Col. McCrae, of Guelph, the one president of the Dominion association, the other of the Ontario, were appointed to make a thorough inquiry of the industry in British Columbia and the Maritime Provinces. Col. McEwen went to British Columbia and Col. McCrae to the Maritime Provinces.

REPORT RECEIVED

Their report has recently been submitted to the committee and the department officials, and as a result, it has been decided to hold sales of pure-bred rams and grade ewes at various parts. The Maritime Province sales will take place the latter part of September and the British Columbia sales in October. Both investigators reported that the interest the department is showing in the industry has awakened farmers to the value and necessity of paying more attention to sheep raising. In British Columbia, it was reported there were vast stretches of country particularly adapted to sheep raising which could be made very profitable with the enormous prairie provinces market so close at hand.

THE WEATHER FOR SEPTEMBER

September, this year, had about the average temperature taken as a whole, although the latter portion was cooler than usual. The highest temperature during the month was on the 10th, with 90 degrees in the shade. The lowest figure reached was on the 30th, with the mercury standat the freezing point. Tender vegetables were nipped for the first time. Last year heavy frost was recorded on the 14th of the month.

It was in the number of days on which rain fell that September received some undesirable notoriety. There was rain on 20 days during the month although the total amount (3.04) was not greatly in excess of the average. Last year 2.26 inches fell. There were four thunderstorms.

While the weather in this locality has been wet and cool, much the same conditions have prevailed all over, in some section in a more aggravated form.—W. P.

Board of Education Will Determine Whether the Arrangement Works Out Satisfactory or Not—Fee is $5.00 Each Night

Dr. M. A. Morrison read the report by the Supervision Committee to the Board of Education last night as follows—

To the Chairman and Members of the Board of Education.

Gentlemen—Your Supervision Committee beg to report as follows—

Regarding the request of the St. George's Choral Society, for the use of the Collegiate Institute Assembly Hall for the purpose of holding their rehearsals during the winter months your Committee after considering the matter, have granted the request for a period of one month at a fee of $5.00 for each night, to cover the expense of janitor, lighting, etc. We will then be able to determine whether the arrangement works out satisfactorily or not.

Your committee have contracted with the Review Printing Co. to publish a 24 page Collegiate Institute announcement, similar to last year, for the sum of $50.00 .

Regarding the purchase of Nelson's Perpetual Loose-Leaf Encyclopaedia for the Collegiate Institute, your committee recommend that in view of other expenses, no action be taken this year.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

M. A. MORRISON,

DID AUTOMOBILE LEAVE CHEMONG FLOATING BRIDGE AND GO TO THE BOTTOM OF THE LAKE?

Did, an autamobile crash through the west railing of the Chemong floating bridbe recently and go into the lake? There is every indication that something of that nature occurred as the imprint of automobile wheels are plainly discernable upon the muddy track of the bridge veering to the west side and ending where the railing is broken down, and where pieces of shattered glass are strewn around as if the windshield of the car had been broken by the impact. The tracks may be discerned at a place where the bridge widens for the convenience of vehicles passing each other. No trace of the car backing out or proceeding on can be seen. It would appear that the place may have been mistaken by the driver of the car for a turning at night, and the car with its occupants been precipitated into the lake before their mistake was discovered. There is ample opportunity for some admirer of Sherlock Holmes to exhibit his acumen his acumen in ferreting out and the facts of the occurrence.

WILL SHUT OFF FUNDS.

France's Bankers to Refuse Money In Balkan Trouble.

Paris, Oct. 2.—The French diplomatic representatives in the Balkan states have received instructions from the French Government to continue to exercise all possible proper influence in order to prevent a war between the Balkan states and Turkey.

It is understood here also that French banking interests, which usually take their cue from the Government, will categorically refuse all requests for loans made by states which eventually may become belligerents, and the Balkan nations are to be informed of this attitude.

No collective plan of the great powers to bring about a peaceful solution of the crisis is yet in sight. For the moment they are using pressure individually in the hope that this action may be successful.

That Bulgaria, Servia, Greece and Montenegro have agreed to mobilize their armies and act together against Turkey is the statement made by Dr. Stanciff, the Bulgarian Minister here, in an interview published in Le Tempe.

"This is an historic event of great world importnce," he continued, saying that Bulgaria's financial situation was good and that funds in the treasury were ample to sustain a war.

Dr. Stanciff added that twelve Bulgarian officers, who were studying in French military schools, had been ordered to rejoin the colors. The Balkan powers, he said, were confident that the world would welcome the new concert, because it puts into action counsels long ago offered by the powers, which had as their sole motive the amelioration of the intolerance conditioi of Christians in European Turkey.

The Greek and Servian Ministers confirmed the accord, and declared that their countrymen would not longer stand the aggression of Turkey. They were ready to make any sacrifice to help their Christian brethren under Ottoman domination.

The Turkish ambassador to France, Rifast Pasha, said: "Turkey has no intention of permitting the Balkan states to interfere in its internal affairs, and it cannot be overawed by mobilizations."

He hoped a way would be found to prevent war, but admitted that his optimism was faltering.

Bill Flinn's Expenses.

Washington, Oct. 2.—The total expenditures of William Flinn of Pittsburg, in the 1912 Progressive campaign, have been $144,308, according to a statement he gave to the Senate committee yesterday. The total "Roosevelt expenses," covering Mr. Flinn's personal activity as leader of the Roosevelt forces in Pennsylvania, were $99,384, but the statement showed an additional sum of $5,080 "expended by John S. Weller, treasurer of the Roosevelt League."

Other amounts expended by Mr. Flinn, came under the head of expenditures and Republican and Progressive organization work, which Mr. Flinn did not characterize as Roosevelt expenditures.

S. R. Norcross Dead.

Port Colborne, Oct. 2.—S. R. Norcross, one of Port Colborne's oldest citizens, died yesterday in his 75th year. Mr. Norcross leaves a widow and one son, J. W. The funeral will take place on Thursday afternoon to Overholt's cemetery.

Independent to Run.

London, Ont., Oct. 2.—A surprise was sprung in connection with the East Middlesex situation yesterday, when it was announced that William Sutherland, brother of the late Robert Sutherland, and nominally a Conservative, would contest the riding against Mr. George W. Neely, of Dorchester, on an independent ticket.

Alleged Loan Sharks Remanded.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 2.—Magistrate Fraser yesterday adjourned the cases of Gustave Young and Gus Smith, arrested at Fort Erie as alleged loan sharks, till Oct. 8, after evidence to the effect that the defendant charged him $35.80 for the loan of $25 for four months. The prisoners are alleged to have operated at Fort Erie, under the name of C. C. Cleveland.

Windstorm In Paris.

Paris, Oct. 2.—A violent windstorm injured over a score of Parisiens early yesterday morning and swept over the city, wrecking several districts. A number of buildings under construction were blown down, trees were uprooted and chimneys hurled from the roofs of many of the older houses into the streets.

Fatally Crushed Under Girder.

Belleville, Oct. 2.—A fatal accident occurred yesterday afternoon at the construction work of Marsh & Henthorn, the new foundry being erected in this city. A young man, Percy Graves, of this city, was assisting in the elevation of a large steel girder, when it fell, pinning Graves beneath it. He was so seriously injured that he expired while being conveyed in an ambulance to the hospital. An inquest will be held.

Better Policing In St. Kitts.

St. Catharines, Oct. 2.—Owing to the rapid growth of the city of St. Catharines, the police commissioners decided yesterday to have an expert report on the cost of a police signal system here. Two new constables were appointed to the force, one being a brother of Chief Kimming of Niagara Falls.

Hospital as Memorial to Wife.

Kingston, Oct. 2.—R. W. Leonard, chairman of the Transcontinental Railway Co., has contributed $800 to be devoted to the erection of a cottage on the grounds of Sir Oliver Mowat, as a memorial hospital, in memory of his wife's family. Mr. Leonard recently paid a visit to the new hospital.

The province has been divided into six parts, and field secretaries will be kept busy from now until January 1 organizing committees and arranging for the introduction of bylaws for the suppression of the liquor traffic. Some of the municipalities which will be tried this year have been unsuccessfully contested before, but the outlook is regarded as most favorable for the passing of bylaws next January.

Naval Policy Not Discussed.

Ottawa, Oct. 2.—There was another session of the Cabinet yesterday afternoon, but the naval question was not discussed. Much routine business was cleared, however, in preparation for the coming session and a number of small contracts were awarded. A site for a drill shed to be erected at Port Arthur was purchased for $7,000; also one at Peterboro for $30,000.

BACK WITH OTTAWA COLLEGE

Just one week ago to-day the Ottawa University football followers were enthused by the announcement that "Silver" Quilty would be back with the garnet and grey, says the Ottawa Citizen.

To-day the Citizen is in a position to announce that Frank Heffernan the sensational half-back, who played gilt edged football for Father Stanton's team last season, will return during the present week to the Sandy Hill University. As a matter of fact Heffernan will arrive early this week and will, unless the unexpected happens, in the meantime, line up with the Collegians for Saturday's match against Queens. Officers of the College football club declined to confirm the report, but from Toronto the Citizen received sufficient verification of Hefernan's return. He was with the College party at Hamilton and Toronto Saturday and made arrangements to return. Heffernan will play on the back division, figuring really on the wing line as was the case last fall. His return will give Ottawa College one of the strongest teams in the Intercollegiate Union.

Heffernan's home is at Peterboro. He was coaxed away from Ottawa College by the T. A. A. C. but whatever differences there existed between "Mose" and Father Stanton are understood to have been buried beside the Hamilton mountain after Saturday's match.

Points for Mothers

How to Amuse Children.

It is often difficult to know how to entertain children, as the little ones so soon tire of the games they already know and new games are not easy to find. Here is one called "bachelor's kitchen," which has all the charm of a novelty.

The players sit in a row, all but one, who goes to each of the others and asks what he will give to the bachelor's kitchen. Each answers what he pleases, but no two must mention the same article. Then the questioner goes back to the first child and asks all sorts of questions, which must be answered by the name of the article he has given and by no other word.

We will suppose that one of the children gave a box of matches to the bachelor's kitchen. The questioner asks, "What did you have for breakfast?" "A box of matches." "What do you wear on your head?" "A box of matches." "What kind of a house do you live in?" "A box of matches." The object is to make the answerer laugh, and he is asked a number of questions until he does laugh or is given up as a hard subject. Those who laugh or add another word to their answer must pay a forfeit.

Tricks are always entertaining to children, and an amusing quarter of an hour may be spent with these two new tricks with eggs:

Take a raw egg and empty it by means of pinholes. As soon as the inside of it is dry fill it a quarter full of fine sand and then with a little white wax seal up the holes.

Now, when you want to entertain and mystify your little guests announce that your egg is ready to obey your slightest word. It will stand on the edge of a knife or the rim of a glass, no matter whether you put it sideways or endways. Occasionally tap the imitation egg gently so as to cause the sand to settle each time at the bottom, and thus you will get it to assume any position you wish. Of course the children will not know the egg is not good.

Honey For the Children.

A woman who confesses that she possesses an exceptionally sweet tooth makes a plea for the frequent inclusion of honey in the dietary of the little folks of the household.

"Children do so love anything very sticky," she says. "I believe that is partly why children love honey. And what is better for them? Why not give them plenty of white clover honey? Most countries make far more use of honey than we do in America. It is most wholesome and can be used in many ways.

"Honey and ginger cake and buns are delicious, also honey in puddings instead of lemon and marmalade. Then honey with plain suet puddings or plain corn cakes is delicious. Apples nearly baked, the core taken out, filled with honey and cream, the top replaced and put back in the oven for ten minutes, are very good. A little honey with stewed figs or prunes is excellent. For children honey may be eaten with fish. Just boil or broil cod or halibut and serve a little honey and milk sauce with it. They will like it much better than parsley sauce. Then spread slices of sponge cake with honey, pile them up and pour a suitable milk sauce over. This makes a nice Sunday pudding. Some children like honey with their cereal, but sirup perhaps is better if they will eat it. Very good taffy can be made with honey and sirup.

"And now the fresh fruit season is with us. Give the little ones honey and milk instead of sugar to dip their fresh berries in.

HUGH JENNINGS SAYS

THERE IS NO CHANCE TO COMPARE THE RED SOX AND GIANTS MANAGERS, BECAUSE JOHN J. M'GRAW IS PEERLESS — HE IS IN A CLASS BY HIMSELF.

BY HUGH A. JENNINGS

Manager of the Detroit American League Team.

The New York Giants and the Boston Red Sox will meet for the supremacy of the baseball world. This is now assured.

The great question to baseball men is "Will either team play up to its real form or will they, like every other team in a world's series save the 1908 Cubs fall below standard?

The 1908 Cubs who defeated Detroit four out of five games alone played up to their real game in the post-season battles. All others—Giants Athletics, Pirates and Tigers—failed to show their real class owing I believe, to the peculiar effect which the importance of these games exercised upon the minds of the lpayers.

Men expected to shine in world's series games; men who have starred all season usually lose their brilliance during the heat of the struggle for the supremacy of the baseball world.

It will be interesting this fall to note the work of such stars as Joe Wood, Tris Speaker, Larry Doyle and Jeff Tesreau. Will they live up to their reputations or will they, like stars of former league races, fall the victims of this world's series psychology?

Because of this peculiar effect of the impoirtance of these games upon the stars and upon the team as a whole I will not attempt to pick a winner. A comparison of the strength of the rival teams as they are playing today however, I can make, and the reader may draw his own conclusions.

First as to managers, the Giants have the greatest manager in the world in John J. McGraw. He has no peer in the game. It is no disparagement of the Red Sox leader Joe Stahl to say that in leadership the Giants have a big advantage at the outset.

McGraw has built up teams and has won pennants with them. He has made stars of comparatively weak men. He has ripened lemons like Rube Marquard into lucious peaches.

John McGraw is a fighter a driver a leader, all in one. He is one of the scrappiest men in baseball and if Boston gets anything it is not entitled to it will not be his fault, for, depend upon it, he will overlook nothing that brains resource or strategy can invent.

McGraw gets everything out of h's men because he knows human nature. He knows when to drive and when to lead. He is lenient when lenience is the balm for sore hearts and sore heads; he is stern when discipline is the antidote for strong hearts and strong heads. And above all, when his men deliver they are well paid.

McGraw made a great player of Fred Merkle when Merkle was on the verge of going to pieces following his play that gave the cubs a pennant. When the world censured him McGraw said nothing but he handed the youngster a contract for the next season, calling for a big advance in salary. Had he jumped upon the boy the Giants in all probability would have had to find another first baseman because Merkele was at the point where very little more would spoil his usefulness. McGraw saved him. Just such things make McGraw's players go the limit for him. They realise he always has their interest at heart.

Jake Stahl's great machine was put together by John I. Taylor Jr., former owner of the club, and he fitted it at first base as an effective cock in a wonderful machine. But Taylor deserves credit for building up the machine.

Stahl's strength as leader lies in his ability to go out and play and lend personal leadership and that indomitable spirit of his to the game.

Stahl went to Boston a finished ball player with valuable managerial experience gained in Washington. But greater than all has been the loyal support of the fans. Boston is the one city where the people know baseball well enough to place the blame for a losing team where it belongs—upon poor players not upon the management.

When a team goes wrong in Boston the fans figure out which players are at fault and blame them. Hence Stahl has had no personal discouragement.

But you can't compare McGraw and Stahl as managers and team builders because McGraw is in a class by himself.

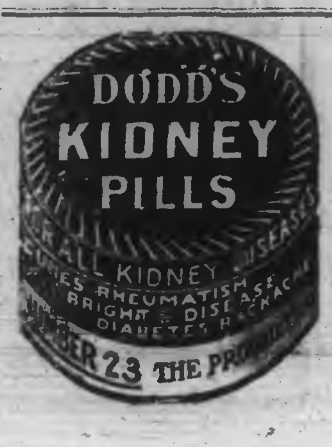
Play Clothes For Children.

Dutch play clothes are the privilege of smart children, but the pretty garments which are shown in a number of big shops can be reproduced at home for half of the store cost—that is, as far as the imported article is concerned, for there are some domestic imitations which are quite cheap. The novelties include frocks, aprons, bonnets and coarse stockings, with which are worn the usual leather sandals. Everything is Dutch in effect, substantial and amusing, and the sizes of the various articles are two to six years of age, says Mary Dean.

Little frocks of striped drill, tan linen or white drill trimmed with a border showing designs of Dutch children can be had as low as 65 cents. If the dress is banded with embroidery it will cost from $1.25 to $1.95. In style the frocks are much like the square necked aprons, or else they are in the form of high, long sleeved smocks, with front pockets made of trimming. The aprons are square or round necked, with the armhole cut deep and the gay bordering used only about the neck, armholes and pockets or else all around. The same drills, linens and crashes are used for them as for the frocks, but of course they are only used to protect the usual nice little gown, as over a Dutch dress they would be superfluous. A number of the bonnets, which are short at the back and show turnback front flaps, are of the same texture as the frocks and aprons. Others are of coarse white linen. The headgear naturally is only used outdoors, and it is more suitable for very small children than for older ones.

An Odd Bequest.

The following is one of the oddest bequests ever recorded in a last testament. It appeared in the will of a Bristol mariner proved in 1795. The old gentleman ordered his executors to "pay out of the first moneys collected, to my beloved wife, if living, one shilling, which I have given as a token of my love, that she may buy hazelnuts, as I know that she is better pleased with cracking them than she is with mending the holes in her stockings."



Wild Animals on Increase.

That wolves and bears are increasing numbers in Northern Quebec, and notably in the National Park, where wild animals are protected by law, and that in some places they are becoming a menace to the safety of the settlers and their domestic animals, is indicated by a petition received by Dr. Deschenes, deputy minister of crown lands, from the townships of Meay and Caronin in the Lake St. John district. The petition is signed by the mayor and residents of the townships and requests that they be allowed to kill bears and wolves in the portions of the park which borders the townships in question, as the animals are making great ravages among the sheep and cattle.

Not only will the petition be granted, but it is planned to organize fortnightly hunting parties to enter the section of the park mentioned.

Not at All Dismayed.

London, Oct. 2.—The Government's opinion of the Ulster anti-home rule demonstration and covenant signing is summed up in the following words of Sir Rufus Isaacs, delivered in an address to his constituents at Reading last night:

"I speak for the Government when I say that these incidents in Ulster will not turn us one hairs' breadth. We are undismayed, we are undaunted by all these performances. We shall pursue our policy calmly and patiently, with such wisdom as we can bring to bear upon the question with which we have to deal.

"We shall carry the home rule bill through the House of Commons, and I venture to predict that before the end of this year, the bill will emerge from the Commons after having passed its third reading."

The World's Great Want.

Let the people who are trying
To establish peace on earth
Keep the white flag bravely flying
Till love has a newer birth.
But meanwhile the world is calling
For a new supply of mirth.

Let the nations join together,
So that triumph may be won.
Let men regulate the weather
And put harness on the sun,
But the world wants first the favor
Of a new supply of fun.

Petroleum gives us asphalt paving, permanent ink for printing, dyes of brilliant hue and all kinds of rubber articles which, without the oil, could not be manufactured.

South America is nearly twice as large as the whole of Europe.

Cut hams may be kept from molding if the cut end is wet with vinegar each time after cutting. Vinegar will also keep beef fresh for a time when you happen to be without ice temporarily.

Murmur.

The easiest word to pronounce in the English language is said to be "murmur." It is simply an expulsion of the breath repeated.

The Gauls.

Gauls in remote time dressed in skins, tattooed their flesh, drank out of the skulls of their foes and treated strangers as their natural enemies. Civilization among them began in 1100.

Appointment of Miss Lathrop Gladdens Uplift Leaders.

MISS JULIA LATHROP.

Women of the nation who are interested in the improvement of conditions under which children and women labor are unanimous in their approval of President Taft's selection of Miss Julia Lathrop of Chicago as the head of the recently created child bureau of the department of commerce and labor.

The Rev. Anna H. Shaw of New York says:

"The appointment by President Taft of Miss Lathrop is highly gratifying to all women who are working in the cause of equal suffrage, the final purpose of which is to bring to bear upon social problems, and especially those affecting the child and the home, the special gifts and experience of women. In appointing to this office one so extraordinarily well fitted by temperament and training for its peculiar duties President Taft has earned the sincere commendation of all suffragists and confirmed them in their expectation of a speedy removal of the restrictions that now shut them out from full participation in all the duties of citizenship."

Mrs. Philip N. Moore of St. Louis, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, says:

"President Taft is to be congratulated on his appointment of Miss Lathrop. This woman, by education, training and experience, is the right woman in the right place. With man or woman at the head the bureau deserves the best qualified person that could be found, and we believe the best has been obtained. We extend our approval and congratulations."

Mrs. John Miller Horton of Buffalo, vice president of the D. A. R., says:

"The appointment by President Taft of Miss Julia Lathrop is most gratifying to all of the many women and men of the nation who are interested in the welfare of the children. I am deeply interested in the work and with all others personally approve of the wise selection by President Taft."

Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis, secretary of the National Woman's Christian Temperance union, says:

"The appointment of Miss Lathrop is just right. We have been trying for years to bring about this legislation. We believe the children of the nation are the greatest asset of the nation. The appointment of Miss Julia Lathrop we herald with great satisfaction. Her service in philanthropic work in Chicago, under the leadership of Miss Jane Addams, is, we feel sure, a safe guarantee of her efficiency for this responsible position. We are glad President Taft is broad enough to recognize ability rather than sex."

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

ONE reason why women ought to vote is that it will add another gala day to their calendar, and goodness knows there is room.

The man who thinks he is the whole show is likely to be something of a clown himself.

When we owe ourselves something we are always delighted with the idea of prompt payment.

The argument that is made with the fist is the only kind that addresses itself to some intelligences—or should we say to some lack of intelligences?

Catching on may be difficult and strenuous, but sometimes letting go has it beaten a mile in that direction.

What our neighbors think of us is the thing they never tell us.

Many a man would attain to success if he didn't have to begin by getting up early in the morning with a desire to work.

However much he may feel the need of it and profit by it, no man ever loves a private mentor.

One reason why being an angel is so discouraging a proposition to a woman is that all the cases on record are masculine.

We are a lot more likely to forgive an injury if we are in such a position that we can't safely return it.

Training Young Cobblers.

Cobbling is recognized as a trade in the vocational schools of Buffalo. Several schools are set aside for teaching trades to young boys and girls, and the latest addition to the course is one in cobbling. A competent instructor has been engaged to teach the young men how to repair shoes. There are a number taking up the course, and it is certain that the trade will not become extinct with the young generation studying the principles of rejuvenating old shoes.—Shoe Retailer.

PROPHETESS OF PARIS.

Woman Who Has Fascinated the Gay City by Predictions.

One of the most extraordinary persons in Paris to-day is Mme. de Thebes—prophetess. Alexander Dumas fils knew of her extraordinary powers of clarovoyance and saw many proofs of it. From then till now her fame, instead of decreasing and disappearing as is generally the case with the modern prophetess, has increased in a most remarkable manner.

The young Dumas was Mme. de Thebes godfather, and when she was endeavoring to decide what profession to adopt, after bad health prevented her from going on the stage, she was drawn into a study of the magic and mysteries of the East, by a novel which Dumas fils was then engaged upon—"La Route de Thebes." The title of the book—never finished, by the way—suggested to the young lady an appropriate name for herself as prophetess.

She made a special study of the lines of the hand, benefitting by the instruction of the best "masters." She was very beautiful, and even to-day, when her hair is white, her face preserves its freshness, charm, and regularity of line. Soon all Paris was flocking to her rooms, so that she might lift for them a corner of the curtain which veils the future.

Her success in prediction has been striking and uncanny. Before 1912 dawned, she said it would be "a black year." And Mme. de Thebes is a prophet of disaster. Many of the great and tragic happenings of recent times have been foretold by her, and she had warned two prominent personages who went down in the Titanic of the fate in store for them.

Mr. Stead was an old friend of hers. One day she "read his hand," and told him that "the water was his enemy." The famous journalist replied, says madame, that "sees esprits familiers" would avert any danger he ran of death by drowning.

A little while after his marriage Col. Astor consulted Mme. de Thebes. "Beware of the sea!" she said to him.

"That is serious," Col. Astor replied, "for I am so often on it."

The terrible Paris Charity Bazaar fire in which 130 women and three men lost their lives, was predicted by Belgium.

Belgium is one of the smallest countries in regard to area, containing only 11,373 square miles, but it stands today the fifth of all nations of the world in regard to commerce and industries and is the most densely settled in Europe, containing 7,817,561 inhabitants. It is is also one of the richest countries per capita and second to none in enterprise.

Crowded India.

The population of India is 315,000,000, though its area is not greater than that of nine or ten of our western states.

Guncotton.

A row of guncotton reaching from Edinburgh to London, it is said, could be fired in two minutes, so rapid is the transmission of detonation from one part to another.

A Hymeneal Expert.

Sir Samuel T. Evans is one of the greatest experts in Great Britain on matrimonial problems. As President of the Divorce Court he passes his days listening to tales of woe, and no judge is harder worked. But he is never depressed, and refuses to answer the question as to matrimony being a failure in the affirmative.

This keen-witted judge started his legal career as a solicitor. Realizing that the Bar offered more scope, he changed over, and was so successful that he took silk in the remarkably short space of nine years. He was the last Q. C. to be appointed. For over twenty years he represented Glamorganshire in Parliament, and was Solicitor-General from 1908-10, when he took his place on the Bench.

By his hat shall you know Sir Samuel Evans. No matter how fashions may change in toppers he clings to a weird type of headgear which is flat in the brim and tall in the crown, something like those hats you see on women dressed in Welsh costume.

VENTILATION.

How the Northwest Has Solved the Fresh Air Problem.

The Canadian Northwest has solved the ventilation problem—solved it in the simplicity of 1, 2, 3, says Lila E. Clendenan in The Globe.

The name of the particular individual who first applied this method does not appear to be generally known. In all probability he was some Scotchman in the employ of the Hudson's Bay Co.

Having built his log shack, he cut a space for light. The mud-and-stone or mud-and-pole fireplace came next. After chinking the inside of the shack with moss, there would be plenty of time for mudding it during the autumn, when mud holds to the logs.

But some cool night as the embers died on the hearth and the wind rushed and whirled through the lighting space the pioneer was chilled out of his dreams. Drawing his warm four-point blanket about him he would wonder: "How shall I keep that draught out in cold weather?"

Bright and fertile-brained with the morning, he picked up an empty unwashed flour bag or a piece of white cotton—it must have been the former, for he set the pace — and nailed it over the space with hand-beaten nails.

The flour-bag window has been in use in the north country for years. Many half-breeds and some Indians have used it with very satisfactory results as to health in their families. Indeed, there is nothing will kill the Indian quicker than unventilated housing. Alternately feasted and starved, sunned and exposed, as game and weather hail the native, fresh air is an imperative necessity to his existence.

How can this system be adopted to the city house? We have all used wire screens. Why not use white or green cotton screens when the wires are discarded for autumn and winter? These could be made on the some sliding principle. For sleeping rooms they are particularly to be recommended, as they can be placed in the window at night and shut out in the morning if desired. In an emergency tack or throw factory cheese cotton over the wire screen and fit it back into the window.

There are many rooms which would be the better of a permanent cloth screen. With all the fabrics of coarse and fine mesh displayed in the stores, the handy man or the handy woman need not require long to make an investment which will add years to his or her life, and right here and now increase mental alertness and general health.

Think of the ill-ventilated churches, schools theatres and other public buildings. Think of the annoyance, discomfort, illness and death resulting from icy draughts on perspiring people.

The cotton screen—preferably placed at the top of the window—modifies the danger and admits pure air. The janitor's objection to "heating all outdoors" is overcome.

Until such time as perfect ventilation is established in every home, church, theatre, office, factory, store and stable, the flour-bag system will if used prove invaluable in building red corpuscles into young Canadians' blood.

Dry Farming Congress.

Announcement has lately been made of the seventh international dry farming congress, which is to be held at Lethbridge, Alberta, Canada, Oct. 21-26 next. This movement had a small beginning several years ago. In the coming congress representatives are expected from every nation in which dry farming is practiced, and this refers particularly to western Canada and the dozen or more western states in which the production of cereals has been greatly increased through the adoption of dry farming methods. In the several days given to the convention there will be conferences on soils, tillage methods and machinery, crops and crop breedings, agricultural education, farm management, scientific research, agricultural colleges and experiment stations, while one of the most interesting features of the congress will be a special section whose discussions will be devoted to the interests and problems of farm women. Interest in the congress is being increased through the offering of substantial prizes for best exhibits of farm products and for the best articles treating of various phases of farm problems.

Wealth Underground.

Captain Janes, of the Canadian exploration party aboard Captain Bernier's "Arctic," tells of virgin forests beneath ground in Baffin's Land—the richest coal areas in the world, and fuel can be dug up with a shovel.

Captain Janes is of the belief that the two largest coal fields in the world have been discovered on Canadian soil, located in Baffin's Land. The two are about one hundred miles apart. In spite of their high altitude, he says that they will be workable all the year round. The coal is so easily secured that it can be dug from the surface with the shovel.

"This northern part of Canada will be the greatest country in the world," says Captain Janes. "I believe that the report of the Arctic's last voyage, when it is made public, will be of great value."

SIR WILFRID AND HIS STAFF

"then we say that Canada grown produce should be sold not only in Canada but in the other markets of the world."

With that the subject was allowed to drop. Mr. King did not seem to deem it necessary to inform the audience that President Gourlay was for years an ardent supporter of the Liberal party, through good and through ill report, but that he deserted his party with a host of other Toronto manufacturers just before the last general election the Reciprocity issue being the cause of his change of allegiance. The Pact as promulgated at that time would not have affected the articles which Mr. Gourlay and his partners manufacture but he deemed it a step in the direction of industrial danger, the entering wedge which would open up further tariff reductions and being extended to manufactures would result in the admission into Canada duty free, of American pianos and organs thereby interfering with the business Mr. Gourlay has so successfully conducted for years.

Mr. King has a grievance. He says that the Conservative party has entered into a conspiracy to defeat the object of the present Liberal tour by issuing orders to the party press in Toronto to refrain from publishing full reports of the speeches made by Mr. King and his colleagues. Mr. King had with him copies of the Mail and Empire and the Toronto World, and called attention to the small space in each that was devoted to a report of the Liberal rally in Cornwall the previous evening. The speaker assumed that some member of the administration had stalked majestically into the offices of the newspapers referred to and issued his mandate to which the proprietors had no alternative than to pay heed. Then followed a dire threat. If the Conservative press does not give these meetings the publicity which Mr. King appears to think they deserve then the tour will be continued indefinitely through the country until no town or village will be able to escape.

Mr. King should remember that the newspapers to which he refers are private enterprises conducted on modern business principles. If the proprietors thought it good policy to publish verbatim the speeches of Mr King and his friends night after night they would certainly do so. But even Liberal speeches become stale by reason of frequent repitition and what the public will not turn out to hear and listen to patiently the public cannot be expected to sit down and read. Mr. King's insinuation that the Conservative press is acting on orders from Ottawa is unworthy of serious consideration.

HON. GEORGE P. GRAHAM.

The ex-minister of railways and canals the last speaker of the evening ejected an element of hilarity into the audience and put his hearers in good humor by telling several humorous anecdotes after which he devoted his time to a discussion of the local situation. He divided his plaudits with impartiality between his leader and Mr. Stratton. But it was evident that a morsel was sticking in Mr. Grahams' crop. He refuses to be reconciled to the fact that in West Peterborough Sir Wilfrid met with one of the most significant reverses in the election.

NOTES

The Conservatives of Peterborough turned out en masse and did their duty. No matter what we think of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's policies, he is a fine old gentleman and has been our chief officer.

It was as fine a political gathering as ever took place in Peterborough Sir Wilfrid brought pretty nearly the whole staff with him.

When the genial ex-premier appealed to the people to back up his sympathy for the late defeated local candidate, the cheering was so loud it was possible to hear a pin drop.

The most significant incident of the evening was the statement by Hon. Sidney Fisher that Sir Wilfrid [illegible] as he did in opposition to the extension of Manitoba, unless the religious minority was "protected," because Sir Wilfrid was a Catholic Canadian, and" said Mr. Fisher dramatically, "what better man is there than a good Catholic Canadian."

That's all very well, but, surely if Sir Wilfrid had been a Protestant of any denomination, he would not have been justified in acting as such while premier. If the prime minister of this country cannot represent all the people he has no business to be there. It was a most significant admission,

---

It was no wonder that Mr. Fisher was howled down by nearly the entire audience after that

---

People must have wondered at Sir Wilfrid's sneer at Mr. Borden's inactivity since he came to power But speakers must have a little rope or they would fail to "tickle the ears of the masses, don't you know,"

Hon. Mr. Graham astonished the overflow meeting in the Opera House by trying to establish that Mr. Borden had done just the same with the marriage question as Sir Wilfrid had If that is so, why have some people been slanged so about it?

There was very little cheering when the speakers touched on the navy question. Canada is not preparing to desert the Empire. It would be a great stroke of business for some organizations to bring off if the British Empire could be split up. Split up nations are so much more easily handled.

Anybody with half an eye can see that the Liberal leaders are attempting to rouse Canada against Borden's empire policy. They are trying to drive Canada into a position of virtual independence. It is a case of anything to win by. They will fail and fail miserably. It is a miserable conspiracy, the like of which has never been attempted so far, in Canada.

Reciprocity didn't cut much figure last night. Probably the performers heard that American produce was pouring in here now,

"There is nothing the matter with Sir Wilfrid," shouted an enthusiastic Liberal at the meeting last night.

There is something the matter with the veteran leader. There is something the matter with any politician who insists upon referring in slighting terms to his political opponent and making light of the latter's policy especially when that policy is a matter with which Sir Wilfrid is not familiar. There is something, too, the matter with a leader when he allows his followers to wander from the line of argument which they are supposed to follow and single out the members of the Government for personal attack. There is something the matter with any bunch that travels through the country posing as the only and original exponents of patriotism and good government.

Sir Wilfrid referred to the reported interview with Hon. Martin Burrell, sent out from Vancouver the other day, and in which the Minister of Agriculture was made to say that no definite action would be taken on the navy question at the approaching session of parliament, but that the Government would simply announce its policy. Upon this interview so far unconfirmed, Sir Wilfrid built a considerable portion of his argument to the effect that Premier Borden is delaying the settlement of the question.

The leader was treading on sandy soil. He should know from recent events that every variety of fake interview has been bred in the west within the past few weeks to be afterward repudiated by the victims. First, Sir Richard McBride was made to declare in favor of a Canadian navy, to express approval of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's naval policy, to make light of the German war scare and to argue that the chief danger to the Dominion was a hostile attack by Japan. This interview was declared a fake. Then came the alleged statement from Premier Roblin, then the latest from Mr. Burrell. The latter interview will probably in due time share the same fate as those that went before it.

To-day's dispatches have another guess at Mr. Borden's policy, but in this case no one is quoted by name. A Winnipeg paper says "a man" in the confidence of the Roblin Government, etc. Under such conditions an authorized denial is impossible.

MANY OMEMEE PEOPLE WALKED TO THE CEMETERY TWO MILES DISTANT

By Special Representative.

Side by side in a large grave in the Emily cemetery, two miles from the peaceful little village of Omemee, there now lie the five members of the McCaffrey family, united in death, as in life. Five caskets were silently lowered and laid together, while throngs of friends and mourners looked on with grief-stricken countenances Many a moist eye was noticed and many a quivering lip as the farewell obsequies proceeded. The scene was inconceivably sad, and the remembrance of it will surely linger long in the memory of those present.

Omemee yesterday afternoon witnessed a funeral, which for pathos and impressiveness was almost beyond description. Closed stores drawn blinds and hushed voices were all evidences of the great gloom into which the village had been plunged. The crowd around the late residence was immense. On the left side of the door hung white crepe, and on the right black.

The service in the house was simple, but touching. It was opened with the singing of "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," after which Rev. Mr. Earle led in prayer.

Rev Mr. Wilkinson, rector of St. Peter's church, Toronto, which the late Mr. McCaffrey attended, read the scripture passage and Rev. F. J. Chapman referred to the terrible sadness of the tragedy, in a manner that deeply effected the gathering.

"Rock of Ages" was then softly sung and Canon Marsh, of Lindsay, concluded the service with a brief prayer.

Outside four hearses were waiting to receive the bodies, as they were borne out from the house amid bowed heads and sorrowful faces.

Messrs. Comstock brothers had entire charge of the funeral arrangements, which were carried out with all the convenience and order possible

The cortege left for the cemetery at three o'clock. Although the air was bitter cold, scores of people walked the whole two miles, in addition to the many who drove. The cortege, as is customary, was preceded by bearers, followed by the relatives and mourners. The floral expressions of sympathy were very numerous, many coming from Toronto, and of many beautiful designs.

At the cemetery the caskets were conveyed to the grave separately, the white coffins of the two children being interred first. They were followed by that of the mother, then the father and lastly, Mrs. McCaffrey, sr.

After the ceremony was over and the flowers banked upon the grave, the crowd silently filed out of the grounds and proceeded homeward.

There is little else being talked about in Omemee except the terrible tragedy, which exacted such fearful toll. It is entirely conjecture, of course how the accident occurred, but much surprise is being expressed at the action of the late Mr. McCaffrey in venturing out with five in one canoe. The boat itself was only a sixteen foot affair and was capable of accommodating but two comfortably.

No one saw the accident and no one will ever know how it occurred. It will be a long time, however, before the village of Omemee recovers from the shock and becomes reconciled to the terrible loss which the community has suffered.

Some of the Toronto friends of the deceased who attended the funeral were: Messrs. E. W. Duke H. D. Cordon J. A. Rayson, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Griffiths W. Fuller, E. H. Patton and E W. B. Pike.

Peat Fuel Supply.

The Mines Branch of the Government Department of Mines recently announced that its demonstration of the commercial possibilities of peat as a fuel in Canada had been successfully completed, and that henceforth the activities of the branch would be applied in another direction, probably the economic production and testing of fuel, concerning which the department already has a man in the west.

The peat industry in Canada will now become a matter of private enterprise. There are two big plants under construction, one at Alfred, Ont., and another at Farnham, Que., which are expected to supply Ottawa and Montreal and possibly other cities with cheap fuel. LADY FRANKLIN'S ADDRESS.

Explorer's Wife Received a Flowery Welcome at Yale, B.C.

In a communication to The Week of Victoria, Mr. John T. Walbran tells an interesting story of Lady Franklin's visit to the British Columbia coast more than half a century ago:

On Vancouver Island and on the south shore of Johnstone strait is a steep and rugged range of mountains about 4,000 feet high, named by Captain Richards, in 1861, then in command of H.M. surveying vessel "Hecate," after Sir John Franklin, the Arctic explorer, and Lady Jane Franklin, his wife.

It was on the 22nd February, 1861, that Lady Franklin, then the widow of the gallant sailor, accompanied by her niece, Miss Sophia Cracroft (hence Cracroft Island and on it Sophia Point, situated on the opposite side of the strait to the Franklin Mountains), arrived at Victoria on a visit, and in March, attended by Lieutenant Hankin of H.M.S. "Hecate," detailed by Capt. Richards for this duty, proceeded by river steamer up the Fraser as far as Fort Yale, as her ladyship desired to see something of the scenery on the river. At Yale, Lady Franklin was enthusiastically welcomed and on leaving was presented with an address. This unique address which has, to the writer's knowledge, never before been published, is worthy of more than passing mention and was communicated to the writer by her ladyship's naval "aide-de-camp" who was present when it was read to Lady Franklin.

The address, as follows, was read by the Rev. William Burton Crickmer, M.A., then the Anglican clergyman at Yale, and no doubt the reverend gentleman had a large share in its composition:

"May it please your ladyship. We the inhabitants of Yale representing well nigh every nation under heaven, esteem the present as the proudest moment in the annals of our country and in the existence of our Town.

To-day is our Town of Yale forever linked in history with the name of one, the memorial of whose abundant kindness and wifely devotion will never die and at whose immortal veneration Princes bow down and Kings and Queens of the Earth may envy but never win.

"From the bottom of our hearts do we pray God to bless your ladyship with many happy days, and when called in God's own providence from this holy Church militant, to join the heroic in the Church triumphant, may the grave be transmuted, by the touch of a living faith, into the gates of everlasting life and a glory, more lasting than the perishing Laurels of Earth, forever crown the double brows of the noble pair whom the whole civilized world of Christendom delighted to honor."

History has not recorded Lady Franklin's reply. The address, engrossed on parchment, was placed in a small cedar-wood case and handed to her ladyship.

On returning to Victoria a picnic was organized by the city authorities, etc., to the head of the Victoria Arm and was held on the 21st March when the barge carrying her ladyship was manned by eight Canadian boatmen in costume. On the 24th, Lady Franklin and her niece left Esquimalt for England, via the Sandwich Islands and Australia, in the steamer Panama, to the strains of Auld Lang Syne played by the band of H.M.S. Topaze.

The address was given to the writer, long after those days, by Commander Hankin, R.N., when nearly all interested parties had passed away, and this gentleman had also told the writer that often on board the Hecate, at the captain's dining table, over the walnuts and the wine, Capt. Richards, smiling around at his guests, would say: "Now Hankin give us the address to Lady Franklin." Commander Hankin laughingly finished by saying, "When, of course, being my superior officer, there was nothing else for me to do but get up and obey."

A GREAT LONELY LAND.

Keewatin Is One of the Most Early Discovered Parts of Canada.

Keewatin, the new addition to the Province of Ontario, is a great lonely land of pulpwood and Laurentian rocks, with intervals of the Huronian overlying Keewatin formations, in which they are discovering mineral values up in old New Ontario, at Cobalt, Porcupine, and other places, today. It is a higher, bolder land as a rule than the region paralleling the southerly curve of James Bay immediately north of Toronto. Along the James Bay part of it are coastal flats with clay and boulder beaches reaching far out into the shallow water, and muskeg swamps inland. But northerly, past Cape Henrietta Marie, further along the Hudson Bay shore itself, the hills arise, and the granite outcrops of the world's most ancient rock. Underlying the alluvial flats of the river valleys, covered with muskeg moss, limestone occurs in level beds. At one time Hudson Bay spread over these lowlands, south and west, and pressed the mud sediment into stone. The country has been rising, the geologists say, lifting up out of the sea, during the last 10,000 years, or else the sea is receding. Geological efforts take time, however. The Hudson Bay harbors are safe for an age or two yet probably.

Of these new Ontario harbors on salt water, Moose Factory lies nearest to Toronto, Port Nelson farthest away. Both have been used for three centuries by the Hudson Bay Co. in the fur trade. Both, to fit them for the modern ships of commerce, will have to be dredged. Moose River can be opened up with a two-mile channel through the bar across its mouth. The present channel ranges from about 25 to 7 feet low tide. Similarly with Port Nelson. The Hudson Bay ships anchor two miles out, and their cargoes are lightered in small boats and flat scows.

Keewatin is much like the rest of New Ontario. It is not a land of agriculture, as is Old Ontario. Perhaps some day, when great mining camps have planted themselves up there in the rocky spruce-smothered hills, the demand for hay and oats, for potatoes, and for fresh meat, will bring about a considerable amount of mixed farming for the sweet sake of local markets, the demand of mining men and the hunger of the "muckers." But as contributors to the appetite of the outside world, as exporters of wheat, of beef, or of potatoes, it is doubtful if the rock-bounded farming patches or even the rich interval of clay which extends ninety miles or so back from the coast, at present under crop of muskeg moss, will enter into serious competition with the chocolate loam of the plains in the markets of Great Britain.—Toronto Star Weekly.

Energetic Mr. Borden.

A notable characteristic of Mr. Borden is his stupendous energy. In 1907, for instance, he made a political tour of Canada, covering over 15,000 miles in twelve weeks and delivering seventy-five political speeches, to say nothing of a large number of addresses given to various organizations of a non-political character. He is also a man of admirable self-control. On one occasion he could not get a hearing at a meeting. "If you do not want to listen to me," he said, during a momentary lull, "you are not compelled to do so. I will dictate what I have to say to the press representatives." With that he walked over to the assembled newspaper men and continued his remarks in an undertone. His quiet nonchalance had the desired effect, and his speech was afterwards listened to in silence by an appreciative audience.

Another side to the character of the Canadian Premier is his passion for literature. He loves poetry—incidentally it might be mentioned that he was born, in 1854, at Grand Pre, the scene of Longfellow's best-known and most popular poem, "Evangeline"—and, possessing a prodigious memory, can repeat many of the longest poems. Once while traveling he quoted one hundred lines of Latin verse. Mr. Borden is also passionately fond of sport. He plays golf and cricket, and is a keen fisherman.

Demonstration Farms.

The Dominion Commission of Conservation has established a number of demonstrating farms throughout Canada for the purpose of instructing agriculturists how they may get the best results in the most economic manner. They are under direction of John Fixter, formerly of Macdonald College, and C. Nunnick, agricultural expert. In Ontario eight farms have been leased, in Quebec six, and in the Maritime Provinces three each. Arrangements are being made for similar demonstrations in the west.

Firmness of purpose is one of the most necessary sinews of character and one of the best instruments of success. Without it genius wastes its efforts in a maze of inconsistencies. —Chesterfield.

Treasure Trove Found.

There has been found near Smith's Falls a quantity of French and American silver coin dating back to the year 1700. One French coin dated 1812 and a five-franc piece has the head of Emperor Napoleon on one side. The coins were all set on edge in rows in the shape of a V. There were in all 148 coins and the value cannot at present be estimated. The money was placed in the care of Chief Phillips of Smith's Falls and he and Magistrate Sparham are the only ones other than the finders who know where the coins were found. They refuse to give any further particulars until they have heard from the authorities at Ottawa to whom a report of the valuable discovery was made. It is thought that much more coin is secreted in the same vicinity and it is expected that when the location is made known there will be a regular rush of treasure hunters to the farm.

What Clover Will Do.

A Canadian bulletin issued last year contains details of an interesting experiment in the growing of clover for the distinct purpose of increasing the nitrogen content in a tract of land. Clover was grown on this tract continuously for a nine-year period. The ground was dug over every second year and the plot reseeded, the hay that was cut each season being allowed to rot on the ground. The soil was analyzed at the beginnings of the experiment and at intervals later. At the end of nine years it was found that each acre of soil to a depth of four inches contained 472 pounds more nitrates than at the beginning, worth on an average $9.36 per acre each year, or $84.96 for the nine year period. If this clover had been fed to stock instead of being allowed to rot it is admitted that nearly as large an amount of nitrogen would have been contributed to the soil.

Kingston's Population 19,707.

Kingston, Oct. 2.—The report of the city assessor shows Kingston's population to be 19,707, an increase of 870 over last year. The assessment reached the ten million mark, the total being $10,427,612. The value of land is $2,722,870; buildings, $8,22,7187, business, $1,042,410; income tax, $345,145. There are 5,655 school children.

The amount of building permits taken out since the first of the year is $410,479. Thirty workingmen's houses are to be erected. It is expected the total for the year will reach $550,000.

Detroit, Mich., cOt. 3— With the arrest of George Brown Spengler, who confessed to killing and mutilating Matilda Reis, aged twelve, in an alley near her home Tuesday night, the police believe they have rounded up the party responsible for several attacks on women and girls which have mystified the department in the past year. "I took my jackknife and cut her throat first, then mangled her body."

Spengler was a neighbor of the Reis family and had often been in their home. He was taken into custody shortly after the crime was disvovered Tuesday night.

PARENTS GAVE CHILDREN DRUGS AND WENT TO DANCE

Fire at St. Bernard, in Which Ten Children Perished, Was Probably Caused by the Upsetting of a Lamp

St. Bernard, Que., Oct. 3.—Ten children, the whole family of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Gravel, were burned to death in their home here early yesterday morning.

The mother and father went out on Tuesday evening to a party, leaving their ten youngsters, who ranged from 16 years of age to 16 months, at home.

They returned after midnight and then noticed their house was in flames. Both father and mother made frantic efforts to get into the building to rescue their children, but the heat of the blazing house, which was of frame construction, was too much for them.

There is no fire-fighting apparatus in this village, and the father and mother had to witness the consumption of their home and their children.

At first the cries of the children were piteous, and both parents had to be forcibly held back by neighbors, who prevented them from rushing into the blazing pit. Mr. and Mrs. Gravel towards the end were in a state bordering lunacy, and were taken by main force from the tragic scene.

The fire completely destroyed the house, and the skeleton of the eldest child, a girl, and the skull of the youngest were found.

It is thought that the fire was started by a lamp which was left alight in the bedroom of the children.

The dead children are: Eva, 16 years; Deaneiges, 15 years; Adelia, 13 years; Romeo, 12 years; Regina, 11 years; Marie Ange, 8 years; Francois, 7 years; Lionel, 5 years; Marie Louise, 3 years; Simon, 16 months.

It is said that the younger Gravel children were given a dose of soothing syrup to make them sleep during the absence of their parents, and it is said that this dosing of children has become quite prevalent among country people of the vicinity, who wish to spend social evenings among their neighbors without having to worry about the little ones.

However, the fire at the Gravel house broke out so suddenly that there would have been no opportunity for any of the children to escape.

St. Bernard is four miles from Scott's Junction Beauce County, on the line of the Quebec Central Railway. The village is not connected by telephone.

London, Oct. 3.—The London Mail's weekly society supplement, which specializes in court gossip, states that an addition to the already large royal family is expected. The interesting news was the subject of much comment in the fashionable drawing-rooms of the West End.

King George and Queen Mary, whose marriage took place July 6, 1893, have six children, of whom all but Princess Victoria Alexandra are boys. The Prince of Wales was born in 1894 nd his youngest brother, Prince John, in 1905.

SUFFRAGE LEADERS TO HAVE BUSY WINTER PURSUING THE BALLOT

THE REV. DR. ANNA HOWARD SHAW.

MRS O H P BELMONT.

MRS. HARRIOT STANTON BLATCH.

MRS. W. W PENFIELD.

MISS HARRIET M MILLS.

The National Woman Suffrage Association, of which the Rev. Anna Howard Shaw is president, is devoting all its time and speakers to winning over those States where the suffrage bill is now pending. Dr. Shaw is in Oregon campaigning, and before election day she will have visited and practically stumped through the six States where the suffrage question is most alive.

Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch, who is leader of the Women's Political Union, of New-York; Mrs. Borden Harriman, leader of the woman's committee of the Wilson-Marshall forces, and Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, of the Political Equality Association, are preparing to wage battle at the various conventions in the suffrage cause.

Miss Harriet M. Mills and Mrs. W. W. Penfield, who are also active leaders, are working hard in support of the various suffrage bills now before State legislatures

Various books, magazines and other publications have been issued by the suffrage leaders bearing on this movement. Weekly lectures, talks by prominent physicians and classes in politics are only a part of the programmes of most of the suffrage societies during the coming winter. Every effort is being made to make these meetings interesting, and throughout the entire country, it is believed, great benefit will be derived from these lectures and classes for the women.

C.P.R. TO ISSUE SIXTY MILLION DOLLARS WORTH OF STOCK

Provided the Government's Sanction is Secured, Something Which Has Not Yet Been Given---The Price of the New Stock Will be $175 a Share---Matter Discussed at Company's Regular Meeting.

Ottawa, Oct. 3.—Notwithstanding any intimation which may have been made by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy at the annual meeting of the C.P.R. shareholders yesterday, it can be stated definitely that the Government has not officially sanctioned the increase in the capitalization of that company. In fact, the question has never been considered by the Cabinet.

There seems to be considerable doubt here as to just what Sir Thomas Shaughnessy meant when in the course of his address he said: "Instead of going to the market with any considerable portion of this amount, your directors recommend that you make use of the authority conferred upon you by the Parliament of Canada to issue ordinary shares of capital stock in lieu of consolidated debenture stock. For the purpose for which you are authorized to issue consolidated debenture stock, and to that end that you increase you ordinary share capital frim $200,000,000 to $260,000,000 to be offered to the shareholders at the price of $175 for each share of $100, being at a premium of 75 per cent., at a time and on terms of payment to be fixed by your directors."

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy was in the capital last week and saw a number of the Ministers, and it is felt that, while no official authorization will be issued for some days, the C.P.R. president has, nevertheless, received some intimation that the issue would be sanctioned. The general opinion here seems to be that nothing should be done about the matter until the western freight case, which comes up before the Railway Commission on Oct. 8, is heard. Should it be proven to the satisfaction of the board, Government and public that the C.P.R. freight and passenger rates in the west are not extortionate, then it would be time to think about granting an increase. It was pretty generally understood that the western wing of the Cabinet was not in sympathy with the proposition. In fact, it has been hinted that nothing in any case would be done until after the Macdonald election, where it was held that any intimation of the Government's intention to grant the increase would not help the Conservative candidate.

It is further pointed out here as an argument in favor of the question being submitted to Parliament, that, if the increase is sanctioned by an order-in-council, the company's proposal cannot be in anyway amended or modified, while if sent to Parliament and openly discussed by the representatives of the people, it could be discussed, modified, restricted and improved in the interests of the people, while an order-in-council would have to accept the C.P.R.'s proposal holus bolus. An act of Parliament could restrict and amend.

Didn't Mean That at All.

Montreal, Oct. 3.—Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, in announcing the forthcoming issue of $60,000,000 Canadian Pacific Railway stock at $175 per share in the ratio of three shares of new stock to ten of those now held did not expressly intimate that the Ottawa Government had already sanctioned the proposal and later denied that he had intended to convey that impression.

At $175 per share the company would receive $105,000,000, and at a market valuation of $275 per share the shareholders would be made a present of $60,000,000.

At the annual meeting of the shareholders yesterday the report of the directors was unanimously adopted.

Wilmot D. Mathews, Sir Sandford Fleming, Adam R. Creelman and Sir William Whyte were re-elected directors.

A resolution was passed authorizing the construction and lease of lines mentioned in the annual report, and the purchase of the Cape de le Madeleine Railway. The proposed issue of $60,000,000 new stock at $175 per share which forms the basis of the much discussed application to the Government was ratified by the shareholders, and it was Shaughnessy's remarks in moving the report which gave rise to the understanding that the Cabinet had sanctioned the issue.

May Stand Trial Again.

Ottawa, Oct. 3.—Because a pardon would remove only the penalty and not the stigma of conviction, a new trial will likely be granted Kyoshk, the Indian, who, condemned on a first charge of murder, was acquitted on a second, the two charges being based on the same crime.

There is only one precedent for this, namely, the case of Mrs. Sternaman, to whom Hon. David Mills, when Minister of Justice, granted a new trial after her conviction.

NEED NOT TREAT SEWAGE

Ottawa, Oct. 3.—"To compel cities along the great lakes to so treat their sewage that it would not contaminate the lakes into which it is dumped would place upon these cities an unnecessary and unjustifiable expense which would bankrupt the cities in most cases."

This was the opinion of Dr. McLaughlin, an expert from the surgeon-general's office at Washington, D.C., who recently reported on the question of the pollution of the great lakes by the American cities.

This evidence was given yesterday before the international joint commission on waterways now in session here, which has been asked by the Governments of the United States and Canada to report on the whole question of the pollution of boundary waters.

AGREED ON NEW ORGANIZATION

Toronto, Oct. 3.—In the future the church extension and mission work of the Methodist church of Toronto will be under the control of one organization, to be known as the Methodist Union. A plan with this in view was adopted yesterday afternoon at a meeting held in the Wesley Building, when the Social Union adopted the proposed constitution. Application will now be made to the Ontario Government for a charter. The new organization will have no share capital, but will start with the object of raising $50,000 to carry on the work of the first year.

The organizations it is at present proposed to merge, have an annual revenue of less than $25,000. Another meeting will be held in November to make final arrangements for the carrying on of the work under the united body.

ONLY ONE WAS MURDERED

Mexico City, Oct. 3.—Herbert L. Russell, manager of the San Juan Michis Ranch in Durango, which is the property of Allen C. McCaughan, the American vice-consul at that place, was murdered Sunday night by the rebels.

Consul Theodore C. Hamm reported the tragedy to the American embassy here in a cypher telegram, which by an error in translation, was first given out by the embassy officials as involving the killing of Mr. McCaughan and Mr. Cliff, another American of Durango.

Ambassador Wilson immediately made representations to the Government and yesterday received assurances that every effort will be made to capture and punish the murderer.

CHINAMAN'S BED IN REFRIGERATOR

Ottawa, Oct. 3.—An inspection of the laundries of Ottawa is being conducted by the civic sanitary officials One of the discoveries yesterday was the presence of a Chinaman sleeping in a refrigerator.

The place was formerly used as a butcher shop, in connection with which a stationary refrigerator had been built. In this the laundryman had his bed.

Toronto, Oct. 3.—Coroner Dr. Elliot's jury yesterday afternoon found that Delia McGoey came to her death on Tuesday afternoon as a result of [illegible] car. The car was driven by James Scott, a butcher at 366 Davenport road, and he was exonerated from all blame in connection with the death of the child.

First Words In Ten Years.

St. Thomas, Ont., Oct. 3.—James Dunn, aged 60, of Aylmer, had not spoken for ten years, when on Tuesday he suddenly said to his sister, with whom he lived, "I'll kill you."

He followed this up with a crushing blow in her face, which knocked her senseless. Neighbors came to the rescue.

Dunn was taken to London Asylum at once, where he had been an inmate in 1898-99, when he was discharged as harmless.

Two Killed In Auto Smash.

Calgary, Alta., Oct. 3.—Dr. Thomas H. Quick, of Calgary, and William Guy, paving inspector, whose home is in Cornwall, Ont., were instantly killed here at 11 o'clock Monday night in a motor accident. Hall Nye, a lo-[illegible], was badly injured, and may die.

Dr. Quick was driving the car, when some defect in the mechanism caused it to swerve and strike a watering cart.

Dublin, Oct. 3.— A suffragette "hunger strike" has brought about the release of the second of the militant suffragettes imprisoned for misbehaviour during the visit here of Premier Asquith. Gladys Evans who tried to burn the theatre during the meeting, was released yesterday on license on the advice of a physician but will have to report periodically to the authorities during the remainder of the five year term, to which she was sentenced.

POWERS WILL NOT PERMIT BALKAN WAR TO SPREAD

Allied States Will Present Their Ultimatum to Turkey To-day Demanding Autonomy of Macedonia and Other States Within Three Days.

Berlin, Oct. 3.—A pessimistic semi-official statement, intimating that war is highly probable, is published in yesterday's Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung. The hope is expressed, however, that the great powers will be able to prevent a general conflagration.

The statement, which speaks with a plainness found only in semi-official promulgations of the most serious kind, is in part:

"The alleged or actual measures of Turkish mobilization have given the Balkan states a reason or excuse for mobilizing their forces. It cannot be determined with certainty whether their action is a counter-move to the Turkish preparations or whether it indicates serious belligerent intentions. The measures taken by the Balkan states, however, have undoubtedly increased the possibility of a collision between them and Turkey.

"With firm will on the part of all the powers to prevent an extension of the conflict, they must ultimately arrive at an understanding on the subject. If, therefore, the immediate possibility of a collision in the Balkans cannot be disregarded, it may confidently be expected that a conflagration of wider extent, into which the European great powers might be drawn, will be avoided."

The German Foreign Minister, Alfred von Kiderlen-Waechter, in an interview on the situation in the Balkans, made public yesterday, said:

"The situation is so precarious from a military point of view that hostilities may break out at any moment. The great powers, however, are united in their determination not to permit any change in the territorial position. It is hoped that the certainty of gaining only glory and no acquisition of territory if they are successful may at the last moment exert a pacifying effect on the Balkan states."

Ultimatum To-day.

London, Oct. 3.—No ultimatum has yet been delivered to Turkey from the four great Balkan states, but, according to the most reliable news, such an ultimatum will be presented at Constantinople to-day. It will demand autonomy for Macedonia, Albania, Old Servia and Crete within three days. In the event of failure to comply with this demand, the Balkan coalition will repeat its request and at the same time address a collective note to the great powers, notifying them that after the expiration of another three days the Balkan states will enforce the demand by recourse to arms.

Thus there will be a respite of a week before hostilities open.

This respite will be utilized by the powers to seek to arrange a compromise with Turkey acceptable to the four states which, it is believed, will prefer a way out without bloodshed.

The Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, Count von Berchthold, had a conference of more than an hour with King George at Vienna yesterday.

No further news has been received of the reported frontier conflicts, but tension continues extreme, especially owing to the seizure by the Turkish authorities of Greek vessels.

"If the Balkan states have in view some idea of autonomy for Macedonia they can be informed immediately that this is out of the question," was the reply of a representative of the Turkish embassy to an enquiry as to what Turkey was willing to do to appease those who are threatening her with war.

The official pointed out that Turkey had decided to apply to the whole of European Turkey the reforms already introduced, in Albania. The Porte, he said, realized that reforms were needed, but their application could not be carried out in a minute. Unless the Balkan states, he continued, were merely seeking a pretext for trouble, their only course was to allow reasonable time for the reforms to go into effect.

Turkey, he said, sincerely desired peace and had given evidence of this when the Adrianople manoeuvres were countermanded. She could not, however, remain inactive while neighbors were mobilizing their armies on her borders.

Turkey Orders Mobilization.

Constantinople, Oct. 3.—Orders were issued by the Turkish War Minister yesterday morning for a general mobilization of all the forces in both European and Asiatic Turkey.

The Turkish press is absolutely unanimous in support of the Government. The newspapers urge the Ministers to face the foreign foes threatening the empire, and asks them not to be intimidated by the odds confronting the country. They declare that the Turkish army would be glad of an opportunity to avenge those who fell at the Shipka Pass in the Russo-Turkish war of 1877-78

The Tanin says: "Hurrah for war. If the Bulgarian war ardor does not subside by itself, Turkish bayonets will cool it."

Calling Out Reservists.

New York, Oct. 3.—A cable message calling upon Bulgarians and Macedonians in this country to return home, was posted yesterday at the headquarters of the "Macedonian-Bulgarian organization" on Morris street. The message was signed by the president of the central committee of Sofia and read as follows:—"Send all Bulgarians and Macedonians to Bulgaria."

There are only about 2,000 Bulgarians and Macedonians in New York, but it is said that there are large colonies of these nationalities in St. Louis, Chicago, Pittsburg and other industrial centres. Many of these are in the first or second reserve, having served time in the army.

Good For Italy.

Rome, Oct. 3—The Balkan crisis will hasten peace, according to the prevalent opinion in Italian diplomatic circles. This is regarded as the only way in which Turkey can claim a free hand on the sea to permit the transport of her troops from Asiatic Turkey. The great fleet of Italy being thus removed as a factor, the [illegible]man navy will be free to subjugate the Grecian fleet, which is inferior."

All the Italian bourses fell sharply in consequence of the Balkan crisis.

MR. GRAHAM AND THE MARRIAGE BILL

All of the speakers at the Liberal rally in this city Tuesday night made some reference to the ne temere decree and the Lancaster marriage bill, but it was left to Hon. George P. Graham to discuss the question in anything like detail. Mr. Graham made the most of his subject as a weapon with which to smite his adversaries. He even went so far as to intimate that Mr. Lancaster, disappointed in his ambition to obtain a place in the Borden Cabinet introduced his bill in a spirit of vindictiveness hoping to embarrass the administration and its supporters. At the first sight of the measure Mr. Graham tells us that the Conservative members of the House of Commons ducked under the barn.

We can all recall how Canada was unsettled upon the subject of the status of mixed marriages and what confusion resulted. The national mind was in a state of uncertainty and doubt. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, at that time premier, declared he was helpless to provide a remedy, being satisfied to acknowledge that the church of which he is a devoted member is supreme on such matters. His minister of justice agreed with him, but others just as prominent in legal circles held different opinions. A legal question is never decided until passed upon by the highest court in the Empire. Sir Wilfrid declined to make any move looking to the final settlement of the dispute.

The present Government grappled with the situation at once thus redeeming the promises made to the voters before the election. There were two methods of securing a final solution. One of these was to pass the Lancaster Bill as submitted to Parliament and have the validity of the new law tested by carrying into court a case which would arise under its operation. The other, the one which the Government followed, was to apply to the Supreme Court to ascertain whether or not the Parliament of the Dominion had the right to pass such a law. The first method, tedious and cumbersome, would have prolonged the uncertainty. The second in the course of a few months settled the matter once for all, and if it did eventually result in the decision that the Dominion Parliament had no right to interfere in such matters, that was no more than what was expected by a large percentage of those who agreed to refer the matter to the highest tribunal in Canada and later to the Privy Council.

What does Mr. Graham and his friends see in this course, in the redemption of an ante-election pledge to warrant the position which they are now pleased to assume? Why does Mr. Graham so brazenly assert that Mr. Borden has done just the same with the marriage question as Sir Wilfrid did, seeing that while the latter toyed with it the former settled the uncertainty and set all doubts at rest by prompt and effective action?

Having no policy of their own and with their old battle cry fallen into innocuous desuetude the Liberals are evidently compelled to devote all their energies to attempting to ridicule anything that originates with their opponents.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION

Some of the papers in Canada are declaring every day or so that Roosevelt will surely be elected president of the United States. They do it by a system of figuring which is probably of their own invention. Some states will choose Taft electors, Roosevelt supporters will win out in others and Wilson men will score in several more. A month after the election, these electors, comprising the electoral college, will meet to finally select a president. If it is found that Wilson has not a majority in the college the Taft electors will flop to Roosevelt and the trick is done.

This is easy when it appears on paper, but it will never work out in practice. At least if it does, a precedent will be established dangerous to the peace of the community. The different electors in the college are supposed to stand pat for the candidates they were chosen by the people to support. There is nothing in the constitution of the country to compel them to do so, but this has been an unwritten law, ever since presidents were elected. With three candidates in the field, it is just possible that there may be a deadlock in the college, none of the candidates having more electors than the other two combined without which there can be no choice. In that case, the matter will be thrown into Congress, that body to take such steps as it may to settle the dispute.

Such is likely to happen. If Roosevelt and Taft divide between them the votes of the northern states and Wilson carries the states that have been solidly Democratic in the past, there can be no election by the college. The political situation, quiet though it may be at the present, is the most novel and interesting that has ever arisen in the Republic.

MR. FISHER'S CONFESSION

"What has the Borden Government done during the year it has been in power?" asked one speaker after another at the Brock street rink meeting Tuesday night. If there was no one in the audience to shout out "nothing" in reply then some of the other members of the travelling mutual admiration society rushed into the breach and made the required answer.

Oh, for that jewel, consistency, so rare a possession among the Liberals. Out of their own mouths are they confounded on this as on so many more of their contentions. Hon. Sidney Fisher brought confusion to his colleagues when he produced his mass of figures to show the progress made by the Dominion under the Laurier administration.

He stated that during the four years from 1896-1900 progress was not so marked.

THE GOVERNMENT HAD BEEN IN POWER TOO SHORT A TIME TO PRODUCE RESULTS.

This from the bunch that now asks "What has Mr. Borden done in one year?" According to their own confession and by their own figures they were unable to make any material showing or to achieve anything in four years.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Half the audience at the Laurier meeting was composed of ladies and children. Anyone watching the crowd when it rose to its feet to cheer could readily see that the same proportion of the other half were Conservatives.

Hon George P. Graham's optimistic temperament is worth a fortune to any man provided he really believes that the outlook for his party is as bright as he tells us it is.

The Globe is still undaunted. It calls upon the Liberals to fight to the last ditch at the approaching by-elections in East Middlesex and North Waterloo on the same platform as the one on which they stood last year with a few belated planks added

Did Peterborough grow and wax wealthy only when Laurier was in power? Has the expansion ceased during the past year? The assessors' figures just published show the contrary.

The Toronto Star says that home rule, by some other name, would have more supporters. It's not the name but the body of the bill that stands most in need of a change.

While Col. Roosevelt was making his tour of North Carolina, one of his hearers declared himself a Taft Republican. In the interests of his own safety, that man had better keep away from the polls on election day, for if two such votes happen to be cast, someone will be arrested for repeating.

Inspector Kennedy of the Toronto Morality Department, says that since clergymen have set in to preach that there is no hell, the masses, fearing nothing, can no longer be controlled. It is evident that the officer's long experience has taught him that old time doctrine, that you cannot govern a city or nation unless the people are kept in a state of terror. There is something in the Morality Department just as much out of date as the methods employed in censoring plays.

Serving His Country.

A certain public office has been the object of much satire because of the passive nature of the incumbent's duties—except when he is called by tragic occurrence into the thick of action. So very negative, indeed, is the work of this public servant that he sometimes serves his country most efficiently by being absent, as appears in this extract from Moses Coit Tyler's journal, written in Washington years ago:

"President Grant never starts a conversation, but when it is started he often says a neat thing. Last year there was an excursion down the Potomac. He was on board, with his cabinet and a quorum of both houses.

"'Mr. President,' said Mrs. Judd, who sat near him, 'it would be a pretty bad thing to have a great accident happen to this party. Nearly the whole government would be destroyed.'

"'Yes, Mrs. Judd,' assented the president, 'but you observe that the vice president has very prudently stayed at home.'"

Talking Canaries.

Talking canaries are a great rarity, but several authenticated instances are on record. At Norwood, England, in 1858 a lady had a canary bird which began by repeating a word which its mistress had often used to it—"Kissie, kissie"—and by following the word up by an imitation of the sound of a kiss. After a time the bird repeated other words until it had a large vocabulary of phrases, one of which consisted of five words. Again, in 1863, a talking canary was exhibited in Bath, with a vocabulary such as is generally taught to parrots, and another talking canary was exhibited for a few weeks in this country, but it unfortunately caught cold and died. In Germany and the Tyrol canaries are taught to imitate the notes of other birds and whistle simple tunes, and the words which it imitates may be regarded as a mere development or variant of its musical notes.

MONTREAL, Oct. 2.—A good business was worked in Manitoba spring wheat over the cable today, owing to the fact that continental buyers accepted pretty nearly everything offered by exporters last night and were in the market for more at higher prices to-day. The local trade in coarse grades was quiet, but as supplies are small prices rule firm. There was a fair demand from European sources for spring wheat flour, but the volume of business doing is small, as prices bid in many instances were 6d to 9d per sack out of line. The local trade is fairly active and steady. Demand for shorts is keen, but bran is quieter. Butter strong, under a fairly good demand. Local stocks in store 189,000 packages creamery, 1600 dairy. CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Oct. 2.—Receipts of live stock at the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market for the week ending Sept. 28 were 1800 cattle, 1250 sheep and lambs, 2200 hogs and 1150 calves, while the offerings on the market today for sale amounted to 1400 cattle, 1100 sheep and lambs, 200 hogs and 600 calves.

A weaker feeling developed in the market for cattle, on account of the much larger offerings and prices generally ruled lower, but at the decline the demand was fairly good from butchers and packers for the best grade. The common and inferior stock moved slow as the supply of such was far in excess of the requirements. However, on the whole a better trade was done, best steers selling at $6.50, good at $5 to $6, and the lower grades from that down to $4 per cwt. Butchers' cows brought from $3.75 to $5 and canning stock from $1.50 to $3 per cwt., while butchers' bulls sold at from $2.50 to $7.25 per cwt.

The market for sheep and lambs was active and steady under a good demand and sales of the former were made at $3.60 and the latter at $6 per cwt. The demand for calves was good, of which the offerings were fair for the season of the year and sales were made at prices ranging from $3 to $14 each, as to size and quality. The trade in hogs was active and prices ruled about steady at from $8.50 to $8.75 per cwt., weighed off cars.

BY

JACK LONDON

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith
Copyright, 1911, by the Macmillan Company

At sunset the Martha broke out her anchor and got under way, dipping her flag and saluting with a bomb gun. The union jack ran up and down the staff, and Sheldon replied with his brass signal cannon. The miners pitched their tents in the compound and cooked on the beach, while Tudor dined with Joan and Sheldon.

Their guest seemed to have been everywhere and seen everything and met everybody, and, encouraged by Joan, his talk was largely upon his own adventures. Descended from old New England stock, his father a consul general, he had been born in Germany, in which country he had received his early education and his accent. Then, still a boy, he had rejoined his father in Turkey and accompanied him later to Persia, his father having been appointed minister to that country.

Tudor had gone through South American revolutions, been a rough rider in Cuba, a scout in South Africa and a war correspondent in the Russo-Japanese war. He had mushed dogs in the Klondike, washed gold from the sands of Nome and edited a newspaper in San Francisco. The president of the United States was his friend. He was equally at home in the clubs of London and the continent, the Grand hotel at Yokohama and the selectors' shanties in the Never Never country. He had shot big game in Siam, pearled in the Paumotus, visited Tolstoy, seen the Passion play and crossed the Andes on muleback, while he was a living directory of the fever holes of west Africa.

Sheldon leaned back in his chair on the veranda, sipping his coffee and listening. In spite of himself, he felt touched by the charm of a man who had led so varied a life. It seemed to him that the man addressed himself particularly to Joan. Sheldon watched her rapt attention, listened to her spontaneous laughter, quick questions and passing judgments and felt grow within him the dawning consciousness that he loved her. Then as if the scene had been prepared by a clever playwright, Utami came upon the veranda to report to Joan the capture of a crocodile in the trap they had made for her.

Tudor's face, illuminated by the match with which he was lighting his cigarette, caught Utami's eye, and Utami forgot to report to his mistress.

"Hello, Tudor," he said with a familiarity that startled Sheldon.

The Polynesian's hand went out, and Tudor, shaking it, was staring into his face.

"Who is it?" he asked. "I can't see you."

"Utami."

"And who the dickens is Utami? Where did I ever meet you, my man?"

"You no forget the Huahine?" Utami chided. "Last time Huahine sail?"

Tudor gripped the Tahitian's hand a second time and took it with genuine heartiness.

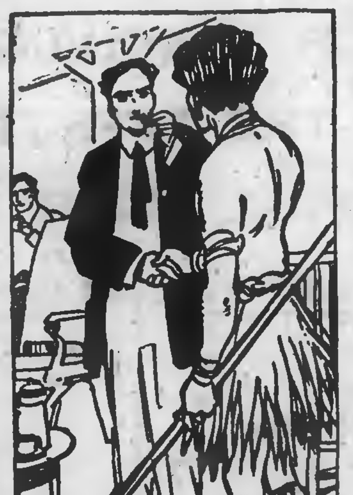
"There was only one Kanaka who came out of the Huahine that last voyage, and that Kanaka was Joe. The deuce take it, man, I'm glad to see you, though I never heard your new name before."

"Yes, everybody speak me Joe along the Huahine. Utami my name all the time, just the same."

"But what are you doing here?" Tudor asked, releasing the sailor's hand and leaning eagerly forward.

"Me sail along Missie Lackalanna her schooner Miele. We go Tahiti, Raiatea, Tahaa, Bora-Bora, Manua, Tutuila, Tpia, Savaii and Fiji islands—plenty Fiji islands. Me stop along Missie Lackalanna in Solomons. Very soon she catch another schooner."

"He and I were the two survivors of the wreck of the Huahine," Tudor explained to the others. "Fifty-seven all told on board when we sailed from Huapa, and Joe and I were the only two that ever set foot on land again. Hurricane, you know, in the Paumotus. That was when I was after pearls."



"AND WHO THE DICKENS IS UTAMI?"

"And you never told me, Utami, that you'd been wrecked in a hurricane," Joan said reproachfully.

The big Tahitian shifted his weight and flashed his teeth in a conciliating smile.

"Me no t'ink nothing 't all," he said.

"All right, Utami," Tudor said. "I'll see you in the morning and have a yarn."

"He saved my life, the beggar," Tudor explained, as the Tahitian strode away and with heavy softness of foot went down the steps. "Swim! I never met a better swimmer."

And thereat, solicited by Joan, Tudor narrated the wreck of the Huahine, while Sheldon smoked and pondered and decided that whatever the man's shortcomings were, he was at least not a liar.

CHAPTER XIV.

A MATTER OF TRAINING.

THE days passed, and Tudor seemed loath to leave the hospitality of Berande. Everything was ready for the start, but he lingered on, spending much time in Joan's company and thereby increasing the dislike Sheldon had taken to him. He went swimming with her, in point of rashness exceeding her, and dynamited fish with her, diving among the hungry ground sharks and contesting with them for possession of the stunned prey, until he earned the approval of the whole Tahitian crew. Arahu challenged him to tear a fish from a shark's jaws, leaving half to the shark and bringing the other half himself to the surface, and Tudor performed the feat, a flip from the sandpaper hide of the astonished shark scraping several inches of skin from his shoulder. And Joan was delighted, while Sheldon, looking on, realized that here was the hero of her adventure dreams coming true. She did not care for love, but he felt that if ever she did love, it would be that sort of a man—"a man who exhibited," was his way of putting it.

He felt himself handicapped in the presence of Tudor, who had the gift of making a show of all his qualities. Sheldon knew himself for a brave man, wherefore he made no advertisement of the fact. Life pulsed steadily and deep in him, and it was not his nature needlessly to agitate the surface so that the world could see the splash he was making. And the effect of the other's amazing exhibitions was to make him retreat more deeply within himself and wrap himself more thickly than ever in the nerveless, stoical calm of his race.

"You are so stupid the last few days," Joan complained to him. "You don't seem to have an idea in your head above black labor and cocoanuts. What is the matter?"

Sheldon smiled and beat a further retreat within himself, listening the while to Joan and Tudor propounding the theory of the strong arm by which the white man ordered life among the lesser breeds. As he listened Sheldon realized, as by revelation, that that was precisely what he was doing. While they philosophised about it he was living it. But why talk about it? It was sufficient to do it and be done with it.

He said as much, dryly and quietly, and found himself involved in a discussion, with Joan and Tudor siding against him.

"The Yankees talk a lot about what they do and have done," Tudor said, "and are looked down upon by the English as braggarts. But the Yankee is only a child. He does not know effectually how to brag. He talks about it, you see. But the Englishman goes him one better by not talking about it. The Englishman's proverbial lack of bragging is a subtler form of brag, after all."

"I never thought of it before," Joan cried. "Of course. An Englishman performs some terrifically heroic exploit and is very modest and reserved, refuses to talk about it at all, and the effect is that by his silence he as much as says: 'I do things like this every day. It is as easy as rolling off a log. You ought to see the really heroic things I could do if they ever came my way.' Confess, Mr. Sheldon, don't you feel proud down inside when you've done something daring or courageous?"

Sheldon nodded.

"Then," she pressed home the point, "isn't disguising that pride under a mask of careless indifference equivalent to telling a lie?"

"Yes, it is," he admitted. "But we tell similar lies every day. It is a matter of training, and the English are better trained, that is all. Your countrymen will be trained as well in time. As Mr. Tudor said, the Yankees are young. Certainly we are proud inside of the things we do and have done—proud as Lucifer, yes, and prouder. But we have grown up and no longer talk about such things."

"I surrender," Joan cried. "You are not so stupid after all."

The doctor said I needed an operation for female trouble but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped me more than the doctors did. I hope that every one who is suffering will get the Compound. My pains, nervousness and backache are gone and I have gained five pounds. I owe my thanks to your medicine for it is the working girls friend, and all women who suffer should write to you for special advice."—Miss TILLIE PLENZIG, 3 Jay St., Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

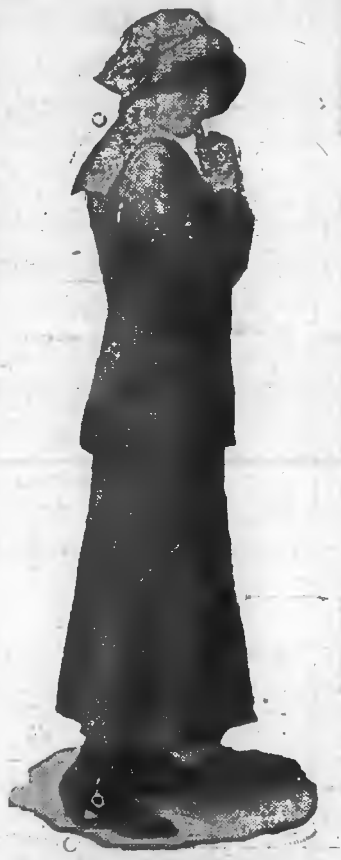
When a remedy has lived for over thirty years, steadily growing in popularity and influence, and thousands upon thousands of women declare they owe their very lives to it, is it not reasonable to believe that it is an article of great merit?

We challenge anyone to show any other one remedy for a special class of disease which has attained such an enormous demand and maintained it for so many years as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

STEAMER COSTUME.

Knitted Suit For the Young Girl.



IN GRAY AND BROWN WORSTED.

No matter how the breezes blow on deck, the ocean traveler if gowned in the knitted costume illustrated will be comfortable as well as smartly attired.

The Norfolk jacket is natty and close fitting, and a becoming feature is the deep sailor collar of white pique.

The close fitting little straw motor bonnet is very fetching.

Helpful Hints For Homes.

To take away the oily taste, when using oil for frying make the oil very hot and then fry a piece of onion in it and when brown take it out.

When darning stockings run a thread round each hole before beginning and draw until the edges run flat. This makes the hole appear smaller, and it will be much easier to mend.

Scalds or burns can be cured by applying oatmeal and cold water. The cooling qualities of the meal help to draw out the fire from the burn, while its soothing properties heal it.

A simple and excellent way to remove dirty marks from a raincoat is to cut a raw potato in slices and rub it well on the marks. It will also remove mud stains from dress skirts, children's coats and gentlemen's trousers.

Now is the time when housewives should be thinking about a stock of herbs for winter use. The best plan is to dry the cut herbs in the sun, the plants being laid on sheets of paper or in trays. When this is not possible they may be dried in front of the fire or in the oven.

Ring Off.

Two telephone girls in different exchanges were having a chat over the wires on the subject of dress. Both were going to a garden party on the following Saturday afternoon, and the discussion on what they should wear waxed interesting. Ten minutes passed and the topic was still far from exhausted, but an insistent masculine voice at last compelled one of them to turn her thoughts to other things.

"Are you there?" the voice yelled. "Are you there? Hello! Ah, at last! Who is that speaking? Who are"—

"What line d'you think you're on?" demanded the girl, annoyed and indignant.

"I don't know," came the weak and weary reply; "but, judging from all I've heard just now, I think I must have got on the [illegible]!"

YOU CAN BE ABSOLUTELY SURE OF VALUES

If you carefully read the store advertisements and follow them in your buying.

Merchants advertise certain lines because they know these lines will advertise their stores. Because there is something about certain goods, they are put in conspicuous places and the people are told about them. It may be the exclusiveness or newness of design, it may be an unusual quality, it may be an attractive price,

But there is at least one definite, sure reason why a merchant advertises an article and is willing to stake the reputation of his store upon it.

Therefore, when you see an article advertised in "THE REVIEW, depend upon it, that article is good value, as good value as can be obtained in that particular store.

Municipality Decides the Question and Not the Dominion Alliance

"That's erroneous," said Mr. A. B. Cunningham, secretary of the Temperance and Moral Reform Association to-day, when he was asked regarding the decision of the Dominion Alliance, to hold a local option campaign in Peterborough. "The municipality decides for itself," added Mr. Cunningham. "The Alliance acts with the municipality."

Just what plan is to be pursued has not been decided by the local body. The meeting for the final word awaits the call of the chairman of the sub-committee appointed at the recent meeting in the Y.M.C.A.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir—Your very able account of the Laurier meeting is pleasing to your readers. Also the letter of H.M.S. "Thunderbolt" is one of the best things of the week. More power to Mr. Thunderbolt. The statement you record Hon. Sidney Fisher made in the presence of Sir Wilfrid Laurier himself, that Sir Wilfrid had acted as he had in the late Manitoba boundaries business, because he was a "good Catholic Canadian," is a surprise to many. We did not know before that our rulers were acting in any such way in regard to their religious faiths. If in the case of Manitoba, why not in the case of all Canada? It was a remarkable confession.

Yours etc.,

BE WISE.

P. S.—When Sir Wilfrid says that Canada's navy should not automatically go to Britain's aid in case of war, what would he think if Britain's fleet weren't to come automatically to our aid, but must await the decision of a British parliament. And what if it didn't come at all. What an Empire that would be. It is easy to see that such a plan ultimately makes for the sure break-up of the Empire.

THE FUNERAL OF THE LATE DANIEL SULLIVAN

The funeral of the late Daniel Sullivan took place from the House of Providence this morning to St. Peter's Cathedral, and St. Peter's cemetery. The passing of Mr. Sullivan removes still another old resident of Peterborough, who was active in the town many years ago. There are some Peterborough people who recall his earlier life, and residents in Douro who remember their first days at school with Mr. Sullivan as master.

During the ten years he made his home with the House of Providence he was a great help to the Sisters in charge, for he maintained that characteristic of commanding respect, to such a degree that his influence among the other male inmates of the institution was always in the interests of harmony and ordliness. He had his own quarters in the House.

"THE RED ROSE"

There are three acts in John C. Fisher's big musical comedy, "THE RED ROSE," which Manager Turner has secured for presentation at the Grand Theatre, on Tuesday next, Oct. 8. This naturally calls for much accurate detail, to which Mr. Fisher is said to have responded most liberally with three elaborate and complete settings. The first act is laid in the art school of Mr. Julien Duprez, in the Latin quarter of Paris. As would be typical of such an establishment, the works of art are numerous, and Mr. Fisher is said to have expended many thousands of dollars to give the scene a proper atmosphere. The second act shows the Baron's chateau on the outskirts of Paris. Fine opportunities are here given for coloring symbolic of a great man's estate. The last act takes place at the ball of the Four Arts, and accuracy is said to dominate every detail.

This tremendous organization numbering some sixty-five persons and requiring two 60 foot baggage cars to transport the scenic equipment, will be seen here in its entirety.

DISTRICT NURSE EXPECTED WITHIN NEXT TWO WEEKS

Ladies of the Health Association to Hold Annual Sale of Christmas Stamps and Calendars

The Peterborough Health Association have secured the services of Miss Mabel Sparkhall, of St. Johns, N. B., as district nurse. She comes highly recommended and with all the qualifications required for the position, being at present acting in the capacity of district nurse at St. Johns, N.B. She will arrive in Peterborough to commence her duties on or about October 15th, and will act under the supervision of four members of the Health Association and three from the Ladies Auxiliary of the Association.

A number of rules governing and regulating her duties have been passed by the Society. One of the rules is that a report on the work of the district nurse is to be made monthly to the Association.

CHRISTMAS STAMPS.

The ladies of the Health Association are already formulating their plans for money raising to assist in the work of disease battling. The Christmas stamps which were found to be such a fruitful source of revenue last year will again be sold. An order for fifty thousand has been placed and are in the hands of the printers.

A capable convenor of the stamp committee has been appointed who was entrusted with the business end of the undertaking. The committee wish it understood however, that they will not conflict with the tag-day work for the Children's Aid Society. They will not commence the sale of the stamps until after the annual Children's Aid Society tag-day campaign. The pretty souvenir calendars will also be sold this year as last.

SUDDEN CALL CAME TO MR. PETER HAMILTON

He Passed Away This Morning in the Main Office, and 'in Harness'—One of Peterboro's Most Prominent industrial Builders Gone—He Gave Freely of His Best Efforts to the Place of His Birth —Funeral on Saturday

Peter Hamilton, president of the Peter Hamilton Company, Limited, 279 George street, expired in the main office of the company at five minutes to nine this morning, death setting in almost instantly and before physicians Halliday and Mann, who were hastily summoned, could arrive. His death was pronounced as due to a sudden failure of the heart. He was standing in the office engaged in conversation with Mr Frank Patten who at one time was connected with the Peter Hamilton Co. They had been enchanging reminiscences, when without a word of warning Mr Hamilton fell over and sank to the floor. When the doctors arrived he was dead, passing away without uttering a word.

The late Peter Hamilton was seventy-one years of age. He was a remarkably active man, and this morning, as was his habit, was practically the first person in the office. Although not feeling very well of late, it was never for a moment imagined that he would be taken off with such stunning suddenness, or under such shocking circumstances. His devotion to business was wonderful, and it was his untiring energy and outstanding executive ability that largely built up the business of which he was president.

SPENT HIS LIFE HERE.

Peter Hamilton was born in the year 1841, in Peterborough. His education was obtained in the local public and high schools, after which he entered the implement business. His wonderful mechanical ability was afforded ample scope in this line, and he designed and constructed many of the present day and most modern agricultural implements. His reputation is that of being the pioneer implement manufacturer of Ontario.

When the late Mr Hamilton threw [illegible] which he was the late president, it was operating on a comparatively small scale, compared with its present strength and output. His genius and ability built it up in every department until to-day the company maintains its position as an independent company, indifferent to the scores of other concerns which have succumbed to mergers and combinations.

The deceased had enjoyed considerable prominence in municipal and civic circles. He was a faithful and progressive chairman of the Board of Education for several years, and also served with honor in the City Council.

In speaking of the worth of the late Mr. Hamilton, in his connection with the Board of Education, Mr W. Hill, a member of that body for twenty-five years, said this morning that he had never had a more able colleague than Mr. Hamilton. He was conscientious and fair-minded, and said Mr. Hill, you could always depend on Mr. Hamilton to be right.

He was a strong Liberal, serving as president of the Liberal Association at one time.

He was a Presbyterian and attended St. Paul's Presbyterian church and was a member of the Board of Sessions.

Every one with whom he was associated speak in the highest terms of his worth and integrity.

The surviving members of his family are two sons, James, of Peterborough; G. Milne, of Vancouver, and three daughters, Mrs. Bruce Gillespie, Mrs. W. F. Shaw, of Portland, Oregon and Florence, at home.

It has been arranged to have the funeral on Saturday afternoon to Little Lake cemetery.

PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. J. Emerson Hodgson entertained at a bright little affair last evening, when quantities of white asters adorned the drawing rooms. Five hundred was in play at four tables. A dainty menu was served at the midnight hour, after which a delightful hop was enjoyed by the guests, who numbered Miss Hawkey, Miss Dawson, Miss Dunne, Miss McCrimmon, Miss Coneybeare, Miss Cavanah, Miss McKillop, Miss Barasslu, Mr. Dawson, Mr. Seamon, Mr. Westland, Mr. McGuckin, Mr. Kilpatrick and Mr. Fisher.—Lethbridge Herald.

CHICAGO DRUMMER SPOKE LAST NIGHT

Gave Interesting Address in First Church of Christ Scientist

Those who were present last night at First Church of Christ, Scientist, listened to some very interesting remarks from a commercial traveller. He said in part, that he had been brought up in the Hebrew faith, his father having been educated for a Rabbi, and he had no use for Christ. However he got reading the Text Book of Christian Science by Mrs. Eddy. There he found a definition of Christ, as the truth about God represented and taught by the corporal man Jesus that he could accept.

He accepted this Christ. He had been delivered from the tobacco and drug habit and other sins. He is very grateful that there is a Christ that destroys sin, and heals the sick, thus bringing Heaven to earth. He and his whole family now believe in Christ as well as in God, and are members of First Church of Christ, Scienteet, in Chicago.

GOING BACK TO THE WOODS

Men Joining the Lumber Camps for the Winter.

Parties of lumbermen have been leaving for the woods for the last two or three weeks. One of the parties of the Peterborough Lumber Company left this morning for Anstruther where that company is operating. The wages are very good, the same as last year, which are the highest ever paid to lumbermen.

SOME BAD BOYS MISBEHAVE AT PUBLIC LIBRARY

There is a party of boys who are wont to gather every evening on the steps of the Public Library and make a general nuisance of themselves around the front. They are in the habit of jumping off the tops of the steps onto the grass. In so doing they dig holes in the lawn and break the branches off the young trees. The police have been notified and have taken the matter into their own hands and future offences of this kind will be vigorously punished.

W.O.W. Notice.

The members of Sherwood Forest Camp, No. 50, are urgently requested to attend the unveiling of the late Sov. Lake's monument, in the Little Lake Cemetery, on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 6th. The Camp meets at the new Hall at 2.30 p.m. 3d

P. C. I. AND BANKERS PLAY RUGBY SATURDAY AFTERNOON

The P. C. I. rugbyists and the Bankers will give followers of the gridiron game, an exhibition, at Riverside Park, Saturday afternoon at three o'clock.

As promoters of the various sports the P. C. I. have accomplished much and it is only due to their efforts that the game is played in Peterboro this year. Peterboro was on the rugby map with a championship team, but the situation now stands reversed. A resurrection is somewhat of a doubtful proposition, but the Central Park boys are doing their share, and deserve the plaudits. They will be encouraged, if interest is shown in the game on Saturday afternoon and with such encouragement, will try to arrange for the appearance here of teams from other places.

TY COBB PICKS BOSTON TO WIN

Ty Cobb picks Boston to win the world's series. He says:—

"The Giants have an exceptionally strong team and I believe they will make a much stronger fight than they did in the series of 1911. They will go into the 1912 series knowing the ropes better and will settle down to business much quicker than they did last fall.

"To delve into the statistics of the two clubs; to dope out a winner on the records made one can only pick one club' the American League pennant winners. They are much stronger in every department.

"Ty" Cobb

"But my belief is that the Giants will be a much harder club to defeat than they were last year and might be returned winner if that fickle goddess of luck smile upon them. I say that because I don't want to appear as predicting a walk-over for the American League in this series.

"The Boston outfield—Lewis, left; Speaker, centre; and Hooper, right—I can say without question of doubt makes up the best all-around outfield—throwing, fielding and hitting—that is working in the big league to-day. And if they all pull off the stuff in the world's series that they do in the regular season 'fans' will see some unusual stunts."

SPORT TALK

All of the American League managers call the Red Sox to win the big series, and all of the National League pilots pick the Giants. A sympathetic leaning sometimes overcomes good judgment.

The body of the famous pacing stallion, The Eel, 2:02 1-4, that died at Columbus, was embalmed, and will be shipped to his home, Travistock, Ont. This was done by a telegraphed order from his owner, Frank Entricken, and the body of the horse will be buried there under a suitable monument.

Waivers have been asked on Mordecai Brown by President Murphy of the Chicago Nationals. The pitcher injured his knee in winning a ten inning game last July, and since that mishap has been of no use to the club. Manager Chance confirmed the news that Brown is to leave the team. Last winter he signed a three years' contract.

A meeting of the new Pro Hockey League, which includes Syracuse, Hamilton, Toronto, Detroit and Cleveland, will be held in Buffalo Next Saturday night. M. M. Robinson, Secretary of the Canadian Baseball League, will represent Hamilton, along with P. M. Jones.

"Ape" at Work.

Anybody observing Pellegrini's movements in the lobby of the House of Commons could tell to a certainty who would presently turn up in the pages of "Vanity Fair," skilfully caricatured by "Ape," writes Sir Henry Lucy in The Cornhill Magazine. Having once selected his subject, Pellegrini treated him precisely as if he were a lay figure. He made no notes, thumb-nail or otherwise.

His man being in the lobby engaged in conversation with another member, he slowly walked round him, scanning his features, his dress, his pose, the size of his feet, and the hang of his arms. He made no idle pretence about the matter. He was there to do his business, and he did it with a thoroughness that made all his sketches a success.

It was pretty to watch him, sometimes prettier to observe the manoeuvres of "the subject."

If any member whom Pellegrini had taken in hand for the week's sketch failed to discover the fact himself, other members were ready enough to bring him the news. All the while he was lightly laughing and talking with a friend, he was furtively watching the plump little Italian slowly circling round him, making mental notes of his inches. The desperate effort to appear unconscious of what was going on gave an added touch to the familiar comedy.

A Hymeneal Expert.

Sir Samuel T. Evans is one of the greatest experts in Great Britain on matrimonial problems. As President of the Divorce Court he passes his days listening to tales of woe, and no judge is harder worked. But he is never depressed, and refuses to answer the question as to matrimony being a failure in the affirmative.

This keen-witted judge started his legal career as a solicitor. Realizing that the Bar offered more scope, he changed over, and was so successful that he took silk in the remarkably short space of nine years. He was the last Q. C. to be appointed. For over twenty years he represented Glamorganshire in Parliament, and was Solicitor-General from 1908-10, when he took his place on the Bench.

By his hat shall you know Sir Samuel Evans. No matter how fashions may change in toppers he clings to a weird type of headgear which is flat in the brim and tall in the crown, something like those hats you see on women dressed in Welsh costume.

Belgium.

Belgium is one of the smallest countries in regard to area, containing only 11,373 square miles, but it stands today the fifth of all nations of the world in regard to commerce and industries and is the most densely settled in Europe, containing 7,817,561 inhabitants. It is is also one of the richest countries per capita and second to none in enterprise.

Crowded India.

The population of India is 315,000,000, though its area is not greater than that of nine or ten of our western states.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Miss Mary Woods of the Brooklyn navy yard cuts the patterns for all the flags made there. She has been making flags for the government for more than thirty years.

Miss Cornelia Bentley Sage, appointed director pro tem. of the famous Albright art gallery in Buffalo on the death of the director of the museum, has been remarkably successful, and her position is now permanent.

Senora de Cueva, wife of the first secretary of the Mexican embassy at Washington, sings old Spanish and Mexican ballads with much feeling. She not only has a voice of unusual range, but is a composer of note.

Miss Julia C. Lathrop of Chicago, an associate of Jane Addams in the work at Hull House, a member of the Illinois board of charity and a graduate and trustee of Vassar college, has been appointed by President Taft as chief of the new children's bureau in the department of commerce and labor.

Mrs. Edgar F. Luckenbach, one of the seventeen graduates at the recent exercises of the Woman's Law college of New York university, is the wife of a millionaire steamship man. She has gained quite a reputation as a yachtswoman and has won several trophies by her prowess at the wheel of a racing yacht.

Chirography.

"Ethelinda writes a very peculiar hand," said Maude.

"Yes," replied Maymie. "It's just a lot of straight lines and angles. When you read it you have to guess at the spelling, the same as she does."—Washington Star.

An Explanation.

"Your nephew is a college graduate, isn't he?"

"Yes," confessed honest Farmer Hornbeak, "but in justice to the college I'll own up that he had no sense beforehand."—Woman's Home Companion.

A Wonderful Discovery

An eminent scientist, the other day gave his opinion that the most wonderful discovery of recent years was the discovery of Zam-Buk. Just think! As soon as a single thin layer of Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or a sore, such injury is assured against blood poison! Not one species of microbe has been found that Zam-Buk does not kill!

Then again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a sore, or a cut, or to skin disease, it stops the smarting. That is why children are such friends of Zam-Buk. They care nothing for the science of the thing. All they know is that Zam-Buk stops their pain. Mothers should never forget this.

Again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a wound, or to a diseased part, the cells beneath the skin's surface are so stimulated that new healthy tissue is quickly formed. This forming a fresh healthy tissue from below is Zam-Buk's secret of healing. The tissue thus formed is worked up to the surface and literally casts off the diseased tissue above it. This is why Zam-Buk cures are permanent.

Only the other day, Mr. Marsh of 101 Delorimier Ave., Montreal, called upon the Zam-Buk Co., and told them that for over twenty-five years he had been a martyr to eczema. His hands were at one time so covered with sores that he had to sleep in gloves. Four years ago Zam-Buk was introduced to him, and in a few months it cured him. To-day—over three years after his cure of a disease he had for twenty-five years—he is still cured, and has had no trace of any return of the eczema!

All druggists sell Zam-Buk at 50c. a box, or we will send free trial box if you send this advertisement and a 1c stamp (to pay return postage). Address Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

The bore would always get a good send-off, if he would only go.

THE GOLDEN LION

A Big Stir Upstairs

There's doings going on in the Housefurnishing Department on the fourth floor at Fair's, and no mistake. There's more than one reason for it—

First, the quality if anything, surpasses even the high standard always maintained at Fair's.

Second, the selection is large, the designs unusually catchy and shades especially good.

Third, the chief attraction after all is the smallness of the prices.

— THIS APPLIES TO —

Carpets, in Brussels, Tapestry, Wilton, Axminsters, etc.; Rugs of the same materials as well as of Wool and Union; Linoleums, Oilcloths, Curtains, Curtain Materials, Shades Rollers, Brass Fittings, Furniture Upholstering Goods, etc., etc.,

There's marvels of quality and wonders in prices, and the way they are being grabbed up is a caution, but it proves our statement that the attractions on the third and fourth floor are decidedly worth investigating is correct. If you have a need of this character in the home, just pay a visit to our Mr. Jeffries and his staff in the housefurnishing department and see what he can do for you — There's no obligation to buy on account of this visit.

MAGNIFICENT SPECTACULAR DRAMA AT GRAND FOR TWO NIGHTS AND MATINEE

"The Light Eternal," a big spectacular religious drama, is announced for presentation at the Grand Theatre Friday and Saturday, Oct. 4th and 5th. This attraction is unquestionably the most elaborately staged offering yet attempted outside the highest priced theatres of the largest cities. The scenic equipment is massive and the costuming gorgeous—both bearing the stamp of the astute actor-manager, Henry Miller as producer. The cast is large and is made up of carefully selected artists—men and women who know how to read the classi cdrama and who fit well into the heroic roles of the early Christian period.

SMALL ATTENDANCE AT THE KEENE EXHIBITION

Bourbon Brook and Billy Direct Won the Turf Events—One Mile Foot Race Was Captured by Albert Smoke of Chemong

The big day of the Keene Fair was held yesterday, but the attendance was rather discouraging, the crowd not being as large as might be expected.

There were two horse races, with the four Elmhirst horses providing the competition, two horses entering in each race.

In the open trot, Bourbon Brook and Hazel Brook, came together, the former taking the big end of the purse, while in the green race, Billy Direct came home for first honors. The judges were Messrs. H. Winch and R. J. Munro.

In a one mile foot race, Smoke, the Indian runner, beat a field of three, Weir and Fletcher took second and third respectively.

On Friday, October 11th

CENTENARY OF SIR ISAAC BROCK

To commemorate the centenary of Sir Isaac Brock, who fell at the battle of Queenstown Heights, on October 13th, 1812, a Provincial wide celebration has been decided upon and the occasion will be observed in the schools of the city.

Inspector Mowat has the matter in hand, so far as the Public Schools are concerned, and a definite program will be announced shortly.

The date of the anniversary falls, this year, on Sunday, but the schools will observe the day on Friday, October 11th.

On Saturday, October 12th, it is planned to decorate the Brock monument at Queenstown Heights, while a royal salute will be fired from all saluting points in Canada. On Sunday a memorial service will be held in every church in Canada.

FREE FOR ALL AT MILLBROOK

Well Known Horses Likely to Make Great Race

The Indications are that with a continuance of the fine weather a large number of Peterborough people will go to Millbrook to-morrow to attend the fair. Dr. Johnston is sending Harry Direct and Queen's Baron to start in the free for all. This event promises to be productive of some keen competition, as besides the local horses, Jerry Dillard and Bourbon Brook will go to the wire, and Queen's Baron, despite his eighteen years, may take some of the cash.

NOT INJURED BUT JUST LAZY

Look Out For "Poor Unfortunate" With Bandaged Hand

A few days ago an individual struck town and put up at one of the hotels, says the Warder. He was comfortably dressed, his appearance by no means exhibiting or denoting that he was a subject to which charity should be extended, but his actions later on plainly told that he felt inclined to view matters from this standpoint and therefore went out in the cold world to receive donations, large or small. He was lazy, to the fullest extent, and as he had no bodily ills through which he could make an appeal to the unsophisticated and inexperienced in worldly ways, so he bound up one hand, which was supposed to have decayed from a malignant disease and made a tour of the south ward.

He was set upon by many as the game was old and was poorly remunerated, receiving rebuke instead of recompense.

Next he came down street, threw off the cloth from his hand, ran across a drunk and relieved him of at least $15. He paid his hotel bill and took the train to Peterborough, where he may possibly be operating.

Upon their arrival they will be taken in special street cars to Knox church, where they will conduct a special service.

Arrangements are being made by the men of the different churches in Peterborough to give them a royal welcome. Invitations are being extended also to all the men of Peterborough to turn out and hear what the visitors from Toronto have to say.

After the meeting the Toronto delegates will return to Toronto by special train. Among the speakers they will bring with them are: Mr. E. A. ANNUAL INSPECTION OF SIGNALING CORPS

The annual inspection of the 57th Regiment Signaling Corps took place last night under Lieutenant Stroud District Signaling officer, from Kingston.

The signaling corps assembled in the armories at 8 o'clock and Lieut. Stroud put them through a thorough drill of signaling with the exception of heliograping, which cannot be done at night, and included the semaphore and lantern signalling, the latter being done with the Morse code. The drill lasted till 11 o'clock and the men made a very creditable showing.

Lieut. Stroud left this morning for Belleville, where he will inspect the signaling corps of the 34th Battery, which is having its annual traninig there. This battery has only been organized a short time and is the latest addition to the Canadian Field Artillery.

The classes for those who wish to qualify as N.C.O.'s will commence at eight o'clock to-night in the armories under Sergt. Instructor McKay.

TEACHER DID NOT GET $150 CERTIFICATE HAD EXPIRED

Toronto, Oct. 3—Because the teacher's certificate, held by Miss Ethel T. Martin of Windsor, had expired, the Divisional Court yesterday declined to uphold her contention that she was entitled to receive $150 salary from the trustees of school section number 7, Sandwich West. Miss Martin was engaged to teach for the year 1911, at a salary of $450, but in September she was discharged, and the young lady brought action to recover the amount of salary due her until the end of the year. She had been paid $300 for her work up to the date of her discharge. The reason given for her discharge was that the inspector found that Miss Martin was not qualified, her certificate having expired. This was held by the court to be satisfactory reason for the defendants' action.

St John's Church

A meeting was held in St. John's Church, last night, in connection with the coming Evangelistic services, with a large attendance of members of the congregation. The Credit Way } Which?

WHEN you ask for credit you may be entitled to it and get it—but you pay for it.

You cannot get away from that fact. The merchant who does a credit business gives a cash discount, but he must first add on his credit cost.

FIFTEEN OFFICERS AND MEN DROWNED

Submarine Boat Was Cut in Two by the Liner Amerika, and the Entire Crew Perished With Exception of One Man

Special To The Review

Dover, England, Oct. 4.—The British submarine "B2" was run down and cut in two and sunk with the crew of fourteen, by the Hamburg American liner Amerika, near here to-day. Lieut. Richard I. Pulleyne, second in command, is the only one of the fifteen on board who was rescued. He was picked up floating in the sea too exhausted to say more than "The submarine is cut in two; I went down more than a mile."

The accident occurred while the third patrol flotilla submarines, consisting of six vessels, was manoeuvring off South Foreland, Kent Coast. Nothing has been heard from the Amerika up to the present.

Lieut Percy B. O'Brien, in command of "B2" was also drowned, making the fatalities fifteen in all.

MAY RESULT IN A NATIONAL STRIKE

Lawrence, Mass., Oct. 4—Announcement of the beginning of a campaign to bring about a possible general strike of members of the Industrial Workers of the World in this country and abroad was made here yesterday. The announcement was contained in a statement signed by Wm. D. Haywood as chairman of a joint meeting of the Ettor and Giovannitti defence committee, the central committee of the local union and of the general organizers of the Industrial Workers of the World now in this city. The statement follows:

"It was agreed to extend the agitation for a general strike to be made nation-wide and international if possible to take place in the event of the prisoners not being acquitted, or in the further event of the Government attempting unduly to prolong the trial. General agitation will be begun everywhere looking for this end. A proclamation will be issued containing a pronunciamento of the principles of the I. W. W. adopting the general strike as the organization's weapon against government by injunction and against the imprisonment of innocent men. Lawrence will be the centre of the movement and it will be upon a signal from Lawrence that such a strike will be declared if necessary."

SIR WILDRID AT CHATHAM

Talked Reciprocity When Near American Border

Chatham, Oct. 4.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier was given a generous reception in Chatham yesterday. Liberals and Conservatives joined heartily together and received him in a friendly and cordial manner. The armory was packed to its capacity with fully three thousand people.

During the afternoon Sir Wilfrid and his colleagues visited the various schools of the city and held a public reception in the Rankin House. He was presented with an address by Mayor Anderson and an automibile parade was held in his honor, escorting him over the city.

At night the armory would not hold the big crowd and an overflow meeting was held in the skating rink.

In speaking of the navy question he charged that Mr. Borden had switched in his ideas regarding the navy, and that the switching was due to the pressure brought to bear upon him by the Nationalists. He attacked Monk, Bourassa, Nantel and Pelletier in a vigorous fashion.

Sir Wilfrid laid greatest stress upon the action of Hon. George E. Foster in seeking lower rates on American railways for the transport of Canadian grain from north to south. He claimed that this action is not policy but merely expediency to save the Conservatives in the Macdonald bye-election.

To-day, as in January last, said Sir Wilfrid, the Conservative press was announcing that the Borden Government had once more gone hat in hand to the United States asking the Interstate Commission for special rates on Canadian wheat by southbound routes to the neighboring republic. Twice since the Borden Government took office Hon. Mr. Foster had thus gone to Washington, thereby admitting the problem and seeking temporary solution of it.

"But this is not policy, it is expediency," declared Sir Wilfrid, amid renewed applause. "I have said before, and I say again, that while the remedy we submitted was rejected, the problem remains and must be solved."

He noted with the heartiest approval that President Gourlay had advocated that the Manufacturers Association aim to develop wider markets for made-in-Canada products.

"Right," said he. "We want the larger market for what is made in Canada, and we also want it for what is grown in Canada."

WAS SIGNING OF COVENANT IN ULSTER ACT OF TREASON?

This Question to be Tested in the Courts Under an Old Statue—Two Magistrates Are to be Tried—Punishment Varies From Two to Seven Years

Belfast, Oct. 4.—The legality of the signing of the anti-Home Rule Ulster covenant last Saturday will be tested in the courts. According to the Mid-Ulster Mail, published at Cookston, summonses are impending against two magistrates who signed the document, Messrs Graham and Anderson. The summonses are to be issued under an Act of George III, which makes it a felony to administer or take an oath to belong to a seditious society or to disturb the peace. The punishment prescribed varies from two years' imprisonment to seven years' penal servitude. The summonses have not yet been issued.

Magistrate Graham says he will regard it as an honor to be chosen for prosecution.

The Balkan situation is again causing considerable apprehension among European diplomats. The present crisis had its inception in the arrest of Austrian soldiers on the Servian frontier and the firing by Turks on a Greek steamer at Samos.

NO GOVERNMENT SANCTION IS NEEDED FOR C.P.R. STOCK ISSUE

That is the Contention of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, and Ministers and Legal Experts at Ottawa Hold That He is Right---A Statute of 1892, Apparently Forgotten, Gives the Company the Required Authority.

Ottawa, Oct. 4.—The chief topic in financial, official and political circles here yesterday was the claim made by the C. P. R. of power to issue additional stock without an order-in-council or sanction from the present Government. The clause, which is of a "joker" variety, under which it claims this right is found in a statute passed in 1892 and which apparently had been forgotten or overlooked. The best legal and Ministerial opinion here is that while the proposed issue as outlined by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy is legal, the company will in the case of a demand for further issues, be compelled by law to come to the Government for its sanction.

The legislation under which the stock is being issued is contained in chapter 35 of the acts of 1892 as follows: "The company being first authorized so to do by a vote of at least two-thirds of its shareholders, present or represented at a special meeting, may at any time issue ordinary shares of capital stock in lieu of consolidated debenture stock, and whenever it shall do so then the right to issue consolidated debenture stock shall cease."

Already the question is being asked why such a clause cannot be rescinded and that a movement will be made to that end this coming session there can be no doubt.

The facts relating to the issue of the new stock as understood here are as follows: In August last application was made to the Government by the Canadian Pacific Railway for authority to issue an additional $60,000,000 of stock. The application was never dealt with, or considered by the Government, and, of course, no arrangement or agreement governing terms or price or condition of issue was reached. So that the present situation is that the C.P.R. has gone, or is going ahead to issue the stock without further consulting the Government or awaiting the sanction or otherwise of its stock.

There were two ways in which the Canadian Pacific could obtain the additional money. It could put out 4 per cent. debenture stock, which in these days of cheap bonds, could be sold at or nearly at par. This would have given it cash nearly to the amount of the increase in its obligations, and would have been good financing. The directors recommended, instead, that use should be made of the power conferred on the company by Parliament to issue ordinary shares and that they should be offered to the stockholders at a premium of $75 a share. By this means the company's treasury will receive $105,000,000 for the $60,000,000 which will be added to its capitalization.

Therefore the application which has been made to the Government has not been passed upon favorably or unfavorably.

PAPER IS ANGRY WITHOUT CAUSE

Winnipeg, Oct. 4.—The Winnipeg Tribune (Ind. Liberal) yesterday said editorially:

"In the face of the protest of the Canadian nation as represented through the newspapers the Borden Government has apparently given its consent to one of the greatest 'melon cuttings' in the history of the world.

"Let the electors of Macdonald ask Mr. Rogers what stand be takes on this 'melon cutting.'

"Ask him if he thinks it right to remain silent while his colleagues in the Cabinet consent to the distribution of some $60,000,000 to C.P.R shareholders by this grand gift scheme in connection with the hidden assets.

"Is he a representative or a misrepresentative?

"He should be closely questioned on the platform."

The Tribune in a front page article on the C.P.R. "melon cutting" yesterday afternoon also said:

"There seems to be scarcely a shadow of doubt that the Borden Government has, in effect, if not by official action, given its consent to the $60,000,000 C.P.R. issue. The C.P.R. increased its stock in 1902, 1904, 1906, 1908, 1909 and 1910, and in each case it made formal application to the Dominion Government. This received authorization by an order-in-council. Prior to 1903 the C.P.R. could not issue capital stock without securing the consent of Parliament by a bill, but in that year the Government took power by statute to grant authorization by order-in-council. It is very unlikely that the company has now undertaken to reverse the procedure of the past twenty years on the strength of some legal technicality."

For the Public Good.

Washington, D.C., Oct. 4.—Addressing the special committee yesterday J. P. Morgan asserted that no contribution had ever been given by his firm or himself with the idea of securing any favors thereby. He was especially interested in the 1904 campaign, he said, solely for the welfare of the country and the people at large. That was the only interest, he said, that had guided him in making contributions to political parties.

For associate judges of the court of appeals, John W. Hogan of Onondaga, and W. H. Cuddleback of Erie.

CHARRED REMAINS IN ONE COFFIN

Sad Funeral of the Gravel Children, Who Were Burned to Death

St. Bernard, Que., Oct. 4.—No blame was imputed to anybody at the coroner's inquest held yesterday on the bodies of the ten children of Alexandre Gravel, who perished when their house was destroyed by fire.

Gravel, a blacksmith, testified that he twice entered his house and attempted in vain to save his children. He had his face badly burned.

By a first marriage Gravel had three children, who are still living. He had eleven children by his second wife, one of them dying recently. Mrs. Gravel is critically ill.

The remains of the ten victims have been placed in a small coffin at the residence of their grandfather.

You can always get something for nothing—in the form of advice.

BROCKVILLE MAN HAD CLOSE CALL

James Cook Nearly killed by Train at Toronto

Special To The Review.

Toronto, Oct., 4.—Failing to notice the approach of a C.P.R. locomotive as he was crossing the tracks at Toronto Junction this morning, James Cook, of Brockville, was run down and had a narrow escape from death. His left hand was so badly crushed that one finger had to be amputated. He is now at the Western Hospital suffering chiefly from shock.

It's queer how possession will decrease the value of most things.

RAINBOW SAILORS OUT OF WORK

Montreal, Oct. 4.—A number of sailors from the Canadian cruiser Rainbow, who have received their discharges, are now in the city, the more fortunate being on their way home to England, but most of them looking for work.

The statement of the men is that when they received their discharges they were told that on showing their papers they would be given the preference in jobs as policemen, firemen and other branches of municipal work, but that their discharges are not recognized by municipal authorities.

Charles Walker Caught in a Revolving Shaft This Morning Was Torn to Shreds—His Ankle Hurled Through Window Onto the Road

Special to the Review.

Guelph Oct. 4.—His foot striking a revolving belt while he was working with another belt taken off the drill which was operating in the Raymond Manufacturing Co. factory this morning Charles Walker was drawn up the shaft and whirled around about ten times his head hitting the ceiling each time. He was literally ground to pieces. The right leg was cut off at the thigh and his ankle was hurled through the window onto the road and pieces of his body were strewen all around the floor of the shop.

SIX MONTHS FOR WALTER DAVIS

Toronto, Oct. 4.—Six months in the Central Prison was the sentence meted out to Walter Davis by Magistrate Denison yesterday morning. The charge was bringing stolen money into Canada. Alice Davis, wife of the accused, was discharged.

On Aug. 9 the couple were arrested in the Palmer House by Detectives Cronin and Mitchell after bills, known to have been part of a theft of $150,000 from the New Westminster branch of the Bank of Montreal, had been traced back to them. The robbery occurred in September, 1911.

When arrested they had in their possession $9,299 in bills, over $2,000 of it corresponding with the numbers furnished by the bank of the stolen money.

T. C. Robinette, K.C., entered a plea of guilty for Davis, but asked mercy for the woman, saying that she acted under her husband's dictation.

Counsel stated that Davis had found the money in a lumber pile in Port Huron. How it got there he would not say.

The money found on Davis when arrested has been turned over to the bank.

Victoria, B.C., Oct. 4.—Speaking at a Conservative gathering Wednesday night, Hon. Martin Burrell said he was unable to give any details of the proposed naval policy, but could say that when it was formulated Mr. Borden would submit it to the people for endorsement before going any further.

Big Battle In Mexico.

Laredo, Texas, Oct. 4.—Mexican rebels said to have been commanded by Gen. Pascual Orozco, jr., are reported to have been defeated in one of the most serious battle of the rebellion near Musequiz. The federals brought ninety dead and wounded to Monterey Wednesday night.

The federals, commanded by Gen. Blanquet, numbered 6,000. Orozco had four thousand soldiers.

Toronto Socialist Will Run.

Berlin, Oct. 4.—The Liberal executive met yesterday afternoon and decided to call a convention in the town hall at Waterloo, Oct. 9, for the purpose of nominating a candidate to contest the bye-election in North Waterloo on Oct. 28.

At a convention of Socialists held at Bricklayers' Hall here last night, Matthew Weyman of Toronto, was the unanimous choice.

Coal Carrier Was Drifting.

Sarnia, Oct. 4.—The steel freighter Polynesia arrived here in tow of the steamer Winona, of the Inland Lines, after a voyage of several hundred miles. The Polynesia had lost her wheel off Thunder Bay Island and was drifting hopelessly around in much danger of being wrecked when the Winona sighted her distress signals. The Polynesia had 6,000 tons of soft coal.

Montreal, Oct. 4.—A French newspaper alleges that the Catholic School Commission purchased property at Longue Pointe at an absurdly high price, and that one member of the board received $8,000 as a commission for having it put through. An enquiry will be held.

TURKEY AND ITALY SIGN AT LAST A TREATY OF PEACE

The Former However Has Another War on its Hands as the Balkan States Have Opened Hostilities—First Battle of New War

Special to the Review.

Constantinople, Oct. 4.—That the Turkish Cabinet voted yesterday to accept Italy's latest proposals for peace was announced to-day.

London, Oct. 4.—Hostilities between the Balkan states and Turkey have already commenced, according to reports from many quarters last night. A despatch to the Russian Government says that the Bulgarians are crossing the frontier.

Another despatch from Constantinople says that an engagement has occurred near Harmanli, a Bulgarian town north of Adrianople. The casualty list is placed at 406 killed.

Military action has thus outstripped slower footed diplomacy, for no ultimatum has yet been presented to Turkey, and in Constantinople none is expected until Monday. The Porte, however, has sent an official notification to the powers, which reads:

"In view of the manifestly aggressive attitude of the Balkan state, Turkey reserves to itself full liberty of action, convinced that the civilized world will not fail to do justice to its moderate attitude. But this cannot exclude care for safeguarding its dignity and security, as well as its rights."

This, it would seem, is the Porte's way of preparing the world for the failure of the powers to stave off hostilties. No official confirmation of the rupture of peace is to be had, but skirmishes are reported to have occurred in the neighborhood of Djumbala, called also Jambili, Bulgarian territory, in the Albanian vilayet of Scutari, along the Montenegrin frontier, and near Baschkvranya on the Servian border.

Turkey has appointed the War Minister, Nasim Pasha, to supreme command. Roumania has not yet mobilized, and, it is stated, will not take action for a few days.

Negotiations by the great powers in favor of peace are being carried on, the most important conferences at present being held at Paris. It is reported that Austria will receive Europe's mandate to take the needful steps to localise the war.

All despatches from the near east are subjected to heavy delay and censorship.

Leave America To Join Army.

New York, Oct. 4.—The Greek consul announced yesterday that he had received a cablegram from his Government instructing him to notify all the Greek reservists in the United States to return to their colors. This includes all members of the reserve classes if the Greek army from 1900 to 1910.

Similar notices were received by leaders of the Bulgarians, Serbs and Montenegrins. None of these nations have an official representative here. It is estimated that there are 100,000 men of the four nationalities in this country who are capable of bearing arms.

The Greek quarter in New York seethed yesterday with the talk of war. Long lines of men eager to return home, formed at the steamship offices. One hundred and thirty Greeks and Bulgarians sailed on the Mauretania yesterday. Ninety more, unable to get quarters, are waiting for the next boat while steamship agencies declare that they have practically sold out all tickets for weeks ahead. No men from the Balkans, they say, are coming to America now, and none have come for more than a month.

GOOD FAIR HELD AT GEORGETOWN

Georgetown, Oct. 4.—The Esquesing Agricultural Association yesterday at Georgtown held its sixty-sixth annual exhibition, 2,500 people being on the grounds. The exhibits in the various classes were good, there being 1,500 entries. The exhibits in roots, apples, butter, cattle, poultry and horses were above the average.

The association has a balance in the bank of $1,500 and next year the directors will have several new buildings erected on the grounds.

Wesleyans' New Hall.

The festivities connected with the inauguration will be spread over a fortnight.

The dome of the magnificent hall towers 200 feet above the street, and is the third largest in the city.

A WAIL FROM FLORIDA

Patriotic citizens of the United States are urging Congress to take some steps to prevent the tide of emigration, which is still flowing steadily from the western states to the prairie provinces of Canada. The Pacific coast is threatened with a serious loss, especially of agriculturalists if the exodus continues. In some parts of the country a quiet boycott has been instituted against American newspapers that advertise the resources of this country.

Once in a while some credulous Canadian falls a victim to the alluding advertisements that are being circulated in this country, concerning Florida as a farming state and desirable place for residence. One of these victims is stranded down there now with no hope of escape, judging by the following communication which he sends from Tampa, to the Toronto Saturday Night.

The enclosed tells its story (the enclosed was a tale of suicide from a Florida paper.) Within the last forty days two men blew their brains out, another takes poison and another dives into a locomotive, all northern men. Any man here knows the cause of these sad occurrences. Any man with a little red blood should not stay in Florida straight twelve months. If anyone would remain in Florida one year before buying land his home would not be Florida.

Any man who endorses the land Company's land has either been paid or states an untruth. Prison should be their abode. "Editor's note" published in Saturday Night some time ago is true. Let him stay twelve straight months and he could say more. It is simply a land of disappointments, misery and all creeping things created. A 'manner born' is accustomed to these conditions, but to one who has lived differently, it is misery, and death to some. Florida is in the land business itself, the 'cracker' simply laughs at the northerner buying land and if justice was carried out every man interested in selling and advertising this land around Tampa should be in prison. The man who reaches Tampa with little money, if he don't get out immediately is in for life. Beyond anything he has no knowledge of the Cuban, the negro and "Mannerborn's" was of living, which is entirely diffefrent from any man's in the north. The rich man will find Florida some times pleasant, the three winter months, any others he will find it Hades.

I give you my name, but if you divulge it my life would be in danger. I am too poor to get out of this most miserable country.

Yours, truly,

P. S.—There are not any farmers around Tampa and never will be.

History tells us that after Dante wrote the "Inferno" the children of Florence were won't to regard him with something like awe as he walked through the streets, and remarked in frightened whispers, "there goes the man who has been in Hades."

If the writer of the above communication ever manages to effect his escape, the same observation may be appropriate to his case.

"STRAIGHT TATK" FROM MR. GRAHAM

"Hon. Mr. Graham gave them straight talk." is a display heading in last night's Examiner over a report of the ex-minister's speech in the opera house Tuesday night, a speech which he repeated later in the Brock street rink. We can all see from looking up the files of the Examiner, and surely that paper will not be disposed to go back on its own evidence, just how straight the honorable gentleman did talk on the marriage question.

Mr. Graham was not satisfied to confine himself to the federal field in this oration. He devoted considerable time to a criticism of the attitude of the Ontario Government when the Lancaster marriage bill was before the Supreme Court. According to the report of his remarks in the Examiner this is what he said on this point:

> "In connection with the whole matter the attitude of the Dominion Conservative Government and the Ontario Conservative Government was typical of the deceitful conduct marking the actions of both cases of this kind. When the matter was argued in the Supreme Court, instead of the Whitney Government championing the demands of those who insisted on a uniform marriage law, Ontario was represented not by Sir James Whitney, not by Attorney-General Foy, not by the deputy attorney, but by the assistant deputy, who, under instruction from the Ontario Government, read a short statement of ten lines to the court, saying in effect that the Ontario Government had no special views one way or the other, and that Ontario would be satisfied with the decision no matter which way it went."

If the Examiner will refer to its files of May 31, last, it will find that what Mr. Edward Boyly, who represented Ontario at the marriage hearing really did say was:

> "While of opinion that it is difficult to give an unqualified yes or no to any one of the questions submitted in this case, and that the law on the subject is difficult to determine, the Province of Ontario favor a uniform general marriage law for the Dominion if so framed that the legislative authority of the provinces in relation to the solemnization of marriage is not thereby violated, and the Province of Ontario adopts so much of the argument of counsel for the Dominion as is consistent with the view above expressed and no more.
> "The Province of Ontario considers that an act of Parliament which renders valid throughout the Dominion marriages performed in a province by persons legally authorized by such province would result in consolidating and perfecting provincial authority throughout Canada, and on this view the passing of such an act by the Dominion Parliament would enlarge rather than encroach upon provincial jurisdiction."

Does this statement say in effect as Mr. Graham claims that the Ontario Government had no special views one way or the other and that Ontario would be satisfied with the decision no matter which way it went? Did Mr. Graham talk straight? Was he fair? Did he speak from lack of information or did he wilfully misrepresent the position of his opponents on other questions beside that of the marriage law case?

EDITORIAL NOTES

There was a terrible wind storm in Paris the other day. There was one in Peterboro Tuesday night, but no one loaded down the cables with an account of it, probably to Hon. Mackenzie King's intense annoyance.

The Globe says that Sir Wilfrid spent a quiet day in Toronto. The Liberal leader evidently knows when he is in a place where silence is the best policy.

The Globe sneers at the Review's knowledge of wheat and the marketing of that product. All we can say is that if any farmers of Canada followed the advice of the horny handed son of toil who writes on the best methods of agriculture for the Globe, in wheat or stock raising or along any other line, such farmers would be saved from financial ruin only by their friends immuring them in a convenient asylum, before all was gone. The Globe is not satisfied even when the Review quotes its own market reports on the price of wheat.

The Toronto Star says that the Canadian Manufacturers Association would have the Dominion Government prohibit the exportation of pulp wood. A few days ago the association officers asserted that they had no intention of asking parliament to do anything of the kind.

"Straight talk" from the Hon. George P. Graham. Well now, that's altogether too much to look for after the sample he gave the other night on Ontario's attitude on the marriage question.

The assessors' returns in the different cities and towns of the country show substantial growth, not only in wealth but in population, a fact that seemed to escape the attention of the "straight talk" staticians at the Liberal meeting the other night. They seemed anxious only to show that the change of government meant blue ruin to the country.

"What has Borden done in one year?" was a favorite expression with the Liberal orators. What do they expect in twelve months, seeing that Hon. Sidney Fisher admitted with refreshing frankness that even the mighty Laurier was unable to accomplish much in four years.

The Englishman is Ontario.

"Is the labor problem of western Ontario to be settled by the Englishman?" says a Glencoe, Ont., man. "The present indications point in that direction. A few years ago you could find very few English immigrants in West Middlesex, and only a family or two in Glencoe. To-day you meet fine, intelligent men from the better classes of old England almost everywhere. Among the newer arrivals are mechanics and artisans—men who are proving themselves good citizens."

This opinion represents the experience of many towns and cities in western Ontario, says The London Free Press. There is an immigration into these parts of men from the old land going on to-day that is even more marked than was the immigration which resulted in the settlement of Ontario in large part by this same class of immigrant now approaching a century ago.

Swayed by a Bell's Tones.

The Church of St. Nicaise, in the city of Rheims, is surrounded with pillars. When a certain bell in the tower is rung the top of one pillar always sways to the extent of seven inches on each side, although the base is immovable, and the stones are so firmly cemented as to seem like a solid piece of masonry. Notwithstanding that each of the four bells is about the same distance from the trembling pillar none of the others has the slightest effect on it.

The Lerot and the Snake.

Every one has heard of the remarkable combats of the Indian mongoose with venomous snakes, in which little rikki-tikki-tavi comes off victor. The fact that the mongoose invariably survives has led to the suggestion that it is immune to snake poison. Other animals said to be immune are the pig and the hedgehog. The experiments of British naturalists show that an animal of the dormouse family must be added to the list of the immune. This animal is known as the lerot and is said to fight fiercely with vipers. Large doses of viper's poison were injected into one lerot, from which injection no ill effects followed. On one occasion a lerot was bitten badly in the eye by a viper, and no signs of poisoning occurred. There can, it is thought, be no doubt that the lerot is immune to snake poison.

Self Convicted.

"Say, pa," queried small Bobby, "what is gossiping, anyway?"

"Gossiping, my son," replied the old man, "if we get right down to the plain, unvarnished facts, is lying. But why do you ask?"

"Because," answered the young investigator, "ma says you do a lot of gossiping every time your business keeps you late at the office."—Exchange.

HAPPY THOUGHT

Do You Want Real Stove Satisfaction?

Do you want a stove that will bake, broil, fry and do every cooking operation equally well?

Do you want a stove that will give you the last unit of heat value from every ounce of fuel—right where you want it, at the lid openings or in the oven—a stove that will pay you dollars every month by the fuel saving it effects.

If you do, the HAPPY THOUGHT is the stove you will eventually choose.

Do not be deceived by the so-called "special features" of other stoves. Every detail of HAPPY THOUGHT construction represents that last word in stove making. If anything better could be devised, it would be already incorporated in the HAPPY THOUGHT.

The HAPPY THOUGHT has no special "selling" points. Its record of success for twenty-five years proves its all-round value as the most serviceable stove that you can buy.

A Romance of The South Seas

JACK LONDON

—yes, you have us there," Tudor admitted. "But you wouldn't have had us if you hadn't broken your training rules."

"How do you mean?"

"By talking about it."

Joan clapped her hands in approval. Tudor lighted a fresh cigarette, while Sheldon sat on, imperturbably silent.

Joan was looking intently across the compound and out to sea. They followed her gaze and saw a green light and the loom of a vessel's sails.

"I wonder if it's the Martha come back," Tudor hazarded.

"No, the sidelight is too low," Joan answered. "Besides, they've got the sweeps out. Don't you hear them? They wouldn't be sweeping a big vessel like the Martha."

"Besides, the Martha has a gasoline engine—twenty-five horsepower," Tudor added.

"Just the sort of a craft for us," Joan said wistfully to Sheldon. "I really must see if I can't get a schooner with an engine. I might get a second hand engine put in. If you were not so medieval I could be skipper and save more than the engineer's wages."

He did not reply to her thrust and she glanced at him. He was looking out over the water, and in the lantern light she noted the lines of his face—strong, stern, dogged, the mouth almost chaste, but firmer and thinner lipped than Tudor's. For the first time she realized the quality of his strength, the calm and quiet of it, its simple integrity and reposeful determination. She glanced quickly at Tudor on the other side of her. It was a handsomer face, one that was more immediately pleasing. But she did not like the mouth. It was made for kissing and she abhorred kisses. For the moment she knew a fleeting doubt of the man. Perhaps Sheldon was right in his judgment of the other. She did not know, and it concerned her little; for boats and the sea and the things and happenings of the sea were of far more vital interest to her than men, and the next moment she was staring through the warm tropic darkness at the loom of the sails and the steady green of the moving sidelight and listening eagerly to the click of the sweeps in the rowlocks.

Nor did she take interest in the two men beside her till both lights, red and green, came into view as the anchor checked the onward way.

"It's the Minerva," Joan said decidedly.

"How do you know?" Sheldon asked, skeptical of her certitude.

"It's a ketch to begin with. And, besides, I could tell anywhere the rattle of her main peak blocks—they're too large for the halyard."

A dark figure crossed the compound diagonally from the beach gate, where whoever it was had been watching the vessel.

"Is that you, Utami?" Joan called.

"No, Missie; me Matapuu," was the answer.

"What vessel is it?"

"Me t'ink Minerva."

Joan looked triumphantly at Sheldon, who bowed.

"If Matapuu says so it must be so," he murmured.

"But when Joan Lackland says so you doubt," she cried, "just as you doubt her ability as a skipper. But never mind, you'll be sorry some day for all your unkindness. There's the boat lowering now, and in five minutes we'll be shaking hands with Christian Young."

Lalaperu brought out the glasses and cigarettes and the eternal whisky and soda, and before the five minutes were past the gate clicked and Christian Young, tawny and golden, gentle of voice and look and hand, came up the bungalow steps and joined them.

News, as usual, Young brought—news of drinking at Guvutu, where the men boasted that they drank between drinks; news that the Matambo had gone on a reef in the Shortlands and would be laid off one run for repairs.

"That means five weeks more before you can sail for Sydney," Sheldon said to Joan.

"And that we are losing precious time," she added ruefully.

"If you want to go to Sydney the Upolu sails from Tulagi tomorrow afternoon," Young said, "and you can catch her as late as 5 tomorrow afternoon—at least so her first officer told me."

"But I've got to go to Guvutu first." Joan looked at the men with a whimsical expression. "I've some shopping to do. I can't wear these Berande curtains into Sydney. I must buy cloth at Guvutu and make myself a dress during the voyage down. I'll start immediately—in an hour. Lalaperu, you bring 'm one fella Adamu Adam along me. Tell 'm that fella Ornfiri make m' kai-kai take along whaleboat." She rose to her feet, looking at Sheldon. "And you, please, have the boys carry down the whaleboat—my boat, you know. I'll be off in an hour."

"I'll go over with you," Sheldon announced.

"Let me run you over in the Minerva," said Young.

She shook her head laughingly.

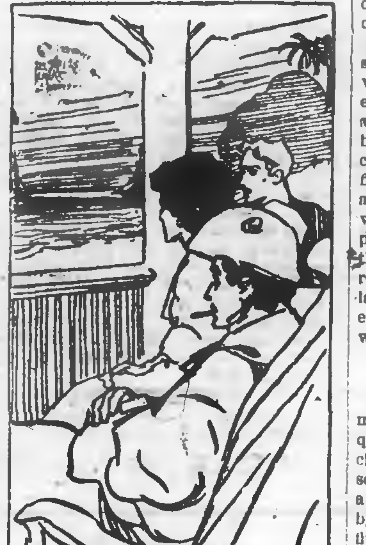
"I'm going in the whaleboat. You, Mr. Sheldon, as my partner, I cannot permit to desert Berande and your work out of a mistaken notion of courtesy. And as for you, Captain Young, you know very well that you just left Guvutu this morning, that you are bound for Marau and that you said yourself that in two hours you are getting under way again."

"But may I not see you safely across?" Tudor asked, a pleading note in his voice that rasped on Sheldon's nerves.

"No, no, and again no!" she cried. "You've all got your work to do, and so have I. I came to the Solomons to work, not to be escorted about like a doll. For that matter, here's my escort, and there are seven more like him."

Adamu Adam stood beside her, towering above her, as he towered above the three white men.

"We start in an hour in the whaleboat for Guvutu, big brother," Joan said to him. "Tell your brothers, all of them, so that they can get ready. We catch the Upolu for Sydney. Leave the guns behind. Turn them over to Mr. Sheldon. We won't need them."



"IT'S THE MINERVA," JOAN SAID DECIDEDLY.

For the Children

Count Alexander Hochberg, Driving His Toy Motorcar.

Many young people might envy the young man here pictured in his motorcar, but it is doubtful if they would care to be burdened with his name. In full it is Alexander Frederic William George Conrad Ernest Maximilian Hochberg. He is a count, or graf, as it is called in German. He is seven years old and is the son of the Prince of Pless of Germany. His mother is an Englishwoman. Recently his father gave a hunting party on his estates in Silesia, and young Alexander proudly exhibited his new car. Even boys with titles enjoy such things.

Chinese Butterfly Game.

In an open space in the garden poles like our Maypoles are set up in a circle. These are hung with tiny wind bells, which give forth a sweet tinkling when they are stirred by the breeze, and with a variety of flags of different colors. In the center of the circle the game of butterflies is played.

Chinese girls and women with their shining black hair freshly dressed and wearing festive garments rich with embroidery arm themselves with fans and enter the charmed circle. Several butterflies that have been previously caught and prepared for the game are flying lazily about. To each one is attached a long, strong, black hair, which is weighted with a scrap of paper just heavy enough to prevent the butterfly from soaring out of reach. The players, shrieking with laughter, run madly about in their efforts to catch the little creatures with open fans.

A Riming Game.

In this the first word of the answer must rime with the last word of the question. The players are seated in a circle, and the game is started by some one asking of his next neighbor a question on any subject whatever or by making any casual remark. The first word of the answer to this must rime with the last word of the question or remark. This then goes around the circle, each player in turn adding a remark to that made by the one before him, always observing the riming rule. Thus the original question may be, "Do you like peach pies?" The next player may reply, "Wise people always do." The next may say, "You, I suppose, agree with that?" The next, "Flat you may knock me if I don't." The next, "Won't you change the subject, please?" And the next, "Eas-ily; let's talk of books." And so on as long as wits will work.

Conundrums.

Why is life like a very hard riddle? Because it always has to be given up.

What evidence have we that Adam used sugar? Because he raised Cain.

When an ape is sick, how may he announce it and at the same time tell what kind of medicine he wants? Ape ill (a pill).

When eggs are 26 cents a dozen, how many can you get for a cent and a quarter? A dozen, because a cent and a quarter equal 26 cents.

What are the most patient objects in the shape of humanity? Statues.

When is coffee like soil? When it is ground.

Why is a retired carpenter like a lecturer? Because he is an ex-plainer.

Passenger Names.

To ride on people's Christian names
Is one of Paul's pretending games.
He has announced to me that John
Is comfortablest riding on,
For one can sit astride the o,
Between the J and h, you know.
It's like an army saddle so.

And then, he says, it's very plain
That Samuel's a railway train,
For when your head outside you poke
You see the engine's curling smoke.
Mary's a donkey, it appears,
With ramrod tail and long, tall ears.
A bicycle Otto is, of course,
And Anna's like a rocking horse,
For back and forth you spell all day
And still just where you were you stay.

Alf is a pony Paul won't try.
He says it bucks so very high.
But Paul has many other steeds
Of as extraordinary breeds,
And if you like pretending games
I'm sure you, too, can tell their names.

Gold Beaters' Skin.

A cheap substitute is much desired for goldbeaters' skin, which is prepared from the outside membrane of the large intestine of the ox. It is said that goldbeaters first tried paper for inclosing the metal, and mulberry fiber paper is still used in China and Japan, but animal parchment has been mostly employed for two or three centuries at least. While a thinner leaf can be beaten out between paper parchment sheets, it is damaged by adhesion. A special German paper is coated with isinglass or albumen, and paper parchment of some kind is much used in the first stages, but goldbeaters finish their product between goldbeaters' skins, still pounding an ounce of gold into 200 square inches of leaf.—New York Tribune.

Using Old Stockings.

Instead of throwing away your old stockings when the feet are worn out, cut off the feet and rip the stocking open at the seams. Sew them together, keeping the narrow parts together, and of them make the top of your petticoats.

After the stockings have been sewed together fit them about the hips, sew on a waistband and trim off even about the bottom. Add a corded silk ruffle the necessary length and attach it to the stocking top by a French seam and you have a perfectly fitting petticoat at about half the cost of one bought in the shops.

To Wash Blankets.

When washing blankets put two large tablespoonfuls of borax and one pint bowl of soft soap into a tub of cold water. When dissolved put in a pair of blankets and let them remain there overnight. Next rub them out and rinse thoroughly in two waters and then hang them out to dry. Do not wring them.

In Case of Fire.

The gas jets of small city rooms are often placed near a window, and fires have been started through the curtains being blown toward them. To obviate this danger sew several small weights in the lower seam of such curtains to hold them down or at least to prevent them from flying high with every breeze.

BANKING

When you take out a life insurance policy you make the biggest bank deposit you ever made in your life at one time. Did you ever put one thousand five hundred dollars through the receiving teller's wicket and say "put that to the credit of my account"? No. Well, the minute you sign the insurance application for this amount and pay the first instalment on your new bank account, you have actually provided that whole sum—ready waiting, for service against one big call that is coming to you sometime—the one on which you will never get any extension of time. That's banking in a new sense and banking with common sense and foresight.

ARRANGING FOR THE ANNUAL POULTRY SHOW

The Peterborough Poultry Association held its regular monthly meeting last night. President Fred Holmes was in the chair, and the attendance of members was gratifying to the officers. It was a regular old time meeting with a number of good young birds on exhibition, with the Rhode Island Reds and White Orpingtons being in the majority. Mr. Harry T. Lush after passing judgment on the birds gave an interesting and instructive talk on the different varieties shown, explaining the good and bad points in evidence. After general routine, the members discussed the prospects of their annual winter show which will be held on the second week in January. It was decided to get started at once and push the work ahead as quickly as possible, and in view of this a committee consisting of Messrs. Paxman, Holmes, Calendar and Kelly was appointed to revise the prize list and report at the next meeting. The above committee will also act as a Printing Committee. Mr. Geo McClelland was appointed as a member of the Board of Directors to replace Mr. Dunnitt, who has left the city. Messrs Robson and Ashe were appointed a committee to look over the coops and drinking cups and to report at next meeting. Messrs. Lang, Calendar, Kelly, Paxman, Holmes and Grose will form the Special Prize Committee.

ZOE BARNETT AND RUSSELL LENON

In John C. Fisher's big musical success "The Red Rose"

Not since the days of "Florodora" has there been a musical comedy with a score so popular as that of "The Red Rose," which will be seen at the Grand on Tuesday next, Oct. 8, with the popular Zoe Barnett at its head. The composer, Robert Hood Bowers, seems to have [illegible] the secret of writing [illegible] yet popular airs. He insists on the proper interpretation of his work, and for that reason local players will hear many instruments rarely used in the orchestra pit. There are twenty-two musical numbers. Seats on sale to-morrow (Saturday) morning.

PENNY BANKS IN THE SCHOOLS OF OTTAWA

Ottawa, Oct. 4.—At the end of September there was the sum of $17,915.16 to the credit of the school children in the penny banks in Ottawa. Elgin street school has a long lead with the fine sum of $1,795.88, while there is a close race for second place. First Avenue getting it with $1,660.01 to the $1,640.24 of Glashan. In all there is the fine showing of nine schools with over one thousand dollars to their credit, while the average balance comes to about $851.

NINE OF DIAMONDS SCOTLAND'S CURSE

A correspondent asks why the nine of diamonds is called the 'Curse of Scotland," and is held in superstitious dread by that race.

The alleged reasons are numerous and dubious. One derivation is from the game of comette, introduced into Scotland by Queen Mary, and said to have ruined many families. In this game the nine of diamonds was the great winning card. Another tradition is that the Duke of Cumberland's order to slay the wounded after the battle of Culloden was written on the back of a nine of diamonds. The card is also associated with Scotland's detestation of John Dalrymple, first Earl of Stair, for his part in bringing about the Union, and for his share in the Massacre of Glencoe, the Earl's heraldic bearings, which contained nine lozenges, having a certain resemblance to the nine of diamonds.

Millbrook Fair is in full swnig today. Many Peterborough people went to Millbrook on the noon train.

Particular attention is called to the afternoon train, for Belleville now leaving at 1.40 p.m., which will be changed to leave Peterboro at 1.30 p.m. This is an important change and should be carefully noted as this train is made up here and always leaves ON TIME 9l

DIRECT SERVICE FROM ORILLIA TO PETERBORO

C.P.R. Service on Seaboard Line Commences this month

Orillia, Oct. 4.—In answer to the suggestion that the Company should give a better passenger service on their Georgian Bay and Seaboard line, Mr. J. C. Miller has received letters from Mr. McNicholl, General Manager of the C.P.R. and from Mr. Arundel, the General Superintendent. The latter states that beginning with the winter service, the trains which now run only as far east as Lindsay, will run to and from Havelock, giving connection with trains to and from Ottawa and Montreal. It will also give a direct service from here to Peterborough. This will be at least some improvement, though Mr. Miller had hoped that the Company would put on an additional train in each direction. The new service will begin on the 28th instant.

TORONTO IS SAFE TWO DAYS LONGER

Miss Barbara Wylie will Not Arrive there Until Next Week

Toronto, Oct. 4.—"Miss Wylie will not be here until the beginning of next week," declared Mrs. Flora McD. Denison, regarding the probable date of Miss Wylie's arrival. "The Toronto suffragettes have no intention of preparing any big reception for the visitor; she will be treated exactly the same as a speaker at any other meeting, and no militant tactics will be introduced. As I told you yesterday we have the assurance of Mrs Pankhurst in this connection and will be much surprised if Miss Wylie's actions do not confirm the report. Officially nothing has been done yet and no date will be set for the meeting before the end of the week.

CAN SUE OTTAWA FOR DAMAGES

Solicitor Says City is Liable for Typhoid Epidemic

Ottawa, Oct. 4.—That the city of Ottawa is liable for damages for every case of typhoid fever in the two local epidemics is the opinion given by City Solicitor McVeity in an official communication to the City Clerk.

In the 1911 epidemic there were 1,100 cases and 83 deaths. In the epidemic this year the cases numbered 1,150 and the deaths 60. The city's bill of damages will therefore be a colossal one if the courts uphold the interpretation the city solicitor places on the law.

Police Court

Two more of the young fellows last week and who evaded the police week, and who evaded the police, leaving one of their number in the toils, were fined $2.60 this morning by Magistrate Dumble.

There is no need for Miss Wylie to hide—yet.

HARVEST THANKSGIVING SERVICE AT ALL SAINT'S

Large Congregation Hear Rev. W. F. Armitage Deliver an Excellent Sermon.

"Is our Christian development strong enough to face the issues before us?"

This was the keynote of an eloquent sermon at All Saints' church last night, by the Rev. W. L. Armitage of Toronto.

His text was Psalms 144; 15—Happy is that people that is in such a case; yea, happy is that people, whose God is the Lord.

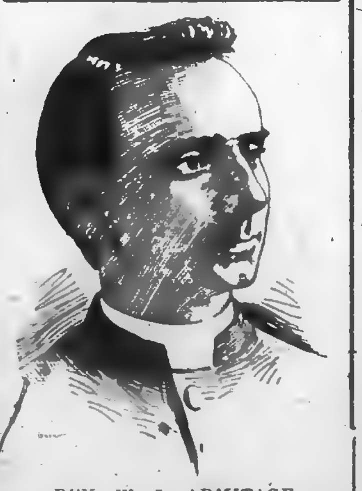
The weather while threatening did not prevent a large number of the congregation being present, and all took part in the service with a heartiness that bespoke of interest, and a spirit of true thanksgiving.

The interior of the edifice, and particularly the chancel, presented a most pleasing spectacle, the decorative scheme being resultant of an appropriate and harmonious array of flowers and products from the harvest field.

The rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb, was assisted in the service by the Rev. Canon Davidson, of St. John's; Rev. F J Sawers, of St. Luke's, and Rev. Mr. Price, of the South Peterborough Anglican Mission. The choir was at its full strength and their work with that of Mrs. McClelland as organist, assisted to no small degree, in the success of the service.

Rev. Mr. Armitage expressed his appreciation of the privilege to be present and join with the congregation of All Saints' in the service of thanksgiving.

"Whatever our calling, be it in the office at the bench in the school, in the church, or wherever our labor may come, our hearts should go out in thanksgiving for the fruits of our labor."



REV. W. L. ARMITAGE

Rev Mr. Armitage is meeting with splendid success in his parish work at Toronto. The congregation have in view, the erection of a new church and are providing the funds, although on the advice of their rector, building operations may not be commenced for some time.

The preacher pointed out, however, that this thanksgiving should not be of a mechanical nature. People were inclined to go through devotions because others did with the heart just as cold towards God as ever.

He reviewed the situation as the Psalmist found it. There was plenty in the land; the people were happy, the people were as one.

But happiness was not in the abundance of the things a man possessed. Riches was not happiness Rather, "happy are the people that have the Lord as their God."

OUR SONS AND DAUGHTERS

Rev. Mr. Armitage referred to the prosperity of Canada. It was said this was Canada's century. We should be very glad to know of these things, but the resources God think of are "that our sons may be as plants grown up in their youth; that our daughters may be as corner stones, polished after the similitude of a palace."

What about the stability of our people? What of the boy of to-day. The preacher went on to show how great was the need for the sons and daughters to be trained, in the knowledge of God, and not to spend their lives in the pursuit of worldly pleasures. Leaders were wanted yet, and it seemed that some were trying to prepare themselves to bear as little fruit as possible, "We are far from looking to-day to the womanhood as a corner stone. We say that's for the men." The psalmist says they shall be as polished corners of the temple. They should have stability as well as beauty.

THE MODERN LIFE

The preacher did not think the modern life fitted them for their position in life as God intended they should fill. Some were busy turning night into day, frivolously flitting away their time in bridge and other pleasures like butterflies of life.

THE CHALLENGE

Are we able to stand the challenge to our moral strength. Are we able to stand prosperity and riches, to face the evils or the good that may be in a modern city. "Are we still to have the East End; our whitechapels, our poverty stricken sections? Then there is the problem of the nations drawn closer in relationship, the immigrating question of people coming to our shores. Are we able to deal with them as we ought? The preacher said he felt that we are not, and concluding his sermon, recited the lines from Kipling's poem—

Lord God of hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget, lest we forget!

THEATRICAL

The Spring Maid

Peterborough theatregoers were afforded the opportunity of hearing one of the most delightfully tuneful operas, last night at the Grand when "The Spring Maid" danced itself into immense popularity before a large and enraptured audience. With its beautiful waltz-songs, romantic soldiers, pretty girls, magnificent scenery and wonderful singing. "The Spring Maid was undoubtedly one of the best comic operas since "The Chocolate Soldier" took the boards at the Grand. Humor, of the best quality, was also afforded in some sidesplitting scenes by expert comedians. One of the greatest laugh producers was Harry Short in the character as Roland, the tragedian. The scene in which he played Othello made people laugh till the tears came.

Mr J. H. Goldsworthy in the role of Aladar is an Englishman and was very pleasing. The whole show abounds in German Officers, with little moustaches, peasants and fountain girls.

The music was of the dreamy swaying sort, and the two hits, "Day Dreams," and "Two Little Love Bees," which are well known to most people, called for frequent encores. The augmented orchestra also pleased and assisted the production considerably.

The company left this morning for Hamilton.

SOME THINGS ABOUT THE RED SOX TWIRLERS

Joe Wood, the Boston Red Sox pitcher who this year performed such sensational work by winning seventeen straight games for his team will be one of the big guns of the Red Sox firing line.

Wood is twenty-three years of age, stands five feet eleven inches in height and weighs 180 lbs. This is his fifth year with the Boston team. He played with the Hutchinson, Kan., team in 1907, and was bought from the latter organization by Boston. He is the Red Sox star twirler, is unmarried, lives at Parker, Glenn, Pa., and bats and pitches right-handed. He has a no-hit game to his credit.

LAWRENCE PAPE, PITCHER.

This is Pape's third year with the Red Sox team, although he first joined the outfit in 1909, coming from Milwaukee. The following year he was let out to the Brookton club of the New England League, but was recalled at the close of the season. He has done but little work on the rubber this season, figuring mainly as a relief pitcher. He is unmarried, lives at Norwood, Ohio; is twenty-four years of age, six feet tall, weighs 170 pounds, and bats and throws right handed.

CHARLES HALL, PITCHER.

Charles Hall is now passing his seventh year in baseball. He is twenty-six years of age and resides at Ventura, Cal. He first broke in as a professional with the Seattle team, but was with the St. Paul team of the American Association when both he and Ed Karger were secured at the same time for Boston in 1909. Hall is six feet tall, weighs 190 pounds, pitches right-handed and was married last fall.

THIS WHITE HOPE IS CANADIAN

Says Both Jeanette and Burns are Afraid of Him

Montreal, Oct. 4.—Montreal received a visit to-day from the 205 lb. young man who is looked upon by his friends as the Canadian White Hope. His name is Arthur Pilie, and the only reason he has not become better known to fame, they claim, is that he thus far failed to get in touch with the proper people who can advertise him. He is a native of Chatham, Ont., and he has been at the boxing game only two years, but in that time he has had twenty-one fights, all limited, and has been awarded sixteen of them.

In appearance he considerably resembles Jim Jeffries and might be taken for a near relation. He is very modest in his talk, but seems convinced that he can make his way to the top if given a chance, claiming that Joe Jeannette refused to meet him because the latter was afraid of him, and that Tommy Burns will not box him for the championship of Canada for the same reason.

He is to meet Constant Le Marin, the wrestler-boxer from France, at the opening of the boxing tournament of the Canadian Athletic Club here.

His backer and manager is Mr. W. P. Armstrong, a well known sporting goods manufacturer.

GOLF

Great interest is being taken in the final round of the club championship to be played on Saturday afternoon at the Golf Club. After many close and exciting finishes in the first, second and third round, the contest is now between Dr. Gowan and G. F. Bennett, who will play 36 holes to decide the championship of the season of 1912.

HOCKEY

Toronto, Oct. 4.—The first hockey game for the new arena will be a meeting between the Eaton team and the Victorias, of Winnipeg, holders of the Allan Cup.

Eatons are champions of the Ontario Hockey Association, and played the Victorias in Winnipeg last winter for the Cup, but were defeated. Critics who have seen the Victorias play claim they are the fastest amateur team ever seen. Eatons are well known here, and this game looks like the best hockey attraction that could be secured to open the new arena. The game will be staged about the second week in December.

Fast Train Hit Auto.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 4.—A fast train yesterday afternoon struck an automobile at a street crossing in Wilkinsburg, a suburb. Four of the occupants, and a girl who was standing near the crossing were killed.

The dead are: Rev. W. L. Nicholson, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church at Wilmerding, Pa., and his six-year-old son; John E. Beck, Wilmerding; Mrs. Mary Diamond, Wilkinsburg; and an unidentified Italian girl.

Dropped Dead In Field.

Guelph, Oct. 4.—A sudden death occurred at the House of Industry, Fergus, yesterday afternoon, when John Aitken, who had charge of the farm work there, dropped dead in a field near the house while binding a sheaf of corn. Mr. Aitken was about 70 years of age and had been in the employ of the House of Industry for about fourteen years.

Demonstration Farms.

The Dominion Commission of Conservation has established a number of demonstrating farms throughout Canada for the purpose of instructing agriculturists how they may get the best results in the most economic manner. They are under direction of John Fixter, formerly of Macdonald College, and C. Nunnick, agricultural expert. In Ontario eight farms have been leased, in Quebec six, and in the Maritime Provinces three each. Arrangements are being made for similar demonstrations in the west.

Good Form

About Wedding Cards.

It is sometimes said that an invitation for a large and formal wedding requires no answer. This is not strictly true, however. Where the "at home" form is used it may be inferred that no reply is expected. Where the host "requests the pleasure" an answer should be sent. Indeed, one is often asked for in the invitation, or a separate card with "Please respond" is inclosed, says Florence Howe Hall.

For a breakfast where the guests are to be seated at table or for a small wedding an answer should be sent promptly. One should be careful to follow the form of the invitation:

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Furniss accept with pleasure (or regret their inability to accept) the kind invitation of
Mr. and Mrs. James Wentworth for Thursday afternoon, June twentieth, at half after four o'clock.

It is not thought polite to use the word "decline." The envelope is usually addressed to the hostess alone. Guests unable to attend a wedding reception send cards on the day of the affair to the bride's parents or to the persons in whose name the invitations are issued. Additional cards are sometimes sent to the bride and groom, but this is unnecessary. An invitation to a church wedding requires no answer. Those who are unable to be present should certainly acknowledge in some way the courtesy shown them. If the persons inviting them belong to their circle of visiting acquaintances they should either send cards or call within two weeks after the wedding. If they were unacquainted with the former, as in the case of the friends of the bridegroom, they would not make a personal visit, but would send cards instead. All who are invited to the home, however, whether they are friends or strangers, should call soon after the wedding.

A wedding announcement should be answered by sending cards to the persons making it. One thus shows appreciation of the courtesy extended and informs the senders that their communication has been received. Where it comes from a distant city and no address is given it may be impossible or very difficult to acknowledge it.

All who receive cards for the bride's "at homes" should call. If several days are mentioned it is best to select an early one, since everybody should welcome the young couple to their new home as soon as possible. If the marriage takes place toward the end of June the cards sometimes say, "At home after Oct. 1." In this case no one would make a formal call until that date.

Those living at a distance send cards in lieu of making a personal visit. A lady sends one for the bride; a man sends two, one being for the benedict.

Needed For Guest Room.

A sewing case for a guest room can easily be made at home from a five pointed star shaped straw mat six inches in diameter.

In the center of the mat put a pin cushion of satin ribbon an inch in diameter and an inch high, tightly stuffed. This is made by cutting a round of satin for the top and sewing to it a band of the ribbon five inches long and two inches deep to allow for seams and turning in at the bottom.

Make a star from five strips of ribbon, each two inches long, turned in at one end to form a point, and arrange the star from the center of the mat so the points come between its points. In the center of this ribbon star sew the pincushion, taking the stitches firmly through the mat, and on one side make a thimble case of the ribbon to hold a white bone thimble.

On two of the four points of the straw mat fasten a spool of white silk by running inch wide satin ribbon through it and tying in a small bow on the outside. On the other two points fasten spools of colored silk to match the ribbon trimmings.

To the fifth point fasten a pair of small scissors by a loop of No. 1 ribbon, ending in a many looped bow.

Training Young Cobblers.

Cobbling is recognized as a trade in the vocational schools of Buffalo. Several schools are set aside for teaching trades to young boys and girls, and the latest addition to the course is one in cobbling. A competent instructor has been engaged to teach the young men how to repair shoes. There are a number taking up the course, and it is certain that the trade will not become extinct with the young generation studying the principles of rejuvenating old shoes.—Shoe Retailer.

Announcement No. 2

As I announced yesterday the Sanford Co., Wholesale Clothing Manufacturers of Hamilton, has bought the balance of the Lang Co's stock and taken a lease of the store, and will open a branch store here to be known as "Oak Hall."

The Company has appointed me manager of this branch, No. 10, and has instructed me to sell the balance of the Lang & Co's stock for any price I think it will bring.

I have gone carefully through it and those who attend the sale will conclude that I am determind to carry out their instructions.

Of course it is the remainder of a twenty-five thousand dollar stock and does not contain any of this season's goods.

The Overcoats were carried over from last winter and some of the Suits, men's and boy's, were also last winter and last spring goods, and I am determined to clear them now.

For instance here's a lot of Men's Suits I am going to let go at $5, though they are marked 7.50, 8.50, 10.00, 12 00.

Another lot must go at $8 50, that were in Mr. Lang's stock at 12.00, 13.50, 15.00 and 16.50.

Then there are some real good Suits that were priced from 15.00 to 22.00, that I am going to sell at $12.00.

This lot includes some fine black Worsted and blue Serge Suits, English Worsteds and Scotch Tweeds.

Parents who want school Suits for their boys can choose at about half the original prices. One lot for ages 10 to 16 years will be cleared at $2.00, and another lot at $2·50 and $3.00.

Men's Overcoats are in pretty good shape but will be sold as low as $5 00 for a lot of $8 and $10 qualities, and a lot of Tweed Raincoats that were $12 will also go out at $5.00

The better Overcoats with velvet collars and Ulsters with convertible collars I consider the best part of the stock and will be sold at about two-thirds their original prices.

Some of our new lines arrived from Hamilton to-day and will be on sale at the same prices as sold at in Toronto, Hamilton and all our other branch stores.

ORIENTAL HOTEL CASE GOES TO A HIGHER TRIBUNAL

Decision Rendered in the Divisional Court, to Which the Matter Was Carried on an Appeal—Clears the Way for a Further Hearing

The litigation over the Oriental Hotel here has not yet been decided. The case after it had been passed upon by Judge Huycke was carried by the plaintiff to Toronto where one feature of it was passed upon yesterday in the Divisional Court before Justices Riddell, Kelly and Lennox. The official ruling was as follows:

Dickson vs. Graham.—G. H. Watson, K.C., and E. L. Goodwill, (Peterborough) for landlord. I. F. Hellmuth, K. C., and F. D. Kerr (Peterborough) for tenant. An appeal by landlord from [illegible] This was an application by the Dickson Co., of Peterborough, for an order determining that Geo. N. Graham was a term expired, &c., and was holding wrongful possession against the landlord &c. The order complained of dismissed the landlord's application with costs. Order made discharging the county judge's order to enable landlord to bring an action for possession.

Mr Goodwill attorney for the Dickson Co says that this simply paves the way for carrying the case to a higher court and that neither side can claim anything in the shape of a victory.

LORD MILNER DID NOT SAY WHAT SIR WILFRID CLAIMS

His Lordship Repudiates a Statement Credited to Him by the Liberal Leader in His Address in This City Tuesday Night—Another Sample of Straight Talk From the Touring Quintette

Sir Wilfrid Laurier endeavored to defend his naval policy in his speech in this city on Tuesday evening by attributing to Lord Alfred Milner the assertion "that a Canadian navy was the best way by which Canada could come to the assistance of the Mother Country." Continuing his address the leader of the Opposition is reported in the Examiner as follows:

"In 1909 had come the formulation of his naval policy which proposed that Canada should establish a naval service of her own under the control of the Parliament of Canada and placed at the disposal of England in times of need. It had been claimed by the Opposition that this was not a sound policy; that the navy thus created should come automatically under the control of the British Admiralty. It was easy to create suspicion but in the statement of Lord Milner, that the construction of a Canadian navy was the best way to solve the problem he felt that he could claim justification for the course adopted. After that testimony, no man would be able to say that the Liberals were disloyal."

This statement of the ex-premier was called to the attention of Lord Milner at Montreal, and his lordship has given out the following reply:

"I believe Sir Wilfrid was alluding to my speech in Toronto four years ago. I then advocated a Canadian navy, but specially emphasized that it should be for Imperial, not merely for Canadian, purposes. What I said to the reporters at Halifax during my present visit was substantially as follows: 'Don't ask me what form Canadian assistance in Imperial defences should take. That is a question for Canadians. The British people will welcome anything Canada may decide to do, and appreciate the spirit in which she has taken the matter up. Personally, I favor Canada and the other self-governing dominions creating their own navies, though this would be of little use if, when established, they did not act as one. Meanwhile as it will take time to build up a Canadian navy, a direct contribution to the British Navy may be desirable—preferably of ships, not money. But any share the dominions take in Imperial defence should involve a share in control of policy. They are not tributary States, but partners in the Empire."

"MILNER."

STREET RAILWAY FOR STRATFORD

Mackenzie and Mann Decide to go on With the Work

Stratford, Oct. 4—Sir William Mackenzie has decided definitely to build a street railway in Stratford, and has instructed Secretary Moore and Engineer Rothery to proceed at once with the necessary preliminary work.

A new franchise, for twenty-five years only, with no renewal provision, thus bringing it within the city's own powers under the statute and avoiding the necessity of obtaining confirmation of the legislation from the Legislature, will be ready for Monday night's City Council meeting, when it is expected to be given two readings, and that an early date will be set for its submission to the ratepayers.

The redrafted franchise will not contain a power clause, thus leaving the Stratford Railway Co. free to make its own arrangements for motive power. Whether Hydro-electric power is used or not will depend upon terms offered by the Commission. Gasoline-electric cars, such as the C. N.R. is experimenting with at present, are a possibility if found feasible for a city service, but it is more likely that hydro will be used.

The company is ready to begin construction and will probably not wait for the submission of the by-law to lay the tracks on the streets at present being paved, as there is felt to be no danger of the by-law being defeated.

The best way to tell an American political boss to-day is by the way he pretends he isn't one.

Peat Fuel Supply.

The Mines Branch of the Government Department of Mines recently announced that its demonstration of the commercial possibilities of peat as a fuel in Canada had been successfully completed, and that henceforth the activities of the branch would be applied in another direction, probably the economic production and testing of fuel, concerning which the department already has a man in the west.

The peat industry in Canada will now become a matter of private enterprise. There are two big plants under construction, one at Alfred, Ont., and another at Farnham, Que., which are expected to supply Ottawa and Montreal and possibly other cities with cheap fuel. Their capacity is about 30,000 tons per year.

MARRIAGE LAW CASE WAS A CONSERVATIVE VICTORY

The Hearing Resulted in Establishing the Fact That "Mixed" Marriages Are Valid Which Was the Main Point at Issue.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir—The Examiner gives a full account of the speech of the Hon. George P. Graham here the other night, when the was along with Sir Wilfrid Laurier, on the Marriage question. According to the Examiner, Mr. Graham said that the Conservative and the Laurier Governments arrived at exactly the same conclusion on the marriage question, which is absolutely false as anybody can see, who will take the trouble to read Hansard, the official parliamentary report which can be got at the Public Library. If they will look up the index they will find exactly where the debate and the vote which resulted in the reference, is.

The truth is that the Laurier Government absolutely declined to consider the question at all and did everything in its power to snuff out the attempt of the people of this country to get common justice without reference to the tyrannical laws of any church.

The answer given by the Laurier Government to the question as to whether the Dominion Parliament had the right to enact marriage laws was absolutely in the negative. The answer given by the Borden Government and read to the House by Mr Borden himself, was absolutely in the affirmative and when the time came to vote on the question as to whether the question should be referred to the court or not for decision in the matter, every Liberal in the House voted against submitting it to the Courts, but the Conservative majority prevailed and it went to the Courts.

Of the two important questions submitted the one as to the power of Parliament to pass a Federal Marriage Law was answered in the negative by both the Supreme Court and the Privy Council of England. The one which asked if clergymen of all denominations had the power to marry people of all denominations in Quebec was answered by the Supreme Court in the affirmative as everybody will remember and was never considered by the Privy Council of England, which, it will be rememberd, said they had nothing to do with it. It did not concern the constitutional right of parliament to pass a Federal Marriage Law and therefore they refused to consider it.

The net gain of the Borden Government's action has been that the people of Canada know exactly where they stand and exactly what their constitutional rights are which will enable them to agitate for the further freedom of the people from the dictation of any one class, in this respect at least. The point which concerns Quebec is of such far reaching importance that no one can tell what the result will be. That result remains yet a hidden mystery but the fact is that the law of Canada at the present time as interpreted by the Supreme Court, the highest Court in Canada, and since the Privy Council will have nothing to do with it is the final court of resort, is that no one class of people in Quebec has a monopoly of marriage or in other words that anybody going before any clergyman, Roman Catholic or Protestant, is married, notwithstanding the faith of any of the parties.

As it happens, this last point is the very essence of the Lancaster Bill and in so far the Lancaster Bill was carried. How then can Mr. Graham or any other slanderer go about charging people who are asking for the common freedom of a common citizen, with being mere whisperers and conspirators? It is an abominable charge and his description of affairs in the House is absolutely false He wasn't there at the time, but that has made no difference to him evidently and on top of it all we have Mr. Sidney Fisher's statement in the rink the other night that Sir Wilfrid Laurier acted as a "good Catholic Canadian," in his vote against the extension of Manitoba's boundaries unless she bowed the knee to the religious minority. If Manitoba is to be governed in this way so is all Canada I suppose and the next thing we will hear is, if Sir Wilfrid Laurier should be returned to power, that being a "good Catholic Canadian," he deems it his duty to govern Canada in the interest of that body. As a free man, I protest against the turn that things are taking in this country. If Canadians can't live in this young and broad country without being governed by any Church there will be a new French Revolution here which will result in tearing the bonds off for good and all.

Yours truly,

J. H. BURNHAM.

CEREAL COMPANY ASKS FOR DEED OF PROPERTY

Have Enlargement of Their Mill and Erection of Warehouse in View, it is Said.

It was learned last night that the city intends to divert Simcoe street southward at the eastern terminal for the convenience of the C.P.R., when their new sidings and freight sheds are built along the water front. The fact came out at a meeting of the Manufacturers' Committee, when the request of the Peterborough Cereal Company for the deed of the land where they are now established, was under discussion.

The Cereal Company were given the right of the land under discussion by the City Council of 1906, with certain conditions with which they were to comply. If these obligations were complied with they were entitled to the land permanently. One clause stated that if the company desired the land within ten years, they could secure it by the payment of $1,000.00. The company are now anxious to secure the land, and are willing to advance the $1,000.00.

Mr. O'Connell represented the company, and stated that in view of the fact that the C.P.R. contemplate diverting the street, it would cross the property of the Peterborough Cereal Company. The latter were not anxious to sell any of their land, as they expect to enlarge their mill and build a new warehouse. Mr. O'Connell was of the opinion that as the company had some years ago decided to use the land, it was scarcely right or legal that the C.P.R. should be allowed to have access to it. He did not feel that the agreement stipulated any such concession.

E. A. Peck, who represented the C.P.R. contended that no agreement was in force between the City Council and the Peterborough Cereal Co. "It was true," he said that a by-law was passed, "but he was of the view that this did not mean a lasting agreement." The City Solicitor opined that the Peterborough Cereal Company were entitled to the rights of the land under the by-law.

Finally an arrangement was reached whereby the advice of a C.P.R. official will be enlisted to consult with Mr. O'Connell in the endeavor to bring about agreeable terms to both parties. The result will be reported at the City Council meeting next Monday night.

Those present were Mayor Bradburn, Ald. Johnston (chairman), Gillespie, Gordon, Duffus and Graham.

MR. GOODWILL GOT INJUNCTION

Case of Downey vs. Burney at Osgoode Hall Yesterday

Mr R. F. Downey recently sold some real estate in Toronto to a Mr. Burney in that city the price being $3,000, of which sum $600 was paid down. The understanding was it is claimed that no sand was to be removed from the premises until the purchase price was paid in full. There is valuable gravel on the premises and Mr. Downey discovered that the purchaser was hauling this away with all dispatch.

Mr. E. L. Goodwill on behalf of Mr. Downey yesterday at Osgoode Hall applied to Justice Falconbridge for an injunction to prevent Burney from removing any more gravel. A temporary restraining order was issued and the case will be argued next Monday.

VOL LXVI. NO. 81 PETERBOROUGH, ONT., CANADA, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1912 TEN CENTS PER WEEK

SENTENCED TO FIVE YEARS HE COMMITTED SUICIDE

Arthur Hamner Used Bed Sheet for the Deed—Left Note Asking Mercy for Those Who Swore His Life Away —He Was Convicted of Horse Stealing

Special To The Review.

LONDON, Oct. 5—His body suspended lifeless by a sheet from the jail cot which he occupied last night, Arthur Hamner, alias Arthur Johnston, alias Arthur Henry, yesterday sentenced by Judge Elliott to five years in Kingston for horse stealing, was found cold in death in his cell in the court jail by Turnkey Marsh when making his rounds. The sheet had been tied to the bars of the cell doors seven feet from the floor. A note left in the cell by the suicide declared his innocence of theft and implored mercy on the souls of those who "swore his life away." He was convicted of stealing a team from the field of Andrew Empey, North Dorchester.

POWER QUESTION

A correspondent points out the opportunity the city has to gain unlimited power without liability for investment.

In order to discuss the power situation as it affects Peterborough it is necessary to take a comprehensive view of the entire power situation as it affects the entire district of this Province, lying between the Town of Oshawa and the City of Kingston, and also to consider some of the very important recent changes that have and are taking place in this district vitally affecting its transportation facilities both by water and rail.

Consider for a moment the transportation facilities along the front. In former days the Grand Trunk was the only Railway that served Kingston, Napanee, Belleville, Trenton, Cobourg, Port Hope, Bowmanville, Oshawa and Whitby and for manufacturing purposes this service was bad and indifferent. The town of Oshawa was one mile and a half from the Railway. The town of Bowmanville was one mile from the Railway. Belleville was side tracked and Kingston was placed at the end of a three mile Railway Siding, off the main line.

Great changes have recently taken place. To-day the Canadian Northern Railway has built its line along the lake front tapping its convenient points the cities and towns along the lake front between Kingston and Whitby. To-day the Canadian Pacific is busily engaged in building its main line between Smith's Falls and Toronto and Toronto and is tapping every one of these important towns between Belleville and Toronto. Instead therefore of the cities and towns along the lake front being dependent upon one Railway they are suddenly receiving the great boom of competition and service of the three great transcontinental railways.

Within this last few years the harbor of Cobourg has been greatly enlarged and increased in order to give ample accommodation to large freight barges, ferrying freight cars between Cobourg and the American ports south of the lake. In the immediate future other lake port towns will obtain and deman equally favorable harbor facilities. What do these changes mean to these varied cities and towns? Cheap coal, cheaper iron and steel and cheaper raw material of all kinds from the United States for manufacturing and other purposes. Not only that but these cities and towns will enjoy the advantage of being on the main lines of the three great transcontinental railways, some of which are now and all of which will be completed transcontinental lines traversing every part of the Dominion from the Atlantic to the Pacific and thereby affording the very best possible distributing facilities for manufacturers and to this must be added their advantage of being on the great highway af Commerce by lake and river extending over two thousand miles from Lake Superior to the mouth of the St. Lawrence River.

Within this last few years have been built the finest branch line of the whole system of the Canadian Pacific Railway between Port McNichol and Bethany Junction and upon which it is capable of hauling a greater train load of grain than on any other branch line in the Dominion, and this branch line is heading straight for the new main line of the C.P.R., along the lake front. Over this new line will be carried enormous tourist and passenger traffic and freight and express traffic between Eastern Canada and the Great Northwest via the Great Lakes. But how it may be asked do all these great changes in railways and lake transportation facilities affect the power situation in Peterborough? Look for a moment at the Power situation as it exists to-day. The Seymour Power Company own and control upwards of one hundred thousand horse power on the Trent Canal system between Burleigh Falls and Trenton. Upwards of four or five million dollars have already been spent in such power development and in the construction of costly transmission lines. These transmission lines to-day are transmitting power to Belleville, Trenton, Cobourg, Port Hope, Whitby and Oshawa, and also to villages between these points. A new transmission line is also being built by this same Company to transmit power ta Napanee and Kingston. This same Company have also built a Transmission line tapping their main line at Port Hope and extending north through Millbrook and Lindsay as far as Fenelon Falls.

All the advantages therefore that Peterborough formerly enjoyed from her own peculiar water powers and situation upon the Trent Canal System are extended to every city and town along the lake front. With what result? The town of Oshawa is rapidly increasing in population and is attracting new industries. Bowmanville Port Hope, Cobourg, and Belleville once so dead are rapidly taking on a new lease of life and the awakening influence of electric current will cause even the limestones of Kingston to "blossom as the rose."

But how does this affect the power situation in Peterborough? In order to ascertain this it is necessary to consider the power schemes that are in the back of the heads of our short sighted City Council. It is proposed to confiscate the two hundred thousand dollar transmission line and plant of the Peterborough Light an Power Company operating in Peterborough for the modest sum of $58,000.00. It is further proposed to refuse to renew the Otonabee Power Company's pole line franchise and have the Hydro-Electric Power Commission expropriate the Otonabee Power Co. Power plant. What effect will this scheme have upon Peterborough? Look for a moment on the water powers that are left. The Locks Bridge Power would only develop about 900 horse power and the cost of its development does not mean cheap power. The Quaker Oats Company already own and will shortly use the entire quantity of its own power plant. The Canadian General Electric Company is to-day using all the power produced from the Water works dam and its Nassau Dam. The Lakefield Portland Cement Company use all the power produced at Dam No. 3 and at Young's Point. Dam No. 2 South of Lakefield would be equally as expensive to develop and operate as the Locks Dam and cheap power can be counted on from that source. Burleigh Falls Dam is already owned by the Seymour Power Company. All that is left therefore is Dam No. 4, the development of which by itself would not mean cheap power but to develop it in conjunction with Dam No. 5 would furnish a reasonable amount of cheap power. But the Power that can be developed from Dam No. 4 and No. 5 combined under one head would not supply the citizens of Peterborough with all the light and power now required if the surplus power developed at the Quaker Oats and the Auburn Dams were excluded. Consider the madness of such a scheme, from [illegible] The Seymour Power Company who own and control the Auburn Dam and the Peterborough

SERVIANS ARE URGED TO PUT CROSS ON ST. SOPHIA AGAIN

Want to Expel Turks---Reservists Are Called From St. Petersburg and Great Feligious Enthusiasm is Aroused Among Those at the Station---Telegraph Wires Are Silent.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 5.—The departure from this city last night for the front of the Bulgarian officers of the reserves was the occasion of a great Slav demonstration at the Varsay depot. M. Bashnakoff, editor of the The Official Messenger, who had been deputed by the Slavonic Society to do so, addressed an informal meeting in the Imperial waiting-room, assuring his brother Slavs that Russia would support them for weal or woe.

A Servian priest blessed the departing soldiers and bade them expel the Turks from Europe and reinstate the cross upon the mosque of St. Sophia in Constantinople, which originally was a Christian church, constructed by Constantine the Great. Women brought flowers to the soldiers, and Russian officers carried their Bulgarian comrades to the cars while the crowds cheered and sang the Russian and Bulgarian anthems.

Gen. Soukhomlinoff, the Russian Minister of War, has gone to Poland to watch the progress of mobilization.

Border Traffic Suspended.

Constantinople, Oct. 5.—All passenger and freight traffic has been suspended between Constantinople and Mustapha Pasha, which is sitauted on the Maritza River on the border of eastern Rumelia, and Dedeagh, the terminus of the railroad from Adrianople and Saloniki on the Aegean Sea.

All the horses in Constantinople have been requisitioned by the Government for the army. The Government has ordered the withdrawal of the Turkish troops from the Island of Samos, and the Prince-Governor will also leave the island temporarily. Detachments of Bulgarian troops yesterday penetrated Turkish territory to the northeast of Adrianople.

Wires Are Silent.

London, Oct. 5.—The wires from the near eastern capitals last night were somewhat ominously reticent or altogether silent. A brief despatch announcing that railway traffic had been stopped between Constantinople and Mustapha Pasha and Dodeghatach and confirmation of the news that Bulgarians had crossed the Turkish frontier was practically all the information of a military nature received in London yesterday and shows that the telegraphic censorship is active.

One hopeful sign, however, is the fact that diplomatic relations still remain unbroken and that apparently no ultimatum or a declaration of war has been made. Therefore diplomacy still has time to act in the interests of peace.

At present the European negotiations looking to peace are centred in Paris, but it still seems to be undecided whether action in this direction shall be taken by a concert of the European powers as a whole, or by Austria and Russia as the representatives of Europe. It is believed difficulty is being found in reconciling the views of the situation held by Austria and Russia and although a more hopeful view of averting war prevailed yesterday it is thought that unless the powers act promptly it may be too late to prevent an explosion.

Fleet Goes to Scene.

London, Oct. 5.—The British Mediterranean fleet was ordered yesterday to proceed to the Levant, according to a news agency despatch from Gibraltar. The cruiser Weymouth immediately left at full speed for Suda Bay, on the north coast of Crete.

Many Startling Rumors.

London, Oct. 5.—The Daily Chronicle's Constantinople correspondent says there are rumors in Constantinople that 4,000 Greeks have invaded Turkish territory, that Bulgarian bands are said to be invading Macedonia and committing dynamite outrages, and that Servian bands in Novipazar are committing terrible atrocities. It is also rumored, says the correspondent, that Bulgaria faces famine through the destruction of vast areas of crops by floods.

"It is believed here," continues the correspondent, "that Bulgaria will mark the anniversary of her independence on Saturday by declaring war. If Saturday passes without any irrevocable step being taken, hope will revive of a peaceful issue."

Another Will Die.

Kingston, Oct. 5—The Bay of Quinte Railway wreck of Wednesday last will claim a second life, as Mrs. A. Fahland of Clamb Falls, Wis., badly injured, is dying.

The spreading of rails near Tamworth was the cause of the third wreck on the road inside of thirty hours. Fortunately no person was hurt. As a way freight was coming into Tamworth, two cars loaded with coal, jumped the track while going over a switch, and toppled over.

Once Rector at Kingsville.

London, Oct. 5.—The death is announced of Rev. J. W. Ashman, a Fellow of the Royal Colonial Institute, formerly incumbent of St. John's and Christ Church, Kingsville, Ont.

TAFT EXPLAINS HIS ACTION

London Oct. 5.—In another message through The Times correspondent on the Panama dispute, President Taft explains that his proposal to bring the matter before the Supreme Court was preferable because an adverse decision would be less galling to Americans than an arbitral award and Great Britain would still not lose her legal right to demand arbitration.

In an editorial, The Times considers President Taft's explanation very satisfactory as removing apprehension that an appeal to the Supreme Court was being offered as a substitute for the right of appeal to The Hague, but that it still leaves the whole matter in a confused condition.

TURKEY SETTLES WITH ITALY

Constantinople, Oct. 5.—That the Turkish Cabinet voted on Thursday to accept Italy's latest proposals for peace, was the announcement made yesterday from an authoritative source.

The preliminary agreements are to be signed upon the arrival at Ouchy of a special Turkish emissary, who left Constantinople immediately after the Cabinet meeting Thursday.

Partly Confirmed.

Paris, Oct. 5.—Confirmation of the report from Constantinople that the conclusion of peace between Turkey and Italy is imminent, is contained in a semi-official note issued here yesterday based an authoritative advices from Italy.

Would Ensure Peace.

London, Oct. 5.—The Daily Mail says, editorially: "If peace with Italy were signed the gain to Europe would be immense the Balkan crisis would vanish like a nightmare at the break of day, and the standing temptation to the young and ambitious peoples of the Near East would be removed."

RUSSIANS ON MARCH TO SERVIA

Special to the Review.

LONDON, Oct. 5 —The Belgrade correspondent to The Daily Mail says ten thousand Russian volunteers are proceeding to Servia through Varna and Calatz, and a despatch to The Express from Constantinople declares the Porte has signified its intention of refusing European intervention for settlement of the Balkan question and would regard such proffer as an unfriendly act.

Damages Are Limited.

New York, Oct. 5.—Judge Hough, in the U. S. District Court, yesterday granted the petition of the Oceanic Steam Navigation Co., Ltd., the White Star Line, for the limitation of damages arising from the loss of the Titanic to the sum of $91,805, though already claims had been filed against it in excess of $1,000,000.

Judge Hough directed the Oceanic Steam Navigation Co. to furnish security to the amount of $96,000 for the payment of the pro rata money in connection with the claims in the limitation of liability proceedings. This bond was furnished by the National Security Co.

AERONAUT AND BOY MEET DEATH

Tuscumbia, Ala., Oct. 5—A dangling rope from a balloon caught the leg of Lorenzo Howland, 15 years old, as it ascended, manned by H. C. Petty, who was making his first flight here yesterday. The boy hung on until 500 feet up when both fell to their death with an unopened parachute.

The boy was enmeshed several feet above Petty when the bag righted for its ascent and several hundred spectators heard the novice aeronaut calling to him to slide down a rope to the trapeze. Howland disentangled himself and with the balloon pitching and tossing got down to the trapeze on the parachute. Immediately after he gained a hold on the rod Petty cut loose and the two shot downward.

Anxious friends of the boy had watched his perilous manoeuvres on the side of the balloon expecting momentarily to see him fall from the ropes' end. They took hope for a moment after the parachute left the balloon. But the big parachute never opened and the two occupants were dashed to the ground a shapeless mass. Howland landed on top of Petty and both met instant death.

WESTERN MILLERS GET WHEAT FROM STATES AT 7 CENTS LESS

Defeat of Reciprocity Has Been an Advantage, Says Hon. Robert Rogers, in Speech at Macdonald County, Rather Than a Harm to the Prairie.

Notre Dame de Lourdes, Man., Oct. 5.—Hon. Robert Rogers addressed the electors of Macdonald last night and as it was his first political speech since the last election much interest was felt.

Mr. Rogers denied that western Canada had lost anything by the defeat of reciprocity. On the contrary, he declared that no part of the Dominion profited more by that result of the Federal campaign, as "evidenced by the fact that during the past month Canadian millers have imported millions of bushels of American wheat, for which they paid seven cents a bushel less than they were paying for Canadian wheat, delivered at their mills. Mr. Rogers also cited the the heavy importations of eggs, bacon and ham into Winnipeg wholesalers as fortifying his argument that the western Canada market is the more profitable one. He noted the importation of 100,000 bushels of American oats by Montreal milling interests as another argument.

"What the west is suffering from to-day," said Mr. Rogers, "is the ill-effects of the rotten, dishonest and incompetent policy practiced by the Government of our predecessors against western Canada. They would neither build railroads to take care of transportation nor provide storage facilities to meet conditions, but would handicap the farmer by maintaining on the statute books legislation which prohibited him from borrowing money from the banks on the grain.

"If there was grain lost by rotting in western Canada last year responsibility for that condition," said Mr. Rogers "rested upon the former Premier."

The Minister of the Interior vigorously attacked the record of the Laurier Government in connection with the National Transcontinental Railway. As a result of the overcapitalization of the National Transcontinental, he declared, nothing could be done through this road towards reducing rates, but the Government hoped to afford a large measure of relief through the new Hudson Bay route.

Farewell to Col. Hughes.

London, Oct. 5.—Sir Edward Ward, of the War Office, Sir Robert Perks and several Australian officers and all the Canadian officers remaining here attended Hon. Col. Hughes' departure from Euston Station yesterday. The inevitable photographs were taken of the departing visitor, who was heartily cheered. The rest of the party leave on the 30th. They will continue their enquiries at Aldershot and Woolwich, etc.

No One to Blame.

Kingston, Oct. 5.—A coroner's jury found no one to blame for the fatal railway wreck near here. The roadbed was shown to be in good condition, and alsa the box car that first jumped the track.

MR. J. B. DINGWALL

An active worker in the Brotherhood movement, who is to be heard at Knox church.

DISMISSED MAN SEEKS DAMAGES

North Bay, Oct. 5.—John A. Holliday of Chapleau, former C.P.R. freight conductor, sued the C.P.R. before Judge Clute at Sudbury assizes this week for $5,000 damages for false arrest, malicious prosecution and wrongful dismissal from the company's employ.

A case of whisky stolen from a freight car on Holliday's train, was found in the caboose, and his arrest followed. Holliday was honorably acquitted by Judge Kehoe at the trial which followed, but was dismissed by the railway company from their service. Judge Clute, while expressing his opinion that Holliday was innocent, found that there was no false arrest or malicious prosecution, but found that the plaintiff had been wrongfully dismissed from the railway's service, and reserved judgment as to the amount of damages.

Schooner Ethel Sinks.

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 5.—Word was received here yesterday of the total loss of the schooner Ethel, from New York for Halifax, with a load of hard coal. The schooner sprung a leak while rounding the cape, near Pubnico, and sank. The crew was saved. The vessel was owned by Captain Angus McLeod of this city, who sailed her.

Five to Run in Waterloo.

Berlin, Oct. 5.—There promises to be a lively time in the provincial bye-election in North Waterloo. Ald. C. H. Mills will probably receive the Conservative nomination. The Liberal nomination will be tendered to Dr. J. F. Honsberger, president of the North Waterloo Reform Association. Matthew Wayman of Toronto, organizer for the Socialist party, was selected by that party Thursday night. Ex-Mayor Allen Huber will run as an independent, and Ferdinand Walter, license inspector, consented yesterday to stand as an Independent Conservative.

Killed by Blow From Hammer.

Carlisle, Sask., Oct. 5.—A coroner's jury blames Solomon Rose, storekeeper at Lampman, for the death of W. McLeod, a harvester from Halifax, who was struck on the head with a hammer during a dispute with Rose over a bag of apples. Rose is missing.

West Toronto Accidents.

Toronto, Oct. 5.—Walter Millar, 164 Mulock avenue, had his hand badly crushed in the Watt planing mill, West Toronto, yesterday. After being attended to by Dr. McNamara he was conveyed in an ambulance to his home.

James Cook of Brampton, a married man, 45 years of age, had his left hand crushed while coupling a car at the C.P.R. yards, West Toronto, yesterday morning. He was removed to the Western Hospital.

COL. ROOSEVELT DENIES IMPROPER CAMPAIGN METHODS

Washington, Oct. 5.—Theodore Roosevelt, for seven years president of the United States, and candidate for re-election on the Progressive ticket, occupied a witness chair for three and a half hours yesterday before a Senate investigating committee, defending his administration, himself and his campaign associates against what he termed "infamous charges," and "hearsay evidence."

He appeared before the committee at his own request to answer the statements made in August by John D. Archbold, that the Standard Oil Co. had given $100,000 to the Republican campaign fund in 1904, under the impression that President Roosevelt knew of and approved acceptance of the contribution.

Not only did Col. Roosevelt deny this, but he put into the formal records of the committee a sweeping denial that he had ever solicited funds from anyone while President; that any money which had been received by the 1904 campaign committee with an express or implied promise of favors from the administration; that excessive funds had been used in his 1904 or 1908 campaigns, or that money had ever been improperly used in his behalf so far as he knew.

In reference to the Harriman fund of $240,000, raised in 1904, Col. Roosevelt declared the statements of J. P. Morgan, George R. Sheldon and others had fully corroborated his earlier statements that this fund was raised expressly for the New York State campaign, and [illegible] by him for his own support in the fight for the Republican nomination that year.

Two Are Missing.

Owen Sound, Oct. 5.—On Wednesday morning Jeremiah Cousby, an old and well known resident, accompanied by a young boy named Dodwin Branston set out on a fishing trip out on the bay in a twenty-foot gasoline launch, and they have not been heard of since, with the result that anxiety is felt for their safety.

Yesterday a number of motor boats set out to cover the bay, but returned last night having been unable to discover any trace of the missing couple.

It is feared that the motor went wrong and that the boat being unmanageable was capsized by the stiff breeze that was blowing.

SHE FAINTED WITH THE AGONY

"Fruit-a-tives" Cured Her Kidneys

Miss MAGGIE JANNACK

MOUNTAIN, ONT., DEC. 14th. 1910

"I desire to let the world know the great debt I owe "Fruit-a-tives" which saved my life when I had given up hope of ever being well again.

For six years, I suffered from dreadful Kidney Disease. My legs and lower part of my body were fearfully swollen. The pain in my side and legs would be so bad that I would faint with the agony.

Five different doctors attended me and all said it was Kidney Disease and gave me no hope of getting well.

A kind neighbor visited me and mentioned the case of Mrs. Fenwick who had been cured of a sickness like mine. I took "Fruit-a-tives" and in a short time, I began to feel better—the swelling went down—the pains were easier—and soon I was well.

I have gained over 30 pounds since taking "Fruit-a-tives"—and my friends look upon my recovery as a miracle."

HYDRO VS. SEYMOUER POWER

A correspondent writes in another column his views with regard to the power question as affecting the city. This is what we want—discussion. If our citizens who may hold views on this important matter neglect to express them it may be taken that such neglect shows only indifference. Such is really not the case. The public, as a whole is vitally interested. Nor will it do to assume that the matter is one wholly for the city council to deal with and settle. Vigorous expression of opinion by citizens, both for and against any given proposition is exactly what is required to sift the right from wrong premises.

Our correspondent assumes — and he may be right or wrong—that the city council are going ahead, ignoring any other source of supply of energy for light and power than the Hydro-Electric. It is quite possible that the council—who are our guardians in this thing—are possessed of information that determine that Hydro Power must and will be the best for the city to consider. He also assumes that neither has the council asked, nor the Seymour Power Company submitted any schedule or offer that might be contrasted with the Hydro project.

Would it not be reasonable for the power committee of the council to ascertain from the Seymour Power Co. what it is prepared to do. Such inquiry, or its answer will not commit either side. The local company maintains through its officials that it has not had opportunity. It will, no doubt, continue to assert, and claim sympathy based on such ground. If it has any special plum up its sleeve—so to speak—it is just as well that the fruit be exposed. When contrasted with the Hydro estimates the public will have an opportunity for comparison.

Our correspondent assumes too much when he attempts to prove that nearly all the important powers and power sites are in the hands of the Seymour Co. Several are in such hands. But what we have to keep in mind is this fact, that the sources of power of to-day may not be the sources ten years from now. That the progress in electrical and hydraulic installation of the next decade will bring to service powers now distant and seemingly not attainable. There are dozens of others awaiting development, and some of these will be harnessed to serve the needs of this district.

THE SHAM NAVY

The Examiner's leading article "Belated Jingoism" is founded on the assumption that Sir Wilfrid Laurier's "misconception of Lord Milner's ideas of a Canadian fleet would be allowed to go without correction." Possibly if the Examiner had seen the publication of Lord Milner's correction of Sir Wilfrid's misconception, this article would not have been printed. Sir Wilfrid has now in company with the "Liberal Party" the satisfaction of being absolutely stranded on the navy question without a single British supporter. If as the Examiner attempts to insinuate, the Laurier policy of "When Britain is at war Canada is at war," is the same as Borden's "What's the kickin' about?"

IT COULDN'T BE DONE.

Somebody said that it couldn't be done.
But he with a chuckle replied,
That "maybe it couldn't," but he would be one
Who wouldn't say so till he's tried.
So he buckled right in with the trace of a grin
On his face. If he worried he hid it;
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done—and he did it!

Somebody scoffed: "Oh you'll never do that—
At least, no one ever has done it";
But he took off his coat and he took off his hat,
And the first thing we knew, he'd begun it.
With a lilt of his chin and a bit of a grin,
Without any doubting or quiddit,
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done—and he did it!

There are thousands to tell you it cannot be done;
There are thousands to prophesy failure;
There are thousands to point out to you one by one,
The dangers that wait to assail you.
But just buckle in with a bit of a grin,
Then take off your coat and go to it;
Just start into sing as you tackle the thing
That "cannot be done"—and you'll do it.

DRINK AND DRUDGE.

"I drink to make me work," said the fast boy, as he drained the fiery cup. An old man replied: "That's right, then; drink, and it will make you work! Harken to me a moment, and I'll tell thee an incident that will do thee good. I was once a prosperous farmer. I had a good, loving wife and two fine lads as ever the sun shone on. We had a comfortable home and lived happily together. But we used to drink ale to make us work. Those two lads I have in drunkards' graves. My wife died broken-hearted, and she lies by her two sons. I am now seventy-two years of age. Had it not been for drink, I might now be an independent gentleman; but I used to drink to make me work, and mark, it makes me work now. At seventy years of age I am obliged to work for my daily bread. Drink! drink! and it will make you work!"

INSANITY AND DRINK.

Dr. L. S. Forbes Winslow, M. B., M.R.C.P., LL.D., says:—

"The world is rapidly going mad. Civilization is on the road to perdition. Cases such as Barming Asylum are signposts to a deliberately blind generation. I can only hope that they may awaken the national conscience to some sense of the nation's awful peril. To-day there is one certified lunatic in every 269 of our population, and if the increase in lunacy continues at the same rate as it has done for the past fifty years, there will be one lunatic in every four of the population by A.D. 2159. One quarter of the world will be mad. I have no patience with those who ascribe this terrible condition of affairs to increased competition, and the wear-and-tear of modern life. They will go on saying so for centuries. If there is but one sane man left in the world of lunatics, he will be muttering the same absurd excuse. No. It is mere shelving of responsibility, and the true causes of insanity are the vices, not the worries of civilization. I should put the causes of insanity in the following order:—

1.—Drink.
Cigarette-smoking.
3.—Heredity.

And until the drink question has been properly dealt with and the marriage laws revised, the nation will continue to go from bad to worse."

Causes Digestive Weakness and Poisons the Entire System.

"No one can have suffered more than I did with stomach trouble," writes Phil. E. Pascalar, well known at St. Andrews Corners. "My doctor told me my indigestion and sleeplessness were due to poisons in the blood. Certainly my condition was desperate, and it seemed from the despondent feelings that swept over me that I would lose my reason. I happened to read about Dr. Hamilton's Pills and bought five boxes from the druggist. Such body-cleansing pills I never used; they were mild and yet quite strong enough to drive all the humors out of the blood. My stomach gained strength rapidly with Dr. Hamilton's Pills and I improved so much that in eight weeks I could eat and digest all ordinary food. Depression and weariness passed away and I am, thanks to Dr. Hamilton's Pills, enjoying robust good health."

Hamilton Hospital Asks City to Pay Dormer Account

Among the accounts before the Finance Committee, at a meeting yesterday afternoon, was one of $12.75 for removing dead cats from points about the city. "It comes in every two months," remarked Ald. Duncan. "You might say its regular."

THE DORMER CASE.

A communication was received from the medical superintendent of the Hamilton Hospital, stating that the city would be responsible for the account of Isaac Dormer, of Peterborough who was confined in the hospital as a result of injuries received during an assault upon him.

It was explained that Dormer had been away from Peterborough for three years, and it was decided that the city should not shoulder the responsibility for payment.

No action was taken on the application of Mr. Parrent, who asks permission to erect a sales stand at the street corner.

It was suggested that the City Commissioners might consent to the man having his stand at the market arcade. It is not the wish of the committee to have these stands at the corners. Should permission be granted in one case there might be other applications.

HAD RHEUMATISM IN ALL MY BONES

"Sometimes I Could Hardly Walk!" 2 Boxes of Gin Pills Cured Me

I SUFFERED from Kidney Trouble for five long years. I also had Rheumatism in all my bones and muscles—could not sleep at night—and sometimes could hardly walk. I was treated by some of our best physicians but without relief. I lost over fifteen pounds, was very weak, and friends, who had not seen me for some time, were astonished. One day, I met one of our leading hotel keepers, who had been cured by Gin Pills, and he advised me to try them, so I bought two boxes at my druggist's.

Before I had used one box, I felt a big change for the better, and before the second box was gone, I was completely cured.

I assure you I can hardly believe it for if I had known what I know now about Gin Pills, I would not have spent over one hundred dollars for nothing, when two boxes of Gin Pills cured me.

Anyone suffering from Kidney Trouble or Rheumatism, should never be without Gin Pills. EUGENE QUESNEL.

Chief City Circulation Agent,
"La Patrie" Montreal.

Drive your old enemy out of your system. Be free of pain. Be able to walk and work and enjoy life. Away with pain in the back, Rheumatism, and Kidney Troubles. Take Gin Pills. A few boxes now, will mean ease and comfort for the rest of the year.

Adventure

A Romance of The South Seas

BY JACK LONDON

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith
Copyright, 1911, by the Macmillan Company

"If you are really bent upon going"— Sheldon began.

"That's settled long ago," she answered shortly. "I'm going to pack now."

An hour later the three men had shaken hands with Joan down on the beach. She gave the signal, and the boat shoved off, six men at the oars, the seventh man forard and Adamu Adam at the steering sweep. Joan was standing up in the stern sheets reiterating her goodbys, a slim figure of a woman in the tight fitting jacket she had worn ashore from the wreck, the long barreled Colt's revolver hanging from the loose belt around her waist, her clear cut face like a boy's under the Stetson hat that failed to conceal the heavy masses of hair beneath.

"You'd better get into shelter," she called to them. "There's a big squall coming, and I hope you've got plenty of chain out, Captain Young. Goodby! Goodby, everybody!"

Her last words came out of the darkness, which wrapped itself solidly about the boat. Yet they continued to stare into the blackness in the direction in which the boat had disappeared, listening to the steady click of the oars in the rowlocks until it faded away and ceased.

"She is only a girl," Christian Young said with slow solemnity. The discovery seemed to have been made on the spur of the moment. "She is only a girl," he repeated with greater solemnity.

"A dashed pretty one and a good traveler," Tudor laughed. "She certainly has spunk, eh, Sheldon?"

"Yes, she is brave," was the reluctant answer, for Sheldon did not feel disposed to talk about her.

They gained the veranda, where they sat in silence over their whisky, each man staring straight out to sea, where the wildly swinging riding light of the Minerva could be seen in the lulls of the driving rain.

An hour later Christian Young stood up, knocked out his pipe and prepared to go aboard and get under way.

"She's all right," he said, apropos of nothing spoken and yet distinctly relevant to what was in each of their minds. "She's got a good boat's crew, and she's a sailor herself. With this favoring bit of breeze she has sail on already, and she'll make Guvutu by daylight. Good night."

"I guess I'll turn in, old man," Tudor said, rising and placing his glass on the table. "I'll start the first thing in the morning. It's been disgraceful the way I've been hanging on here. Good night."

Sheldon, sitting on alone, wondered if the other man would have decided to pull out in the morning had Joan not sailed away. Well, there was one bit of consolation in it—Joan had certainly lingered at Berande for no man, not even Tudor. It was not very flattering, but what could any man count in her eyes when a schooner waiting to be bought in Sydney was in the wind? What a creature! What a creature!

Berande was a lonely place to Sheldon in the days that followed. In the morning after Joan's departure he had seen Tudor's expedition off on its way up the Balesuna, in the late afternoon through his telescope he had seen the smoke of the Upolu that was bearing Joan away to Sydney, and in the evening he found himself standing staring at the nail upon which from the first she had hung her Stetson hat and her revolver belt.

Why should he care for her? he demanded of himself angrily. Never had he encountered one who had so thoroughly irritated him, rasped his feelings, smashed his conventions and violated nearly every attribute of what had been his ideal of woman. But he loved her. That was the point of it all, and he did not try to evade it. He was not sorry that it was so. He loved her. That was the overwhelming, astounding fact.

Once again he discovered a big enthusiasm for Berande. It must succeed not merely because Joan was a partner in it, but because he wanted to make that partnership permanently binding. Three more years and the plantation would be a splendid paying investment. They could then take yearly trips to Australia and oftener, and an occasional run home to England—or Hawaii—would come as a matter of course.

He undertook more clearing of bush, and clearing and planting went on under his personal supervision at a faster pace than ever before. He experimented with premiums for extra work performed by the black boys and yearned continually for more of them to put to work. Blacks he must have, and if Joan were fortunate in getting a schooner three months at least must elapse before the first recruits could be landed on Berande.

CHAPTER XV.

NEWS OF JOAN.

A WEEK after the Upolu's departure the Malakula dropped anchor, and her skipper came ashore for a game of billiards and to shock Sheldon with the little surprise born of information he was bringing with him.

Captain Auckland played the billiards first, and it was not until he was comfortably seated in a steamer chair, his second whisky securely in his hand, that he let off his bomb.

"A great piece that Miss Lackland of yours," he chuckled. "Claims to be a part owner of Berande. Says she's your partner. Is that straight?"

Sheldon nodded coldly.

"You don't say? That is a surprise! Well, she hasn't convinced Guvutu or Tulagi of it. They're pretty used to irregular things over there, but—ha! ha!"

"There is nothing irregular about it. It is an ordinary business transaction." Sheldon strove to act as though such transactions were quite the commonplace thing on plantations in the Solomons. "She invested something like £1,500 in Berande"—

"So she said."

"And she has gone to Sydney on business for the plantation."

"Oh, no, she hasn't."

"But didn't the Upolu sail?"

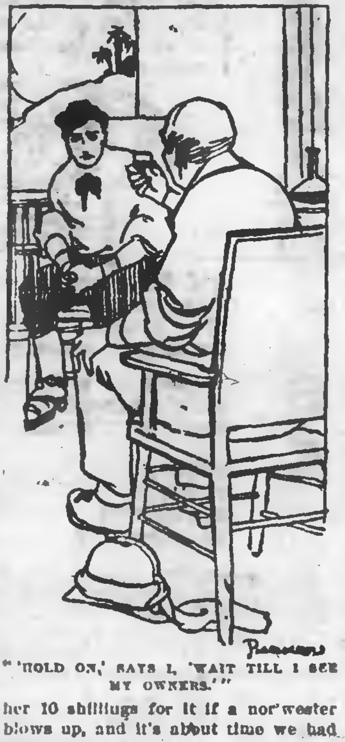
"The Upolu sailed all right." Captain Auckland sipped his whisky with provoking slowness, "only Miss Lackland wasn't a passenger."

"Then where is she?"

"At Guvutu last I saw of her. She was going to Sydney to buy a schooner, wasn't she?"

"Yes, yes."

"That's what she said. Well, she's bought one, though I wouldn't give her 10 shillings for it if a nor'wester blows up, and it's about time we had one."



"'HOLD ON,' SAYS I, 'WAIT TILL I SEE MY OWNERS.'"

"What schooner? Where is it? How did she happen to buy it?"

"First, the schooner Martha," the skipper answered, checking his replies off on his fingers; "second, the Martha is on the outside reef at Poonga-Poonga, looted clean of everything portable and ready to go to pieces with the first bit of lively sea, and, third, Miss Lackland bought her at auction. She was knocked down to her for 55 quid by the third assistant resident commissioner. I ought to know. I bid 50 myself for Morgan and Raff. My word, weren't they hot!

MOTHER OF LARGE FAMILY

Tells How She Keeps Her Health — Happiness For Those Who Take Her Advice.

Scottville, Mich.—"I want to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash have done me. I live on a farm and have worked very hard. I am forty-five years old, and am the mother of thirteen children. Many people think it strange that I am not broken down with hard work and the care of my family, but I tell them of my good friend, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and that there will be no backache and bearing down pains for them if they will take it as I have. I am scarcely ever without it in the house.

"I will say also that I think there is no better medicine to be found for young girls. My eldest daughter has taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for painful periods and irregularity, and it has helped her.

"I am always ready and willing to speak a good word for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I tell every one I meet that I owe my health and happiness to your wonderful medicine." —Mrs. J. G. JOHNSON, Scottville, Mich., R.F.D. 3.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy for woman's ills known.

"IT IS I, BE NOT AFRAID."

—Mark 6:45-56.—October 6.—

Text:—"Straightway Jesus spake unto them, saying, be of good cheer, it is I; be not afraid."—Matt. 14:27.

TO-DAY'S STUDY shows us how interested people become in anything that will relieve them of sickness and ailments, which cause our race to be, as St. Paul described it, "a groaning creation." The crowds continued to gather wherever Jesus went, partly for hearing, partly for curiosity, and partly because the Message that He gave was one of consolation, comfort, hope. He was not forever blaming them for not keeping the Law; He was continually expressing sympathy for their weaknesses and encouraging them to "go and sin no more."

After feeding the five thousand, Jesus urged His disciples to return to the other side of the Lake. He dismissed the multitude and went into the solitude of the hills for prayer. It is noteworthy that nearly all of the Great Teacher's prayers are brief. Whenever He wished to make long prayers He went to the Father by Himself. Undoubtedly this would be a good example for all of His followers. Long prayers are frequently a weariness to the flesh, and are likely to contain many vain repetitions, or to be attempts to instruct the Lord concerning matters which He understands much better than do His children.

"It is I, be not afraid."

The disciples experienced contrary winds and found the rowing toilsome. In the night they saw what they supposed to be a spirit manifestation in human form walking on the water near their boat. They cried out, for all saw it and felt troubled. Then they heard a voice saying, "It is I, be not afraid." Jesus got into the boat with them, and the wind ceased, to their amazement, for they had already forgotten the lesson of the feeding of the 5,000 with the 5 loaves and 2 fishes.

In addition to seeing in this a further manifestation of Divine power operating through the Redeemer, we may see a spiritual lesson. No doubt, after the Master's ascension the disciples felt themselves alone in the midst of a contrary people, and found progress difficult. This helped them to look back to this occasion and to remember the Master's ability to come to them on the troubled seas, and how His coming brought peace.

He had instructed them, "I will never leave nor forsake you"; and again, "Lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the Age." And this precious lesson still holds good for all who are truly the Lord's people—all who have presented their bodies living sacrifices through the merit of Jesus. He is with them continually, to sanctify to them their deepest distress.

"Lord, Save, or I Perish!"

St. Matthew gives an additional feature of this lesson not recorded by St. Mark. He tells us that when St. Peter learned that it was Jesus who walked upon the sea, he requested the Lord to sanction his walking on the water to Him. The Lord consented, and St. Peter had the courage to make the effort. Had his faith continued, doubtless he would have been sustained, but the Lord's rule with His people seems to be "According to thy faith be it unto thee." We are not to encourage credulity in ourselves or others, but we are to remember that faith is very precious in the Lord's sight.

In St. Peter's case it was entirely proper that he should attempt to go to the Lord, because the effort had been sanctioned. But when he saw the boisterous waves his faith failed, and then it was that he cried, "Save, or I perish!" How true it is of all God's people that like St. Peter they would like to do some wonderful thing to show their faith in the Lord! And how like St. Peter's are their experiences often! They would utterly fail did not the Lord interpose for their rescue. However, as the Lord found no fault with St. Peter for his effort, we are bound to admire the degree of faith and courage which he manifested.

The heavenly inheritance.

St. Peter the Teachable.

Much has been said respecting St. Peter's rashness. The criticism is to some extent justified, but the Master loved him greatly on account of his zeal and energy. Although he was the oldest of the Apostles he was evidently one of the most teachable of them. Of his mistakes he made a mirror, and thus, learning to know himself, he was safeguarded through the many dangers natural to his temperament; and he stands forth in the Scriptures as one of the noblest of the Apostles.

There must have been a strain continually upon the Great Teacher and Healer, for He was continually expending His vitality. In healing the sick, virtue, or vitality, went out from Him, and all His public teaching cost vitality, especially when He addressed multitudes. Thus was fulfilled in part the saying of the Prophet respecting Him, "Himself took our sickness and bore our infirmities."

"A Few Days" Too Indefinite For the Board of Works

IT'S THE POLES

Ratepayers Make Complaints and Ask for a Remedy

Routine business occupied the attention of the Board of Works last night.

Mr. F. Ferguson, of East City, complained of the creek crossing Concession street, backing up on his property.

He has done some work in an endeavor to prevent the trouble. He suggested the course of the creek being changed, and on motion the City Engineer was asked for a report.

ROCKY ROADS.

"Its really in such a condition that you can't drive over it," said Ald. Gillespie in speaking of the condition of a section of Concession street where sewer operations were in progress.

The attention of the engineer was called to this matter.

The Bell Telephone Company asked for permission to erect more poles on Sherbrooke and Donegal streets and received the same.

MORE COMPLAINTS.

Charles Nixon complained of damage from surplus water from a creek at the Boundary road, between Sherbrooke and Bolivar streets. The engineer will report.

Regarding a ditch on Concession street near the C.P.R. tracks, which brings a complaint from Mr. Beattie, the engineer reported.

"Fill the ditch up and make a proper job of it," suggested Ald. Duffus.

To make a good job it was decided to allow the work to remain over till next years. Other ratepayers including Mr. Courtney, who have a similar grievance, will their receive consideration.

An account from the Fire, Water and Light Committee, read $29.50.

"We've got to remit him a horse, and that will balance the account," jocularly remarked the chairman.

The account was laid over.

THOSE POLES.

Mr. W. J. Duckworth wrote that in "a few days" he would take up the question of the removal of poles.

The secretary will answer the letter advising more haste.

INTERESTING REMINISCENCES OF THE SALVATION ARMY

Mr. Harry Edmondson With a Concertina Constituted the First Band—Mr. George Stevens Was First Band Leader—Meetings Were Often Disturbed by Rowdies, and Women Were Once Placed in Jail.

Everyone knows what an efficient organization the Salvation Army is in Peterborough and of the wonderful work which they are accomplishing by their energy and religious zeal. But not every one is familiar with the uphill climb that the Army, and particularly the Army band had to make before they were established upon their present solid foundation.

28 YEARS AGO

It is twenty-eight years since they formed a brigade in the city, and they had a tough fight and a hard row to hoe before they were publicly recognized as a factor for good in the community. In its infant stage it was openly persecuted and old-timers, such as Mark Spencely, Harry Edmondson, and T. A. Redner, can narrate many a story of hard bumps and obstacles experienced in their early days as Salvation Army pioneers.

The local brigade came into existence shortly after the exit of the religious society known as the Saved Army.

THE CONCERTINA FIRST

The first musical instrument that formed the nucleus of the Salvation Army band of to-day, was a humble concertina. Upon Mr. Harry Edmondson rests the signal honor of being the first bandsman, as he handled the old-fashioned instrument from Sunday to Sunday in the early Army meetings. The brigade in those days was mostly commanded by women officers, until it grew in strength and proportions requiring the services of male leaders.

It was not long however, before other amateur musicians fell into line. An old soldier named Yorke, blew a cornet. Ed. Peyton, T. A. Redner, Thomas Scott, Mark Spencely and George Stevens came along, the latter being appointed bandmaster by virtue presumably of superior musical ability as director. Time passed and others came in, and practices were held in an old rough cast house on Simcoe street where the Salvation Army Temple now stands.

CHARGED TEN CENTS

George Stevens, held the leader's position for two years and by that time the band had grown so skilful that the services of Finch Miller were enlisted as director. Practices were held once a week in the old house and a tax of ten cents a per head was levied for each lesson of instruction. Their practice quarters in time were torn down and a room was then secured over Holmes hide and junk shop, where Adams Hall's factory now does business. This room was used until the strong odors of the hide shop underneath became so pronounced that they were induced to vacate the premises. When Mr. Miller resigned command of the band, a young convert named Pennington succeeded him and taught them at ten cents a head per lesson. About this time, George Stevens, donated two very fine and valuable instruments to the band, one a big bass horn bought in England, the customs duties on it being $120, and another smaller bass horn costing $30 for Mr. Harry Edmondson.

One amusing incident is recalled, which happened while the band was still very inexperienced and liable to produced discords quite often. The band on this occasion was playing particularly bad, and "bum" notes were the order of the day. The adjutant was performing on a cornet with Mr. Edmondson. The two instruments seemed to be striving to out-do each other. Finally the adjutant strode back to Mr. Edmondson and said:

"Harry you do the tooting in this piece and let me do the playing."

This plan was tried. The officer played the leading part and Mr. Edmondson filled in and harmony was in a measure restored.

WORE RED BAND.

In those days the Army band or the Army itself had no uniforms. They were distinguished only by a red band on their caps.

A little incident about veteran Mark Spencely is also recalled.

MR. SPENCELY'S HORN.

Mark had an old horn which had a hole in the bottom. He always kept this hole stuffed with soap. Often, however, the soap would blow out during the playing of some selection, producing an awful discord.

The first brigade meetings were held in the old Baptist church on Aylmer street, now used by the Christian Scientists. This old buildnig was the scene of the regeneration of many an idle dissolute life, and the reclamation of scores of drunkards to a life of sobriety.

When Mark Spencely went to the barracks one night it was for the express purpose of raising a shindy. Mark used to kick up make mischief and toss pieces of plaster at the speakers. But on the night in question the spirit of God took possession of his soul and he walked over the seats and up to the platform where he kneeled and became a follower of Christ. Many similar cases of salvation are recorded in the old building.

At first the church was crammed with curious folks, who came to see what the procedure was more than anything else. The Army at that time was not so generally recognised as it is now, and outcasts and rowdies often penetrated the building to create disturbances.

WERE JAILED ONCE

On the streets during the open air meetings they were jibed and laughed at, but persistence won out. On one occasion the leaders of the band two women, were placed up in the jail for refusing to desist in singing on the street.

There are scores and scores of anecdotes and little stories which could be recalled, did space permit, all speaking volumes for the energy and ambition of the Army, which has enabled it to surmount all obstacles until they are established upon their present enviable plane.

JUDGE HELD ACCIDENT MIGHT HAVE BEEN AVOIDED

Judgment in Favor of the City, in Action Brought by Campbell Milling Co., Their Truck Having Been Damaged Evidence of Careless Driving.

The action of the Campbell Milling Company against the City of Peterborough was dismissed with costs by His Honor Judge Huycke yesterday afternoon. The action was one brought by the Company against the Corporation claiming $60 for damages to their truck.

On the morning of April 5th, Driver McLaren of the Campbell Milling Company with an assistant named Gray were driving south on George street. On the Saturday previous the mud on the south section of George street was [illegible] from the streets, and left in [illegible] eight inches high by three or four feet in area, midway between the street car tracks and the sidewalk, leaving a space of at least eight feet between the street car tracks and the soft piles of wet mud.

CARELESS DRIVING.

It was shown in the evidence that McLaren was driving carelessly, holding the lines in a very loose manner and talking to his companion Gray. As he approached a street car going south, one of the horses not being under control swerved to the west and the truck came into collision with the street car with the resulting damage to the truck and to Gray, who was thrown off; McLaren escaping unhurt.

The evidence of the motorman, Morris Meade and John H. Spence, the conductor, and Oscar Matchett, proved conclusively that McLaren could have avoided the accident by proper handling of his horses. The evidence of the city engineer, the street inspector, together with other evidence also proved that the heaps of wet mud could not have caused the accident and were not an obstruction in their condition to horses or teams. It is necessary after the mud is scraped from the street to leave the heaps saturated with water for whatever time necessary to allow them to dry out before removal.

His Honor Judge Huycke found that the mud had not been left there for an unreasonable period and that the accident might have been avoided and accordingly he dismissed the action with costs.

F. D. Kerr appeared for the plaintiff and Louis M. Hayes, K.C., acted for the city.

Facts About McClary's "Sunshine" Furnace

—The Understudy of the Sun—

The Fire-pot of the "Sunshine" is made of Semi-Steel—that of the ordinary furnace is made of Grey Iron. Here's the difference — Destructive sulphur fumes penetrate Grey Iron easily because it is porous. Semi-steel is not porous—it is a close-grained material with a smooth surface secretly processed by McClary's. Gas fumes cannot penetrate Semi-Steel therefore it lasts longer. The "Sunshine" Fire-pot is built in two sections joined together with our famous cup joint. The shape of this joint, combined with a layer of McClary's asbestos cement, makes it absolutely gas, smoke and dust-proof.

Clearly, the "Sunshine" is the premier furnace as far as the Fire-pot is concerned.

The Grates of the "Sunshine" Furnace have three sides each. Plainly, they have three times the endurance of one-sided grates. Every time you rock down the ashes of the "Sunshine" you can expose a fresh side of the grate to the fierce heat of the fire—lengthen the life of the grates.

And the short, strong teeth of "Sunshine" grates simply grind up clinkers. The "Sunshine" Furnace is the best as far as grate construction goes.

Shaking an ordinary furnace is hard, back-breaking labor. You don't need to shake the "Sunshine"—you simply rock it and the ashes drop into the ash-pan. A child can easily rock the grates of a "Sunshine" — merely another reason why you should buy a "Sunshine" Furnace.

Ordinary furnaces are called coal gluttons. There may be good reasons for that—we don't know. But—we have built the "Sunshine" Furnace so that it is very easy on coal. Hundreds of people now using the "Sunshine," and having used ordinary furnaces, declare that the "Sunshine" makes two tons of coal do the work of three. Evidently, the "Sunshine" Furnace saves coal and money.

The ordinary furnace has a water-pan hidden somewhere about the base. There, it cannot carry out the purpose for which the water-pan was devised. The water-pan of the "Sunshine" Furnace is placed scientifically above the radiator near the dome—the heat laps up the water, before being diffused all over the house. It contains the same amount of moisture as the air of a balmy June day. Plainly, as far as the water-pan is concerned, the "Sunshine" is the furnace you should buy.

There are many more reasons why you should invest your money in "The Understudy of the Sun"—McClary's "Sunshine" Furnace. Call on the McClary agent and ask him to show you all the mechanical reasons and exclusive devices which go to make the "Sunshine" the best and therefore the cheapest furnace you can buy. Write us at our nearest address if you cannot get in touch with him.

THEATRICAL

The Light Eternal

The Light Eternal at the Grand last night is one of the most powerful spectacular plays that has been to Peterborough for some time and was greatly appreciated by a large audience, which time upon time, was thrilled through and through by the realistic scenes. The story of the play is calculated to please all with its splendid lesson of the great trials and hardships the early Christians had to combat with.

This play will be enjoyed by theatre-goers and may be seen at the Grand to-night.

It is folly to suppose that all things come to those who wait for something to turn up.

POWER QUESTION

Light and Power Company would be completely shut off from distributing power in competition with the city council's new pet scheme. This power from Auburn would have to find a market and that market is right in the very hands of the Seymour Power Company who already have a transmission line built from Peterborough to tap its line that connects with its lake front trunk Power line thereby giving them ample apportunity to supply power to the lake front towns from the power developed right in our own city.

Under these circumstances therefore and as a direct consequense of the City Council's short sighted power scheme there would be no surplus power left in Peterborough to attract new industries. But what would be the result to Peterborough if the City Council were to negotiate a fair and reasonable agreement with the Seymour Power Company? Dams Numbers four and five could be immediately developed under one head and produce its maximum amount of power. A new transmission line could be built by the Seymour Power Company between Campbellford, Healey's Falls and Peterborough. This city then would be in direct touch with all the Power development upon the Trent waterway and could offer to incoming manufacturers not one thousand horse power but ten thousand horse power or more if industry required it.

It is a well known fact that many of our factories have to close down or partially close down at short intervals because of low water, anchor ice, sleet storms, and lightning storms. But these evils could be avoided or greatly mitigated by having this city connected up with the circulating transmission lines of the Seymour Power Company. Anchor ice and lightning storms might seriously affect one or two power plants but it could not paralyze at the same time one tenth of the whole system. If the Hydro-Electric Power Commission were to take over all the water powers on the Trent Canal system between the mouth of the Severn River and the mouth of the Trent River and spend nine or ten million dollars in power development and transmission lines then there might be some merit in the City Council's scheme because all the accumulated advantages that the Seymour Power Company offer could then be acquired from the Hydro-Electric Commission. Any power scheme that falls short of that and especially the one-horse power scheme of the city council is merely the dream of incompetents. Such being the serious situation in the power development of this city is it not important that our city council should open up negotiations immediately with the Seymour Power Company with a view of ascertaining the very best proposition that the Company is prepared to offer for a constant and continuous supply of power at fair and reasonable and permanent rates.

Would it not be better for the city council to co-operate with the Seymour Power Company which has unlimited money behind it for any feasible scheme of development. Would it not be better for the City council to co-operate with the Seymour Power Company in order to obtain suburban extensions to the street railway system with a view of enabling the farmers in the surrounding district to more cheaply market poultry, eggs, butter and garden products and thereby make Peterborough more attractive as a cheaper place in which the working man may live.

Instead of promoting a useless scheme could not the city council better spend its time in making representations to the C.P.R. to have its seaboard line from Port McNichol pass through Peterborough on its way to the Atlantic Coast. Representations might also be made to the Canadian Northern Railway, to have its seaboard line pass through this city as well and thereby offset some of the advantages that the cities and towns on the lake front have acquired over Peterborough.

HANDSOME BASS HORN IS ADDED TO S. A. TEMPLE BAND

An interesting event will take place at the Salvation Army Temple to-morrow afternoon, when one of the city aldermen will present to the band, a handsome brass horn, the purchase of which was made possible by the grant of $201 from the City, for the summer series of concerts in Victoria Park.

This instrument is a Monster Base double B, of Besson model, triple silver plated, satin finish, with burnished bell and tips and has a weight in the neighborhood of thirty pounds. The cost was $205, and the instrument was secured from the Salvation Army Instrument department. Passersby have greatly admired the horn, during it's exhibition, in the window of Barrie's Limited, this week. It will be played by Bandsman Grey. A similar instrument is used by Bandsman Richardson.

The band now numbers forty. New members are Bandsmen Ayling of Woodstock, where he was bandmaster and Bandsmen Sudgeon of the Staff Band, Chicago, both solo cornetists.

Dynamite Lacked Strength.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 5.—"The strongest stuff ever invented" was the way Herbert S. Hockin referred to nitro-glycerine when he bought it to carry on a conspiracy, according to the charges presented yesterday at the trial of the accused "dynamite plotters."

It was after dynamite was found to be not "strong" enough, according to District Attorney Charles W. Miller, that the defendants in December, 1909, decided to use nitro-glycerine. The details, as charged by Mr. Miller were:

Ortie E. McManigal had been blowing up non-union jobs with dynamite, and was in Chicago. In response to a telegram from Hockin he went to Indianapolis. "We have decided to use nitro," said Hockin, "and we're going down to Muncie to get a supply."

"That's pretty dangerous stuff," said McManigal.

"Yes, it's the strongest stuff ever invented." They went to Muncie, where they met J. B. McNamara.

Hadley to Back Taft.

Jefferson City, Mo., Oct. 5.—Governor Herbert S. Hadley, who was one of Roosevelt's ablest lieutenants up to the time of the Chicago convention, at a Republican rally Thursday night, said he had received assurances that President Taft would support the reforms Hadley outlined Sept. 29 in St. Louis, and declared he would support the Republican ticket.

A few days ago, when Roosevelt was in Missouri, he expressed his confidence of retaining Hadley's support.

Duncan's Defence In.

Toronto, Oct. 5.—M. K. Cowan, K.C., counsel for Inspector of Detectives Walter Duncan, had a strong defence prepared for his client when the police commissioners met for the third time to investigate the affairs of the Toronto Detective Department. Many prominent men were called by the attorney, including lawyers, doctors and others.

Only one witness was called by the commissioners, and that was Joseph Rogers of the provincial police. Col. Denison, as at former sittings, did all the cross-examining. Mr. Duncan again testified that an attempt had been made to bribe him so that the statement made by Travers in No. 2 police station could be seen. He also knew that the stenographer had been approached with a money offer. The inspector wanted the commissioners to get this statement out of his desk and read it. They would then see that not a line of its contents had ever been published by any paper.

An adjournment was taken sine die to allow some more evidence for the defence to be put in.

A [illegible] accident occurred at the G.T.R. station at Simcoe yesterday, when Gordon Benn, 15 years old, the son of Silas Benn, of Courtland, was instantly killed by a freight train.

Arthur Babcock, a Hydro-electric lineman, fell from a pole at Galt yesterday morning, a height of 30 feet, and landed on his side, partly on the sidewalk. He escaped serious injury.

COSME HAMILTON
Author of "The Blindness of Virtue"

The announcement of the forthcoming appearance of "The Blindness of Virtue," by the original Little Theatre, London cast at the Grand on Thursday next, Oct 10, has given rise to a great deal of discussion from home and women's club circles in this city.

The play which is by Como Hamilton, is said to deal with a question that is of vital importance in every home, presenting, it is said, a strong indictment against the fashion of permitting children to grow up in ignorance of certain impulses.

When the first production of the drama was contemplated in London, the play censor forbade its appearance until the press and public spirited and right-minded citizens demanded that it be shown.

Mr. Hamilton, it is said has handled the subject in a strong and impressive manner and based an entertaining, clever play on the theme and in such a manner as not to shock the most refined sensibilities. It is expected that the women's organizations will make a special endeavor to attend the performance when it is given here.

Address: THE COOK MEDICINE CO., TORONTO, ONT. (formerly Windsor)

The annual Field Day of the Collegiate Institute was held at Riverside Park yesterday afternoon, under perfect weather conditions and was an undoubted success. There was a large attendance of students, many of the fair sex filling the grand stand besides a goodly number of citizens interested in sports.

Too much cannot be said about the splendid way in which the officials carried out the events without any waits between events, keeping the crowd interested all the time.

One feature, greatly appreciated by the younger generation, was the distribution of two barrels of St. Lawrence apples, the gift of Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P. As soon as it was known that free apples were being given away, all the small boys, and many large ones, made a "bee line" for the centre of attraction, the result being two empty barrels, munching jaws and bulging pockets. Of course the girls had their share.

The following are the results of the events:

SENIOR.

100 Yards—H. F. Hill won, making a new record of 10 4-5 seconds; Roy Smith second, and M. Huycke, third.

A DISPUTE OVER MONEY

The Parties Were Charles Kovaleski and Patrick Tobin

Magistrate Imposes Fine of $7.60 in Charge of Assault

A native of Poland, bearing the name of Chas. Kovaleski, was charged in police court this morning with assaulting an Irishman named Patrick Tobin. The two men are brothers-in-law, as Tobin married a sister of Kovaleski. The Pole borrowed one hundred dollars in order to bring Tobin and his family out to this country, on the understanding that his brother-in-law would reimburse him as fast as possible. But the latter so far has only come across with $21 of the debt of honor. It was pretty hard for a man with three children to pay $100, and keep things going, was his excuse.

BILL FOR RENT.

Tobin was also a tenant of one of his brother-in-law's houses, but ran up a big bill of rent, finally deciding to evacuate the premises. He went back two or three nights later, to secure some old stovepipes left in the shed. It being very dark, Kovaleski, who resides in a house on the same lot, mistook him for someone trying to steal his chickens, and, not knowing it was his brother-in-law, chased him off the premises with a stick, inflicting some injuries on Tobin's wrist, which he presented for the inspection of the Magistrate, all bandaged up. There had previously been bad feeling between the two families over money matters.

Magistrate Dumble found Kovaleski guilty of assault and fined him $7.60, including costs.

Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C., appeared for the defendant.

Shaughnessy Says Request Was For Different Increase

President of the C.P.R. Explains That the New Stock Voted by the Shareholders and the Application at Ottawa Refer to Entirely Separate Affairs — Ottawa Men Say C.P.R. Had Power Ever Since 1892.

Montreal Oct. 5.—The $60,000,000 of new stock authorized by the C.P.R. shareholders on Wednesday has nothing to do with the application recently made to the Parliament for power to issue an unstated amount. Sir Thomas Shaughnessy made this plain yesterday when he said:

"The increased capitalization we have applied to Parliament for must stand on its own bottom. It has nothing whatever to do with the $60,000,000 the shareholders authorized us to issue on Wednesday. For the increased capitalization we have applied to the Government, the future needs of the Canadian Pacific will have to determine."

The application to Ottawa, Sir Thomas stated, was not for $100,000,000, as generally believed, but for another figure, which the Canadian Pacific president did not feel at liberty to disclose at the present time, owing to the fact that it had not yet come before the Canadian Parliament.

In All the Bills.

Ottawa, Oct. 5.—The action of the C.P.R. in issuing $60,000,000 of increased stock under the authority of an act passed away back in 1892, has brought to light the somewhat remarkable fact that since that date there has been incorporated in every subsequent bill to authorize the construction by the company of branch lines, provisions, or clauses, similar to those under which the company is now issuing its additional capital stock in lieu of debenture bonds.

It is now pointed out by legal men that although the power of the C.P.R. to issue capital stock in lieu of the ninety millions of debenture bonds specified in the act of 1892, is exhausted there remains the possibility of a right on their part to issue without the sanction of the Government many millions additional capital stock by virtue of the provisions of the subsequent legislation mentioned above.

TIMELY WORDS OF COUNSEL IN THE INTEREST OF PETERBOROUGH BOYS

Written by Mr. Nash Boy's Work Secretary, Y.M.C.A.

The Boy and the School.——This is an exacting age in which we are living. The specialist is the man who succeeds to-day. The boy who would become a successful man must choose some particular line of activity and specialize in it. But before he can do this it is necessary for him to lay a solid foundation and this requires years of patient study. The advancement may be slow and there may be many discouragements but by keeping persistently at it, he will finally emerge from his preparation in the public school, the collegiate and the college, and then by diligently pursuing advanced studies in his chosen profession he will one day stand in his particular line, head and shoulders above his fellows.

This possibility confronts every boy, but along with the possibility also comes very many harmful distractions and demoralizing temptations. It is a lamentable fact that student life is fraught with innumerable pitfalls. The story of ruined lives whose downfall can be traced to vicious habits acquired while attending school is all too familiar. This sad fact is true in connection not only with many colleges and universities but also with some high and even public schools.

For this reason special care should be taken to guard the boys attending our schools against every form of evil peculiar to the student, and perhaps one of the most important safe guards is the teacher whose moral influence upon the lives of his pupils is always elevating. There is probably no other position which carries with it greater opportunities for good than that of the teacher, but other influences must also be brought to bear upon the lives of the school boys if they are all going to be saved to lives of usefulness. The most critical time is between school hours when the boy is not in the school-room. He is unquestionably some place and undoubtedly busy at something, but where is that some place and what is that something? This is of equal importance with the studies he is pursuing and ample provision should be made for the proper employment of all his leisure time.

Education to-day is essential and every boy should be given as much of it as possible but at the same time his other associations and activities should be properly supervised and directed otherwise the very object of his education may be defeated.

Don't Grow Bald, Young Man!

Take Care of Your Hair While You Have Hair to Take Care Of.

It's a safe ten to one bet that the young man who uses PARISIAN Sage as an occasional hair dressing will never grow bald.

There's a reason, of course, and it's a very good and sufficient one.

Dandruff germs cause falling hair and falling hair means thinner hair and in due time baldness.

PARISIAN Sage prevents baldness, by destroying the cause of baldness—the little persistent vociferous dandruff germ.

If you have dandruff or itching scalp it means that dandruff germs are sapping the vitality from the roots of your hair. Get rid of all hair troubles by using PARISIAN Sage.

It is not a dye, mind you, neither does it contain poisonous sugar of lead or even sulphur. It is a scientific preparation that abolishes dandruff, stops falling hair and scalp itch and makes hair grow lustrous and luxuriant.

Many young women as well as men are growing bald and for the same reason.

Use delightful, refreshing PARISIAN Sage; it nourishes the hair roots, if the roots are not dead, and brings to every user a head of glorious hair—radiant and fascinating. Large bottle for 50 cents at drug stores and toilet counters. See that you get PARISIAN Sage.

Wm. Madill guarantees it.

Ex-Ald. Henry Bulmer, for over fifty years in business in Montreal, is dead, aged 92.

THE GOLDEN LION

A Big Stir Upstairs

There's doings going on in the Housefurnishing Department on the fourth floor at Fair's, and no mistake. There's more than one reason for it—

First, the quality if anything, surpasses even the high standard always maintained at Fair's.

Second, the selection is large, the designs unusually catchy and shades especially good.

Third, the chief attraction after all is the smallness of the prices.

— THIS APPLIES TO —

Carpets, in Brussels, Tapestry, Wilton, Axminsters, etc.; Rugs of the same materials as well as of Wool and Union; Linoleums, Oilcloths, Curtains, Curtain Materials, Shades Rollers, Brass Fittings, Furniture Upholstering Goods, etc., etc.,

There's marvels of quality and wonders in prices, and the way they are being grabbed up is a caution, but it proves our statement that the attractions on the third and fourth floor are decidedly worth investigating is correct. If you have a need of this character in the home, just pay a visit to our Mr. Jeffries and his staff in the housefurnishing department and see what he can do for you — There's no obligation to buy on account of this visit.

ROBT. FAIR & CO., Ltd.

SPLENDID SUCCESS OF THE MILLBROOK FAIR

The Attendance Close to 3000 Brought Receipts up to $700 —Fine Showing of Farm Produce and Horses— Turf Events Did Not Materialize

Hundreds of visitors from points in the district and several hundred from Peterborough swelled the attendance at the annual Millbrook Central Exhibition yesterday to close on three thousand, and the receipts for the one day were considerably over $700. Everybody in Millbrook and the surrounding territory who could possibly attend turned out. The weather was perfect, which largely accounted for the auspicious success and gratifying attendance.

T. A. Kelly, the president, and J. N. McGill, secretary-treasurer, were two of the busiest but most cheerful men on theg rounds.

FINE EXHIBITS.

The district in which Millbrook is so charmingly situated is one that richly yields choice farm produce and splendid exhibits of all growths in the vegetable kingdom were displayed in tempting array. The exhibits if anything, were away ahead of previous years.

The cooking and baking exhibits were calculated to cause the mouth of a hungry man to moisten, and some extremely choice samples of culinary effort were nicely displayed.

SHOWING OF HORSES.

But the one grand attraction was the judging of the horses. Millbrook Fair has probably never before shown more handsome specimens of equine grace, speed and spirit.

In the horse judging keen interest centred around the competition for best gentleman's driving horse. Mr James Bushnell, of Omemee, looked like a red ribbon entry with his beautiful sleek mare Nellie. But the judges appeared to think that Mr Nattress and his mare should get first. Mr. Bushnell being awarded third place. This decision was one the spectators could not quite understand.

There was one big disappointing feature in connection with the ex- class. The Millbrook directors [illegible] hibition and that was the absence of the horse trotting events. It happened this way:

There were two races down on the program, one a free-for-all with prize money of $125 and the other a 2.40 event with $50 in prize money hung up. There were six horses in the free-for-all and only one in the 2.40 refused to accede to the request to run one named race and one free-for-all, as suggested by the Peterborough horse owners. The latter argued and quite properly that it would be a piece of nonsense to attempt to run seven horses on a track such as the one at Millbrook and run the risk of a serious smash up or accident. The Peterborough racers also were quite willing to run their chances of pocketing any of the prize money in either class.

The 57th Regimental Band rendered splendid music throughout the afternoon. Their numbers were all bright and vivacious and they created a highly favorable impression.

A very large array of automobiles lined up at the grounds, dozens of local motorists making the run down from here.

In the evening those who remained took in the concert in the town hall where Pearl O'Neill, the popular reader and elocutionist, and Harry K. Bennett, provided a very enjoyable entertainment.

VISITORS FROM TORONTO

Arrangements Completed for the Visit of One Hundred Men From Toronto to Peterboro Next Tuesday —Big Meeting in Knox Church is Open to All Men

At a meeting of representatives from the various Brotherhoods and Young Men's Bible classes of different Peterboro churches held last evening in Knox Church, arrangements for the reception and entertainment of the one hundred members of the Brotherhood movement in Toronto, who will visit Peterboro next Tuesday evening, were completed. The visitors are coming in special cars attached to the evening local, and will hold a meeting in Knox church, with the object of getting in touch with the men of Peterborough. The men of Peterborough are anxious to give them a Toronto welcome and have completed arrangements with the Street Railway Company to furnish special street cars to meet them at the station. On their arrival they will be carried free of charge by these cars around to Knox Church. The Salvation Army band will meet them at the station and accompany them to the church.

The service in the church will be conducted entirely by the men from Toronto. Among the speakers will be Mr. E. A. Breckenridge, the general manager of the Gourlay, Winter & Leeming Co., and the editor of the "Canadian Star," W. G. C. McRae the Vice-Pres. of the Canadian Council of the Brotherhood Movement, J. B. Dingwall, Rev. H. A. McPherson, of Chalmers church, and Rev. J. A. Stewart, the president of the Canadian Brotherhood Movement.

In England, the men of the Brotherhood have taken up social and economic questions and their votes are doing much to shape the legislation in favor of the workng classes which is such a feature in British legislation to-day. A number of the men who will come from Toronto next Tuesday are men who have been in touch with the Brotherhood work in Great Britain. It is possible that this subject will receive attention at the hands of some of the speakers next Tuesday.

After the meeting a banquet will be tendered the visitors in Knox church Sunday school hall. Owing to lack of accommodation only two or three men from each of the churches in Peterboro co-operating in the meeting will be able to attend this gathering, but an effort will be made to send the visitors away with the feeling that Peterborough knows how to entertain its guests. The ladies in the different Peterboro churches are co-operating in furnishing viands for this occasion.

The meeting will be free of charge and is open to all men. It may be well for those who desire to attend to reach the church early, as it is possible that the accommodation will be taxed.

PETERBORO GETS CANADIAN FACTORY OF DE LAVAL DAIRY SUPPLY CO. OF NEW YORK

Agreement and Guarantee Bond Arrived in City This Morning---Company Will Erect Factory 112 ft. x 400 ft. at Corner of Park and Landsdown Streets, and Employ 50 Hands by June 1913---Preliminary Operations Already Commenced.

The agreement in which the De Laval Dairy Supply Company, of New York, erects a factory in Peterboro reached the City Clerk this morning and the local newspapers are in a position to make a reliable statement to the citizens.

This agreement was taken to New York, last week for execution by the Company, and with it was forwarded to Peterboro, a guarantee company bond to carry out their part of the rangement.

HAT THE COMPANY AGREES TO DO

he company agrees to erect a ilding at once, 112 ftx400 feet, ry construction of concrete and move their two Canadian factories at present at St. John's N.B., Montreal, together with the Canau Head Offices, to Peterboro to have invested in the local tory by June 1, 1913, at least .0 The company agrees to have hands employed the first year 75 hands the second year. No ale help is required.

contruction engineer is expected to arrive in Peterboro the first next week. Already material is being conveyed to the site of the building, which is at the corner of Park and Lansdowne streets, east of the G. T. R. Port Hope line and on the west side of Park street. Mr. Mitchell has been given the contract for the supply of 1000 yards of gravel, while the Peterboro Lumber Company are supplying lumber.

A FREE SITE

To the company, the city gives a free site and exemption of taxes except school and local improvement, for ten years, and pays the expenses of moving the plants from St. John's and Montreal to Peterboro up to $3,500.

The Canadian Company is a subsiding of the De Laval Dairy Supply Company of New York and has an authorized capital of $500,000. The by-law for the ratepayers to pass on will be submitted at once. The De Laval Dairy Supply Company is one of the wealthy concerns of the United States. Their principal factory is at Ploughkeepsie, N.Y., where operations are carried on on a very large scale. This company is the pioneer in the cream separator business and De Laval separators are known throughout the continent. Dairy machinery of various kinds is manufactured and these include silos, now made at St. John's. At the two Canadian factories between 75 and 80 hands are employed.

Negotiations with the company commenced in August and the general manager of the Canadian company, Mr. W. R. Breyfogle, came here on September 13. He was then making a tour of Canadian towns and cities, with a view to selecting sites. Peterborough evidently impressed him and negotiations continued. He made another visit here on September 25 and he remained for several days, when the arrangements for the company operating here, were completed. There is a continuous growing demand for the products of their manufacture, and there seems to be no doubt but that the concern will be a growing one. Plans have been laid out, as to how the company will expect to erect further buildings.
